HISTORY

THE DECLINE AND FALL

OF THE

ROMAN EMPIRE.

BBON, ESQ. BY EDWARD

> A NEW EDITION, IN TWELVE VOLUMES.

> > VOL. XII.

LONDON

Printed for T. Codell and W. Derres; P. C. and J. Rivington; J. Carbell; J. Nunn; Longoun, Hunt, Reva, Chune, and Brown; John Richardson; J. M. Ruchardson, Jeffery and Son; J. and A. Arch; J. and W. J. M. Ruchardson, Jeffery and Son; J. and A. Arch; J. and W. Clarke; Black and Co. S. Eugher; W. Streen, Hatchard and Son; W. Ginger, J. Mavrenn; R. Schuley; Baldwin, Cradock, and Soy; J. Asyene; T. Humilton, J. Both, J. Beder, H. Samoder; G. Greenland; Agrence; Humilton, J. Both, J. Deer, H. Samoder; G. Greenland; Opt and Co. G. and W. B. Whittiaker; Terlur and Heavy; Simply, and Marshall; Radwell and Marrin; C. Tojac, Loses Shédsan; W. Wood; Lidyd and Son, and G. Mackue; and J. Parker, at Ondera; and Farthaun and Anderson, Edinburgh.

1820.

Appr. No.2.5608 . Cate...21 | 12 | 99

TABLE OF CONTENTS

OF THE TWELFTH VOLUME.

CHAP, LXV.

Elevation of Timour or Tunes lane to the Throne of Samarcand, —Hist conjugate in Person, Georgia, Tartary, Russia, India, Seria, and Amatota—Hist Turkish War.—Defeat and Capteriary of Engages,—Death of Temour.—Civil War of the Nowell Engages.—Restoration of the Turkish Monarchy by Main wet the First.—Siege of Constantinople by Amarath it is ond.

D				Pag
H commond Timore	, or 7	'umerlane	-
(30), (370) His first Adve	enture	s -	_
1 To He ascends the Thic	me of	Zagatai	-
6.70-1400. His Conquest	ts	•	-	ıb
13 (0-1503) L Of Persia		~~~	-	íb
1570 1583 H. Of Turkes	tan	-	-	(
18001806, Of Kipzak, R	nssia,	ar.	-	14
1398, 1499 III Of Hindos		-	-	13
1400. His War against Sul	tan Ba	ıjazet	-	16
Tenour invades Sym	a	•	-	20
Sacks Aleppo	-	-		21
1401. Damascus			-	.23
And Bagdad		-	-	24
1402. Invades Anatolia	_	-		25

CONTENTS,
A. D.		Page
Battle of Angora -	-	26
Defeat and Captivity of Bajaset	-	24
The Story of his Iron Cage disproved by	the	3.4
Persian Historian of Timour		30
Attested, 1. by the French -	-	32
- 2. by the Italians -	-	33
, 3. by the Arab-	-	34
1. by the Greeks .		35.
, 5. by the Turks -		ıb '
Probable Conclusion -	-	ıδ.
1403. Death of Bajazet -	-	36
Term of the Conquests of Timour		ıb.
1404, 1405. His Trumph at Samarcand	-	40
1405. His Death on the Road to China		42
Character and Ments of Timour -	-	ib.
1403-1421. Civil Wars of the Sons of Bajazet		47
. I. Mustapha	•	ib.
2. Isa		48
1403-1110. 3. Soliman -		49
1410. 4. Mousa		ib.
1413-1421, 5. Mahomet I	•	50
1421-1451. Reign of Amurath II.	-	51
1421. Re-union of the Ottoman Empire	-	ıb.
1402-1425. State of the Greek Empire		53
1422. Siege of Constantinople by Amurath II.	-	56
1425-1448. The Emperor John Palæologus II.		57
Hereditary Succession and Merit of the Ott	omans	ıb.
Education and Discipline of the Turks	-	3B
Invention and Use of Gunpowder	-	62

CONTENTS. via

CHAP. LXVI.

Application of the Eastern	-		•
the West, of John the Fir	st, Ma	nuel, and	John the Se	cond
Palwologus.—Union of the	he Greek	k and Lati	n Churches,	pro moted by the Council of B	asrl, an	d conclude	d at Ferrar	a an
FlorenceState of Later	rature a	t Constan	tinopleIt	s Re vival in Italy by the Gree	k Fugit	res.—Cu	rosity and	Emu Tuly wef the Latins.
Λ.D				Dan
	A		to Dona	Pag
1339. Embassy of the You Benedict XII.	nger A	maromeus	to rope	6.
The Arguments for a	Concad	- la and Ila	- !.m	66
1348. Negociation of Canta				69
1355. Treaty of John Pala				7:
1309. Visit of John Palæole				7
1370, His Return to Const.			at Rome	71
• Visit of the Emperor			•	ib
1400. To the Court of Fran			. •
Of England	iice	-	•	76
1402. His Return to Greece	. . .	•	-	80
Greek Knowledge ar		ristian.	-	8. ib
Of Germany	ia ivesci	i ipitions •	•
Of France	-	-	•	89 94
Of England	-	•	•	_
14021417, Indifference of	.f Man.	- سارمسمسا	a tha Int	84
1417—1425. His Negočiati		. towaru	s the Latin
 His private Motives 	0113	-	•	87 88
His Death		-	•
1425—1437. Zeal of John	Dolasel	11	•	•
Corruption of the Lat			•	90
1377—1429. Schism	III CIIUI	CH	•	الكت وأن
1409. Council of Pisa	-	•	-
1414-1418. Of Constance	-	•	•	ıb.
1414-1418. Of Constance 1431-1443. Of Basil		•	•	1b
	- 	- 137	•	93
Their Opposition to F	_		•	ıh,
1434-1437. Negociations			. C. III.	94
. 437. John Palæologus eml	Jarka ID	ruc robe.	s Games	95

CONTENTS.
A. D.		Pa
1438. His triumphal Entry at Venice		10
into Ferrara	-	10
1438, 1439. Council of the Greeks and Latins	at Ferr	ara 🧳
and Florence -	-	10
Negociations with the Greeks	-	10
1438. Eugenius depoved at Basil -		11
Re-union of the Greeks at Florence	-	il
1440. Their Return to Constantinople	-	11
1449. Final Peace of the Church -	٠.	1)
1300-1403. State of the Greek Language at	Constar	- :
tinople	-	ارا
Comparison of the Greeks and Latins		11
Revival of the Greek Learning in Italy		11
1930. Lessons of Barlaam -	-	12
1339-1374. Studies of Petrarch -		12
1360. Of Buccace	•	12
1360-1363. Leo Pilatus, first Greek Professo	r at Flo)- rence, and in the West -	-	12
1390-1415. Foundation of the Greek Langua	ge in I	taly
by Manuel Chrysoloras -	•	12
1400-1500. The Greeks in Italy -		12
Cardinal Bessarion, &c.		12
Their Fault, and Merits -	-	130
The Platonic Philosophy -	-	13:
Emulation and Progress of the Latins	-	134
1447-1455. Nicholas V	-	ıb
1428-1402. Cosmo and Lorenzo of Medici.		13.
Hee and Abuse of ancient Learning		300

CONTENTS.

ix

CHAP, LXVII.

Schism of the Greeks and Latins	Reign and	Charac	ter of Amurath the SecondCrusade of	Ladislaus I	King of	Hun-garyHis Defeut and DeathJ	ohn Huniad	les.—Sc	anderbegConstantine Palaologus, last · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·			Page
Comparison of Rome and Cons	tantinople	-	141
144 -1148. The Greek Schism at	ter the Cou	ncil of
Florence -	-	-	115
Zeal of the Orientals and Rus	ssians		148
1421-1451. Reign and Character	of Amurath	II.	150
1442-1411. His double Abdication		-	152
1443. Eugenius forms a League aga	unst the Ti	urks	154
Ladislaus, King of Poland and			9 against them -		-	157
The Turkish Pcace	-		158
1444. Violation of the Peace			ıb.
Battle of Warna	-		161
Death of Ladislaus	-	-	163
The Cardinal Julian	••	-	164
John Corvinus Huniades		-	165
1456. His Defence of Belgrade, and	Death	-	167
1404-1413. Buth and Education of		eg, Prin	ace
ot Albania -		•	168
1443. His Revolt from the Turks	-		171
His Valour		-	172
1407. And Death	-		174
1448-1453. Constantine, the last	of the Kon	mən cr	•
Greek Emperors	_		175
1450-1452. Embassies of Phranza	•		177
State of the Byzantine Court		_ •	180

CONTENTS.

I

CHAP. LXVIII.

Reign and Character of Mahomet to and final Conquest of Constantino	he Second.	_Siege, A	ssuult, eath of Constantine Paleologus,-Servite	ude of the (Greeks I	rtine:
tion of the Roman Empire in the EuropeConquests and Death of
A.D.		,	• Page
Character of Mahomet II.		:	182
1451—1481. His Reign	•	•	185
1451. Hostile Intentions of Maho	-	-
1452. He builds a Fortress on the		. •	187 191
The Turkish War	Dosbnora	• -
1452, 1453. Preparations for the S	- naga al Ca	-	193
The Great Cannon of Maho		ustantinop	197
1453. Mahomet II. forms the Sieg		-
Forces of the Turks	e or const	ammopie	200 202
of the Greeks	•	•	202
1452. False Union of the Two Ch	• ••••••	•
Obstinacy and Fanaticism of		•	205
▼			206
1453. Siege of Constantinople by I Attack and Defence	Manoine?	11.	209
	Chi	-	212
Succour and Victory of four		-	214
Mahomet transports his Nav	y over La	1110	219
Distress of the City			221
Preparations of the Turks for	_
Last Farewel of the Empero	r and the	Giceks	224
The general Assault			226
Death of the Emperor Cons	tantine Pa	læologus	231
-Loss of the City and Empire			ıb.
The Turks enter and pillage	Constantii	10ble	232
Captivity of the Greeks	•	-	233
Amount of the Spoil	-	•	236
Mahomet II. visits the City,	St. Sophi	ia, the
Palace, &c.	-	-	239
His Behaviour to the Greeks			241
He re-peoples and adorns Co	onstantino	ple	243.

A D.			l'age
 Extinction of the Imper 	rial Families of	Comne	nus
∖ and Palæologus	-	-	246
1 100, Loss of the Morea	-	-	248
1401. of Trebizond	-	-	249
1453. Grief and Terror of Eu	rope	-	251
1481. Death of Mahomet II.		~	254
СНАР.	LXIX.
State of Rome from the Twelfth	CenturyTemp	on al Di	onunion of the Popes Seditions of	the City Polit	ical H	eresy of
Arnold of BresciaResto	ration of the I	Republic	c.—The Schat as Pride of the Roi	nans Their W	ars.—I	hey are deprixed of the Election and.	Presence of the P	opes, wh	lo retire to ArignonThe Jubilee	Noble Families of	Rome.	-Feud of the Colonna and Ursmi.
A,D.			Page.
1100-1500. State and Revolu	tions of Rome		250
800-1100. The French and	the German En	nperors	of
· Rome -	-	٠.	258
Authority of the Popes	in Rome	-	260
From Affection -	•		ıb.
Right -	_	-	201
Virtue -	-	-	ib.
Benefits -	-		262
luconstancy of Supersti	tion -	٠.,٠	263
Seditions of Rome again	st the Popes		264
1086-1305. Successors of Gre	egory VIII .	-	266
1090-1118. Paschal II	-		267
1118, 1119, Gelasius II	-		ib.
1114, 1145. Lucius II.	-		269
1181-1185, Lucius III.	-	•	ib.
1119-1124, Calistus II	-	-	ib,
110-1143. Innocent II	•		ıb.
Character of the Roman	s by St. Bernard	i -	270
1140 Political Horacy of Arms	Id of Breesin		041

CONTENTS.
A. D		Pag
1144-1154. He exhorts the Romans t	o restore t	ne
Republic-		2.1
1155. His Execution -		.27
1114. Restoration of the Senate		27
The Capitol		28
The Coin	-	28
The Præfect of the City .		28
Number and Choice of the Senate		28
The Office of Senator -	`-	28
1252-1258, Brancalcone -		รับธ
1265-1278, Charles of Anjou -		28
1281. Pope Martin IV	-	28
1928-The Emperor Lewis of Bavaria		it
Addresses of Rome to the Empere	119 -	29
1144. Conrad III		11
1155. Frederic I		20
Wars of the Romans against the n	eighbourin	g
Cities	•	29
1167. Battle of Tusculum -		29
1234 of Viterbu -	-	29
The Election of the Popes -		il
1179. Right of the Cardinals established I	y Alexand	ei III,308
1274. Institution of the Couclave by Gr	egory X.	30
Absence of the Popes from Rome		30
1201-1303. Boniface VIII.	-	30
1309. Translation of the Holy See to Av	ignon	30
1300. Institution of the Jubilee, or Holy	Year	310
1350. The Second Jubilee -	-	$1:
The Nobles or Barons of Rome	-	31:
Family of Leo the Jew -	-	31:
The Colomia	-	310
And Ursini -	-	32
Their hereditary Fends	_	20

CONTENTS. xin

CHAP. LXX.

•
Character and Coronation of Petrare	h.—Resto	ration c	t the Freedom and Government of Rome b	y the Trib	une Riei	ı:
His Virtues and Vices, his Expulsi of the Popes from ArignonGreat	Schism o	f the W	rst.
Re-union of the Latin Church L Dwesty-Statutes of Rome Final siastical State.		•
A. D			Parc
1304-1371 Petrarch -	_	_	321
1341. His poetic Coronation at Rome		-	328
Buth, Character, and patriotic 1	Justime nt	Rionzi	331
1347. He assumes the Government of	Rome		334
With the Title and Office of Tit		_	336
Laws of the Good Estate	-	_	ıb.
Freedom and Prosperity of the	Roman Ri	emblie	339
The Tribune is respected in Ita	lv. &c.		342
And celebrated by Petrarch	.,,	_	343
His Vices and Follies		_	314
The Pomp of his Knighthood	•	_	340
And Coronation		_	348
Fear and Hatred of the Nobles	of Rome		549
They oppose Rienzi in Arms	•		351
Defeat and Death of the Colour	na	_	352
Fall and Flight of the Tribune F			354
1347-1354. Revolutions of Rome		_	356
Adventures of Rienzi		_	357
1351. A Prisoner at Avignon	· •	· -	338
1354. Rienzi, Senator of Rome		_	359
His Death		_	362
1355, Petrarch invites and up braids th	e Emper	or Charle
IV.	- -	-	ıb.
· · • He solicits the Popes of Avigno	n to fix th	er Regi
dence at Rome		_	363
1367-1370. Return of Urban V.	• *	_	365
1377. Final Return of Gregory XI.		_	ib.
1279 His Dooth			067

xiv CONTENTS.

	CONTENT	o.
A. D.				Page
Election of Urban	n VL	-	-	368
Election of Cleme	-	űb.
1378-1418. Great Sch	-	137 €
Calamities of Roi	-	ib.
1302-1407. Negociati	ons for Peac	e and U	nion	372
1409. Conneil of Pisa		•	-	375
1414-1418. Council o	f Constance	-	-	ib.
Election of Mart	m V.	-	•	377
1417. Martin V.	-	-	• '	3.
1131. Eugenrus IV.	-	-	-	ւն.
1447, Nicholas V.	-	-	-	ıb.
1434. Last Revolt of Re		-	•	ıb.
1452. Last Coronation of	of a German I	Emperor	, Frederic	III,379
The Statutes and	Governmen	tot Ron	nc	380
1453, Conspiracy of Po	rcai o	-	-	383
Last Disorders of	the Nobles			380
1500. The Popes acqui	re the absolu	ite Domi	mon of Re	ine 3 87
The Ecclesiastics		nt	-	391
1555-1590, Sixtus V.	-	-	-	392
	CHAP. LXX	XI.
Prospect of the Ruins of	Rome in the	Fitieest	h Century	-Four
Causes of Decay an	d Destruction	n.—Era	male of th	e Coleseum,—Renovation of Work	of the City.	Conclu	sion of th	e whole
А. Д.				Page
1430. View and Disco	urse of Pogu	nus fron	the Capi	to-line Hill	_	-	- *	395
His Description	of the Ruins	:	-	397
Gradual Decay			-	348
Four Causes of I			-	4()()
I. The Injuries o			-	.ن.
Hurricanes and l			-	401
Fires		-	-	ıb,
Inundations	-	-	-	4()5

CONTENTS.	XY

A.D.						Page
1	I. The hostile !	Attacks o	ot the	Barba	rians an	d
	Christians ·	-		-		405
4	II. The Use and	d Abuse	of the	Mater	rials	408
I	V. The Domesti	ic. Quarr	el• of	the Ro	mans	413
1	The Coliseum oi	- Amphi	theatr	e of Tu	tus	418
	Sames of Rome			-	-	420
1332.	A Bull-Feast in	the Coli	seum		-	421
1	njuries	-		-	-	423
1	And Consecratio	n of the	Colise	ומווי	-	425
I	gnorance and E	Barbaiisn	n of th	e Rom	ians	ib
1420,]	Restoration and	Orname	nts of	the Ca	v	428
I	inal Conclusion	ı -		-	-	431

THE

HISTORY

OF

THE DECLINE AND FALL

OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

CHAP LXV.

Elevation of Timour or Tamerlane to the Throne of Samarcand. — His Conquests in Persia, Georgiu, Tartury, Russia, India, Syria, and Anatolia. — His Turkish War. — Defeat and Capticity of Bajazet. — Death of Timour. — Civil War of the Sons of Bajazet. — Restoration of the Turkish Monarchy by Mahomet the First.—Siege of Constantinople by Amurath the Second.

THE conquest and monarchy of the world was the first object of the ambition of Timour. To LNV. live in the memory and esteem of future ages, Pistones was the second wish of his magnanimous spirit. of Timour, or All the civil and military transactions of his Timourlain reign were diligently recorded in the journals of VOL. XII.

CHAP, his secretaries1: the authentic narrative was revised by the persons best informed of each particular transaction; and it is believed in the empire and family of Timour, that the monarch himself composed the commentaries2 of his life, and the institutions of his government. But these cares were ineffectual for the preservation of his fame, and these precious memorials in the Mogul or Persian language were concealed from the world, or, at least, from the knowledge of Europe.

> 1 These journals were communicated to Sherefeddin, or Cherefeddin Ah, a native of Yezd, who composed in the Persian language a history of Timour Beg, which has been translated into French by M. Petis de la Croix (Paris, 1722, in 4 vols. 12mo.) and has always been my faithful guide. His geography and chronology are wonderfully accurate, and he may be trusted for public facts, though he servilely praises the virtue and fortune of the hero-Tunour's attention to procure intelligence from his own and foreign countries, may be seen in the Institutions, p. 215, 217-349-351.

2 These Commentaries are yet unknown in Europe: but Mr. White gives some hope that they may be imported and translated by his friend Major Davy, who had read in the East this "minute " and faithful narrative of an interesting and eventful period."

- 3 I am ignorant whether the original institution, in the Turkish or Mogul language, be still extant. The Persic version, with an English translation, and most valuable index, was published (Oxford, 1783, in 460 by the joint labours of Major Days, and Mr. White the Arabic professor - This work has been since translated from the Persic into French (Paris, 1787) by Mr. Langles, a learned Grientalist, who has added the life of Timour, and many curious Botes.
- 4 Shaw Allum, the present Mogul, reads, values, but cannot inutate, the institutions of his great ancestor. The English translator relies on their internal evidence, but if any suspicious should arise of fraud and fiction, they will not be dispelled by Major Davy's letter. The Orientals have never cultivated the art of criticism; the patronage of a prince, less honourable perhaps, is ..ot less lucrative than that of a bookseller; nor can it be deemed incredible, that a Persian, the real author, should renounce the credit, to raise the value and price, of the work.

nations which he vanquished exercised a base and impotent revenge; and ignorance has long repeated the tale of calumny, which had disfigured the birth and character, the person, and even the name, of Tamerlane. Yet his real merit would be enhanced, rather than debased, by the elevation of a peasant to the throne of Asia; nor can his lameness be a theme of reproach, unless he had the weakness to blush at a natural, or perhaps an honourable, infirmity.

In the eyes of the Moguls, who held the indefeasible succession of the house of Zingis, he was doubtless a rebel subject; yet he sprang from the noble tribe of Berlass: his fifth ancestor, Carashar Nevian, had been the vizir of Zagatai, in his new realm of Transoxiana; and in the ascent of some generations, the branch of Timour is confounded, at least by the females, with the Impe-

5 The original of the tale is found in the following work, which is much estremed for its florid elegance of style. Ahmedis Arabsaade (Ahmed Ebn Arabshah) Vita et Rerum gestarum Timuri. Andree et Latine Edidit Samuel Henricus Manger. Françqueræ, 1707, 2 tom in 4to. This Syrian author is ever a malicious, and often an ignorant, enemy: the very titles of his chapters are injurious, as how the wicked, as how the impious, as how the viper, &c. The copious article of Timur, in Bibliothéque Orientale, is of a mixed nature, as D'Herbelot indifferently draws his materials (p 877—888) from Khondemir, Ebn Schounah, and the Lebtarikh. 6 Demir or Timour signifies, in the Turkish language, Iron; and Beg is the appellation of a ford or prince. By the change of a corruption confounds the two words in the name of Tamerlane.

7 After relating some false and foolish tales of Timour Lenc, Arabshad is compelled to speak truth, and to own him for a kinsman of Zingis, per mulieres (as he peevishly adds) laqueos Satanæ (pars i. c. i. p. 25.) The testimony of Abulghazi Khan (P ii. c. 5.

P. v. c. 4.) is clear, unquestionable, and decivive.

letteroraccent, it is changed into Lone or Lame; and an European CHAP. rial stem". He was born forty miles to the south of Samarcand, in the village of Sebzar, in the fruitful territory of Cash, of which his fathers were the hereditary chiefs, as well as of a toman of ten thousand horse". His birth 10 was cast on one of those periods of anarchy which announce the fall of the Asiatic dynasties, and open a new field to adventurous ambition. The khans of Za, gatai were extinct; the emirs aspired to independence; and their domestic feuds could only be suspended by the conquest and tyranny of the khans of Kashgar, who, with an army of Getes or Calmucks11, invaded the Transoxian kingdom. From the twelfth year of his age, Timour had entered the field of action; in the twenty-fifth, he

His first adventures, A D 1361 -1370.

8 According to one of the pedigrees, the fourth ancestor of Zingis, and the ninth of Timour, were brothers: and they agreed, that the posterity of the elder should succeed to the dignity of khan, and that the descendants of the younger should fill the office of their minister and general. This tradition was at least convenient to justify the first steps of Timour's ambition (Institutions, p. 24, 25, from the MS. fragments of Timour's History).

9 See the preface of Sherefeddin, and Abulfeda's Geography (Chorasmiæ, &c. Descriptio, p. 60, 61.), in the mid volume of Hudson's Minor Greek Geographers.

10 See his nauvity in Dr. Hyde (Syntagma Disseriat, tom. ii. p. 466.), as it was cast by the astrologers of his grandson Ulugh Beg. He was born, A. D. 1336, April 9, 110 57'. P. M. lat. 36. I know not whether they can prove the great conjunction of the planets from whence, like other conquerors and prophets, Timour derived the surname of Saheb Keran, or master of the conjunctions (Bibhot Orient. p. 878.).

11 In the Institutions of Timour, these subjects of the khan of Kashgar are most improperly styled Ouzbegs, or Uzbeks, a name which belongs to another branch and country of Tartars Abulghazi, P. v. c. 5. P. vii. c. 5.). Could I be sure that this word is in the Turkish original, I would boldly pronounce, that the Institutions were framed a century after the death of Timour, since the establishment of the Uzbeks in Transcristood forth as the deliverer of his country; and the eyes and wishes of the people were turned towards an hero who suffered in their cause. chiefs of the law and of the army had pledged their salvation to support him with their lives and fortunes; but in the hour of danger they were silent and afraid; and, after waiting seven days on the hills of Samarcand, he retreated to the desert with only sixty horsemen. The fugitives were overtaken by a thousand Getes, whom he repulsed with incredible slaughter, and his enemies were forced to exclaim. "Timour is a wonderful man: fortune " and the divine favour are with him." this bloody action his own followers were reduced. to ten, a number which was soon diminished by the desertion of three Carizmians. He wandered in the desert with his wife, seven companions, and four horses; and sixty-two days was he plunged in a loathsome dungeon, from whence he escaped by his own courage, and the remorse of the oppressor. After swimming the broad and rapid stream of the Jihoon, or Oxus, he led, during some months, the life of a vagrant and outlaw, on the borders of the adjacent states. But his fame shone brighter in adversity; he learned to distinguish the friends of his person, the associates of his fortune, and to apply the various characters of men for their advantage, and above all, for his own. On his return to his native country, Timour was successively joined by the parties of his confederates, who anxiously sought him in the desert; nor can I refuse to describe, in his pathetic simplicity, one of their fortunate encounters. He presented himself as a guide to three chiefs, who were at the head of seventy horse. "When their eyes fell upon me," says Timour, " they were overwhelmed with joy; and " they alighted from their horses; and they came " and kneeled; and they kissed my stirrup. I also " came down from my horse, and took each of them " in my arms. And I put my turban on the head " of the first chief; and my girdle, rich in jewels " and wrought with gold, I bound on the loins of " the second; and the third, I clothed in my own " coat. And they wept, and I wept also; and the " hour of prayer was arrived, and we prayed. And " we mounted our horses, and came to my dwell-"ing; and I collected my people, and made a " feast." His trusty bands were soon increased by the bravest of the tribes; he led them against a superior foe; and, after some vicissitudes of war, the Getes were finally driven from the kingdom of Transoxiana. He had done much for his own glory; but much remained to be done, much art to be exerted, and some blood to be spilt, before he could teach his equals to obey him as their The birth and power of emir Houssein compelled him to accept a vicious and unworthy colleague, whose sister was the best beloved of his wives. Their union was short and jealous; but the policy of Timour, in their frequent quarrels, exposed his rival to the reproach of injustice and perfidy; and, after a final defeat, Houssein was slain by some sagacious friends, who presumed, for the last time, to disobey the commands of their lord. At the age of thirty-four 12, and in a general diet or couroultai, he was invested with CHAP. Imperial command, but he affected to revere the LXV. house of Zingis; and while the emir Timour He asreigned over Zagatai and the East, a nominal throne of khan served as a private officer in the armies of Zagatai, his servant. A fertile kingdom, five hundred April. miles in length and in breadth, might have satisfied the ambition of a subject; but Timour aspired to the dominion of the world; and before his death, the crown of Zagatai was one of the twenty-seven crowns which he had placed on his head. Without expatiating on the victories of thirtyfive campaigns; without describing the lines of march which he repeatedly traced over the continent of Asia; I shall briefly represent his conquests in, I. Persia, U. Tartary, and, III. India", and from thence proceed to the more interesting narrative of his Ottoman war.

CHAP. LXV.

¹⁰ The 1st book of Sherefeddin is employed on the private life of the hero; and he himself, or his secretary (Institutions,

I. For every war, a motive of safety or revenge, His conof honour or zeal, of right or convenience, may A.D 1370 be readily found in the jurisprudence of con- 1400 l. Of Perquerors. No sooner had Timour re-united to the sia, patrimony of Zagatai the dependent countries of A.D 1360 –1393. Carizme and Candahar, than he turned his eyes towards the kingdoms of Iran or Persia. From the Oxus to the Tigris, that extensive country was left without a lawful sovereign since the death of Abousaid, the last of the descendants of the

p. 3-77.), enlarges with pleasure on the thirteen designs and enterprises which most truly constitute his personal merit. It even shines through the dark colouring of Arabshah, p. i. c. 1-12. The conquests of Persia, Tartary, and India, are represented on the iid and iiid books of Sherefeddin, and by Arabshah, c. 12-*55. Consult the excellent Indexes to the Institutions.

LXV.

CHAP, great Holacou. Peace and justice had been banished from the land above forty years; and the Mogul invader might seem to listen to the cries of an oppressed people. Their petty tyrants might have opposed him with confederate arms: they separately stood, and successively fell; and the difference of their fate was only marked by the promptitude of submission, or the obstinacy of resistance. Ibrahim, prince of Shirwan or Albar's, kissed the footstool of the Imperial threne. His peace-offerings of silks, horses, and jewels, were composed, according to the Tartar fashion, each article of nine pieces; but a critical spectator observed, that there were only eight slaves. " myself am the ninth," replied Ibrahim, who was prepared for the remark; and his flattery was rewarded by the smile of Timour 11. Shah Mansour, prince of Fars, or the proper Persia, was one of the least powerful, but most dangerous, of his enemies. In a battle under the walls of Shiraz, he broke, with three or four thousand soldiers. the coul or main-body of thirty thousand horse, where the emperor fought in person. No more than fourteen or fifteen guards remained near the standard of Timour: he stood firm as a rock, and received on his helmet two weighty strokes of a scymetar 15: the Moguls rallied; the head of ¹⁵ According to Arabshah (P 1 c 28, p. 183 the roward Tunour ran away to his tent, and hid himself from the pursue of Shah Mansour under the women's garments Perhaps Sherefeddia (l. iii. c. 25.) has magnified his contage.

¹⁴ The reverence of the Tartars for the mysterious number of nine is declared by Abulghazi Khan, who, for that reason, divides his Genealogical History into nine parts.

Mansour was thrown at his feet; and he declared his esteem of the valour of a foe, by extirpating all the males of so intrepid a race. From Shiraz, his troops advanced to the Persian gulf; and the richness and weakness of Ormuz 16 were displayed in an annual tribute of six hundred thousand dinars of gold. Bagdad was no longer the city of peace, the seat of the caliphs: but the noblest conquest of Houlacou could not be overlooked by his ambitious successor.. The whole course of the Tignis and Euphrates, from the mouth to the sources of those rivers, was reduced to his obedience: he entered Edessa; and the Turkmans of the black sheep were chastised for the sacrilegious pillage of a caravan of Mecca. In the mountains of Georgia, the native Christians still braved the law and the sword of Mahomet; by three expeditions he obtained the merit of the gazic, or holy war; and the prince of Teflis became his proselyte and friend.

II. A just retaliation might be urged for the Turkestan invasion of Turkestan, or the eastern Tartary, A.D 1370

10 The history of Ormi 2 is not unlike that of Tyre. The old city, on the comment, was destroyed by the Tartais, and renewed in a neighbouring island without fresh water or vegetation. The kings of Ormuz, rich in the Indian trade and the pearl fishery. possessed large territories both in Persia and Arabia; but they were at first the imbutance of the sultans of Kerman, and at last were delivered (A. D. 1505) by the Portuguese tyrants from the tyranny of their own vizirs (Marco Polo, Li c. 15, 16 fol 7, 8 Abulteda, Geograph tabul, xr p. 201, 262 an original Chronicle of Ormuz, in Texents, or Stevens' History of Persia, p. 370-416, and the Itingratics inserted in the 1st volume of Ramusio, of Ludovico Bathema (1503), fol 107 of Andrea Corsali (1517), fol. 202, 203. and of Odoardo Barbessa (m 1516), fol. 315-318.).

CHAP. LXV

CHAP. LXV.

The dignity of Timour could not endure the impunity of the Getes; he passed the Sihoon, subdued the kingdom of Kashgar, and marched seven times into the heart of their country. His most distant camp was two months journey, or four hundred and eighty leagues to the north-east of Samarcand; and his emirs, who traversed the river Irtish, engraved in the forests of Siberia a rude memorial of their exploits. The conquest of Kipzak, or the western Tartary 17, was founded on the double motive of aiding the distressed, and chastising the ungrateful. Toctamish, a fugitive prince, was entertained and protected in his court: the ambassadors of Auruss Khan were dismissed with an haughty denial, and followed on the same day by the armies of Zagatai; and their success established Toctamish in the Mogul empire of the North. But, after a reign of ten years, the new khan forgot the merits and the strength of his benefactor; the base usurper, as he deemed him, of the sacred rights of the house of Zingis. Through the gates of Derbend, he entered Persia at the head of ninety thousand horse: with the innumerable forces of Kipzak, Bulgaria, Circassia, and Russia, he passed the Sihoon, burnt the palaces of Timour, and compelled him, amidst the winter snows, to contend for Samarcand and his life. of Kupzak, After a mild expostulation, and a glorious victory, the emperor resolved on revenge: and by the east, and the west, of the Caspian, and the Volga, he

λī A.D 1 90 -1390

¹⁷ Arabshah had travelled into Kipzak, and acquired a Singular knowledge of the geography, cities, and revolutions, of that northern region (P. i. c. 45-49)

twice invaded Kipzak with such mighty powers, that thirteen miles were measured from his right to his left wing. In a march of five months, they rarely beheld the footsteps of man; and their daily subsistence was often trusted to the fortune of the At length the armies encountered each other; but the treachery of the standard-bearer, who, in the heat of action, reversed the Imperial standard of Kipzak, determined the victory of the Zagatais; and Toctamish (I speak the language of the Institutions) gave the tribe of Toushi to the wind of desolation 15. He fled to the Christian duke of Lithuania; again returned to the banks of the Volga; and, after fifteen battles with a domestic rival, at last perished in the wilds of Siberia. The pursuit of a flying enemy carried Timour into the tributary provinces of Russia: a duke of the reigning family was made prisoner amidst the ruins of his capital; and Yeletz, by the pride and ignorance of the Orientals, might easily be confounded with the genuine metropolis of the nation. Moscow trembled at the approach of the Tartar, and the resistance would have been feeble, since the hopes of the Russians were placed in a miraculous image of the Virgin, to whose protection they ascribed the casual and voluntary retreat of the conqueror. Ambition and prudence recalled him to the South, the desolate country was exhausted, and the Mogul soldiers were enriched

In muttons of Timour, p. 123, 125. Mr. White, the editor, bestews some animadversion on the superficial account of Sherr-idin (I. ni. c. 12, 13, 14.), who was ignorant of the designs of Imour, and the true springs of action.

CHAP. with an immense spoil of precious furs, of linen of_ Antioch 10, and of ingots of gold and silver 20. On the banks of the Don, or Tanais, he received an humble deputation from the consuls and merchants of Egypt 1. Venice, Genoa, Catalonia, and Biscay, who occupied the commerce and city of Tana, or Azoph, at the mouth of the river. They offered their gifts, admired his magnificence, and trusted his royal word. But the peaceful visit of an emir, who explored the state of the magazines and harbour, was speedily followed by the destructive presence of the Tartars. The city was reduced to ashes; the Moslems were pillaged and dismissed; but all the Christians, who had not fled to their ships, were condemned either to death or slavery ". Revenge prompted him to burn the cities of Serai > 19 The furs of Russia are more credible than the ingots. But the linen of Antioch has never been famous: and Antioch was in ruins. I suspect that it was some manufacture of Europe, which the Hanse merchants'had imported by the way of Novogorod.

> 20 M. Levésque (Hist. de Russie, tom. n. p. 247. Vie de Timour, p. 64-67, before the French version of the Institutes) has corrected the error of Sherefeddin, and marked the true limit of Timour's conquests. His arguments are superfluous, and a simple appeal to the Russian annals is sufficient to prove that Moscow, which six years before had been taken by Toctamish, escaped the arms of a enore formidable invader.

> 21 An Egyptian consul from Grand Cairo, is mentioned in Barbaro's voyage to Tana in 1436, after the city had been rebuilt (Ramusio, tom. ii. fol. 92.).

> 22 The sack of Azoph is described by Sherefeddin (l. iii. c. 55.) and much more particularly by the author of an Italian chronicle (Andreas de Redusiis de Quero, in Chron. Tarvisiano, in Muratori Script. Rerum Italicarum, tom. xix. p. 809-805.). He had conversed with the Mianis, two Venetian brothers, one of whom had been sent a deputy to the camp of Timour, and the other had lost at Azoph three sons and 12,000 ducats.

and Astrachan, the monuments of rising civilization: and his vanity proclaimed, that he had penetrated to the region of perpetual daylight, a strange phenomenon, which authorised his Mahometan doctors to dispense with the obligation of evening prayer 3.

III. When Timour first proposed to his princes 111 Of and emirs the invasion of India or Hindostan ", A D.1398, he was answered by a murmur of discontent: 1399. " The rivers! and the mountains and deserts! and "the soldiers clad in armour! and the elephants. " destroyers of men!" But the displeasure of the emperor was more dreadful than all these terrors: and his superior reason was convinced, that an enterprise of such tremendous aspect was safe and easy in the execution. He was informed by his spies of the weakness and anarchy of Hindostan: the soubahs of the provinces had erected the standard of rebellion; and the perpetual infancy of sultan Mahmoud was despised even in the haram of Delhi. The Mogul army moved in three great divisions: and Timour observes with pleasure, that the ninety-two squadrons of a thousand horse most fortunately corresponded with the ninety-two names or epithets of the prophet Mahomet. Between the Sherefeddin only says (l. iii. c. 13.), that the rays of the setting, and those of the rising, sun, were scarcely separated by any interval; a problem which may be solved in the latitude of Moscow (the 50th degree), with the aid of the Aurora Borealis, and a long summer twilight. But a day of forty days (Khondemir apud D'Herbelot, p. 880) would rigorously confine us within the polar circle.

For the Indian war, see the Institutions (p. 129-139), the fourth book of Sherefeddin, and the history of Ferishta (in Dow, vol ii. p. 1-20.), which throws a general light on the affairs of Hindostan.

CHAP.

Jihoon and the Indus they crossed one of the ridges of mountains, which are styled by the Arabian geographers The stony girdles of the earth. highland robbers were subdued or extirpated; but great numbers of men and horses perished in the snow; the emperor himself was let down a precipice on a portable scaffold, the ropes were one hundred and fifty cubits in length; and, before he could reach the bottom, this dangerous operation was five times repeated. Timour crossed the Indus at the ordinary passage of Attok; and successively traversed, in the footsteps of Alexander, the Punjah, or five rivers", that fall into the master-stream. From Attok to Delhi, the high road measures no more than six hundred miles; but the two conquerors deviated to the south-east: and the motive of Timour was to join his grandson, who had atchieved by his command the conquest of Moultan. On the eastern bank of the Hyphasis, on the edge of the desert, the Macedonian hero halted and wept: the Mogul entered the desert, reduced the fortress of Batnir, and stood in arms before the gates of Delhi, a great and flourishing city, which had subsisted three centuries under the dominion of the Mahometan kings. The siege, more especially of the eastle, might have been a work of time; but he tempted, by the appearance of weakness, the sultan Mahmoud and his vizir to descend into the plain, 25 The rivers of the Punjab, the five eastern branches of the Indus, have been laid down for the first time with tinth and accuracy in Major Rennel's incomparable map of Hindostan. In his Critical Memoir he illustrates with judgment and learning the marches of Atexander and Timour.

with ten thousand cuirassiers, forty thousand of CHAP his foot-guards, and one hundred and twenty elephants, whose tusks are said to have been armed with sharp and poisoned daggers. Against these monsters, or rather against the imagination of his troops, he condescended to use some extraordinary precautions of fire and a ditch, of iron spikes and a rampart of bucklers; but the event taught the Moguls to smile at their own fears; and, as soon as these unwieldy animals were routed, the inferior species (the men of India) disappeared from the field. Timour made his triumphal entry into the capital of Hindostan; and admired, with a view to imitate, the architecture of the stately mosch; but the order or licence of a general pillage and massacre polluted the festival of his victory. He resolved to purify his soldiers in the blood of the idolaters, or Gentoos, who still surpass, in the proportion of ten to one, the numbers of the Moslems. In this pious design, he advanced one hundred miles to the north-east of Delhi, passed the Ganges, fought several battles by land and water, and penetrated to the famous rock of Coupele, the statue of the cow, that scems to discharge the mighty river, whose source is far distant among the mountains of Thibet ". His 26 The two great rivers, the Ganges and Burrampooter, rise in Thibet, from the opposite ridges of the same hills, separate from each other to the distance of 1200 miles, and, after a winding course of 2000 unles, again meet in one point near the gulf of Bengal. Yet so capricious is Fame, that the Burrampooter is a late discovery, while his brother Ganges has been the theme of ancient and return was along the skirts of the northern hills; nor could this rapid campaign of one year justify the strange foresight of his emirs, that their children in a warm climate would degenerate into a race of Hindoos.

Utterpara laikrishqa Public Librar

His war against jazet, A.D. 1400 Sept. I.

It was on the banks of the Ganges that Timour sultan Ba- was informed, by his speedy messengers, of the disturbances which had arisen on the confines of Georgia and Anatolia, of the revolt of the Christians, and the ambitious designs of the sultan Bajazet. His vigour of mind and body was not impaired by sixty-three years, and innumerable fatigues; and, after enjoying some tranquil months in the palace of Samarcand, he proclaimed a new expedition of seven years into the western countries of Asia a. To the soldiers who had served in the Indian war, he granted the choice of remaining at home, or following their prince: but the troops of all the provinces and kingdoms of Persia were commanded to assemble at Ispahan, and wait the arrival of the Imperial standard. first directed against the Christians of Georgia, who were strong only in their rocks, their castles, and the winter season; but these obstacles were · overcome by the zeal and perseverance of Timour: the rebels submitted to the tribute or the Koran: and if both religions boasted of their martyrs, that name is more justly due to the Christian modern story. Coupele, the scene of Timour's last victory, must be situate near Loldong, 1100 miles from Calcutta, and, in 1774, a British camp! (Rennel's Memoir, p 7. 59 90, 91. 99).

²⁷ See the Institutions, p. 141, to the end of the 1st book, and Sherefeddin (l. v. c. 1-16, to the entrance of Tunour into Syria.

prisoners, who were offered the choice of abjuration or death. On his descent from the hills, the emperor gave audience to the first ambassadors of Bajazet, and opened the hostile correspondence of complaints and menaces; which fermented two years before the final explosion. Between two jealous and haughty neighbours, the motives of quarrel will seldom be wanting. The Mogul and Ottoman conquests now touched each other in the neighbourhood of Erzerum, and the Euphrates; nor had the doubtful limit been ascertained by time and treaty. Each of these ambitious monarchs might accuse his rival of violating his territory, of threatening his vassals, and protecting his rebels; and, by the name of rebels, each understood the fugitive princes, whose kingdoms he had usurped, and whose life or liberty he implacably pursued. The resemblance of character was still more dangerous than the opposition of interest; and in their victorious career, Timour was impatient of an equal, and Bajazet was ignorant of a superior. The first epistle of the Mogul emperor must have provoked, instead of reconciling, the Turkish sultan; whose family and nation he affected to despise ". " Dost thou not

CHAP.

²⁸ We have three copies of these hostile epistles in the Institutions (p. 147.), in Sherefeddin (f. v. c. 14), and in Arabshah (tom. h. c. 19. p. 183—201.); which agree with each other in the spirit and substance rather than in the style. It is probable, that they have been translated, with various latitude, from the Turkish original into the Arabic and Persian tongues.

²⁹ The Mogul emir distinguishes himself and his countrymen by the name of Turks, and sugmatizes the race and nation of Bujuret with the less honourable epithet of Turkmans. Wet I do not

CHAP. LXV.

"know, that the greatest part of Asia is subject " to our arms and our laws? that our invincible " forces extend from one sea to the other? that "the potentates of the earth form a line before " our gate? and that we have compelled fortune " herself to watch over the prosperity of our em-" pire? What is the foundation of thy insolence " and folly? Thou hast fought some battles in "the woods of Anatolia; contemptible trophics! "Thou hast obtained some victories over the "Christians of Europe: thy sword was blessed by "the apostle of God; and thy obedience to the "precept of the Koran, in waging war against the " infidels, is the sole consideration that prevents " us from destroying thy country, the frontier and " bulwark of the Moslem world. Be wise in "time; reflect; repent; and avert the thunder of " our vengeance, which is yet suspended over thy " head. Thou art no more than a pismire; why " wilt thou seek to provoke the elephants? Alas' "they will trample thee under their feet." In his replies, Bajazet poured forth the indignation of a soul which was deeply starte by such unusual contempt. After retorting the basest reproaches on the thief and rebel of the desert, the Ottoman recapitulates his boasted victories in Iran, Tourau, and the Indies; and labours to prove, that Timour had never triumphed unless by his own perfidy and the vices of his foes. "Thy armies " are innumerable: be they so; but what are the understand how the Ottomans could be descended from a Turkman sailor; those inland shepherds were so remote from the sea, and all maritime affairs.

's' arrows of the flying Tartar against the scymetars " and battle-axes of my firm and invincible Ja-" nizaries? I will guard the princes who have " implored my protection: seek them in my tents. "The cities of Arzingan and Erzeroum are mine; " and unless the tribute be duly paid, I will de-" mand the arrears under the walls of Tauris and " Sultania." The ungovernable rage of the sultan at length betrayed him to an insult of a more domestic kind. "If I fly from my arms," said he, "may my wives be thrice divorced from my " bed: but if thou hast not courage to meet me in the field, mayest thou again receive thy wives " after they have thrice endured the embraces of · " a stranger"." Any violation by word or deed of the secrecy of the haram is an unpardonable offence among the Turkish nations 1; and the political quarrel of the two monarchs was embittered by private and personal resentment. Yet in his first expedition, Timour was satisfied with the · siege and destruction of Siwas or Schaste, a strong city on the borders of Anatolia: and he revenged

"According to the Koran (e. ii. p. 27, and Sale's Discourses, p. 1.34 v. a Musulman who had three discovered his write twho had three repeated the words of a discovery could not take her again till after she had been married to, and repudiated ty, another heading, an ignonumous transaction, which it is needless to aggravite, by supposing, that the first husband must see her empoyed by a could before his face (Rycaut's State of the Ottoman Empire, i. u.

c. 21.).

CHAP LXV.

³¹ The common delicacy of the Orientals, in never speaking of their women, is ascribed in a much higher degree by Arabshah to the Turkish nations; and it is remarkable enough, that Chalcondeles (1 it p 55.) had some knowledge of the prejudice and the mostly.

CHAP.

the indiscretion of the Ottoman, on a garrison of four thousand Armenians, who were buried alive for the brave and faithful discharge of their duty. As a Musulman he seemed to respect the pious occupation of Bajazet, who was still engaged in the blockade of Constantinople: and after this salutary lesson, the Mogul conqueror checked his pursuit, and turned aside to the invasion of Syria and Egypt. In these transactions, the Ottoman prince, by the Orientals, and even by Timour, is styled the Kaissar of Roum, the Cæsar of the Romans: a title which, by a small anticipation, might be given to a monarch who possessed the provinces, and threatened the city, of the successors of Constantine.

The military republic of the Mamalukes still reigned in Egypt and Syria: but the dynasty of the Turks was overthrown by that of the Circassians"; and their favourite Barkok, from a slave and a prisoner, was raised and restored to the throne. In the midst of rebellion and discord, he braved the menaces, corresponded with the enemics, and detained the ambassadors, of the Mogul, who patiently expected his decease, to revenge the crimes of the father on the feeble reign of his son Farage. The Syrian emirs" were Timour invades Syria, A.D.1400.

)I .

⁵² For the style of the Moguls, see the Institutions (p. 131. 147; and for the Persians, the Bibliothéque Orientale (p. 882.): but I do not find that the title of Cæsar has been applied by the Arabians, or assumed by the Ottomans themselves.

³³ See the reigns of Barkok and Pharadge, in M. de Guignes (tom. iv. 1. xxii.), who, from the Arabic texts of Aboulmahasen, Ebn Schounah, and Aintabi, has added some facts to our common stock of materials.

³⁴ For these recent and domestic transactions, Arabshah, though a partial, is a credible witness (tom. i. c. 64-68. tom. ii. c. 4-assembled at Aleppo to repel the invasion: they confided in the fame and discipline of the Mama-, LAV lukes, in the temper of their swords and lances of the purest steel of Damascus, in the strength of their walled cities, and in the populousness of sixty thousand villages: and instead of sustaining a siege, they threw open their gates, and arrayed their forces in the plain. But these forces were not cemented by virtue and union; and some powerful emirs had been seduced to desert or betray their more loval companions. 'Timour's front was covered with a line of Indian elephants, whose turrets were filled with archers and Greek fire: the rapid evolutions of his cavalry completed the dismay and disorder; the Syrian crouds fell back on each other; many thousands were stifled or slaughtered in the entrance of the great street; the Moguls entered with the fugitives; and, after a short defence, the citadel, the impregnable citadel of Aleppo, was surrendered by cowardice or treachery. Among the suppliants and cap- Sacks tives, Timour distinguished the doctors of the law, Alepso, A D.1400, whom he invited to the dangerous honour of a Nov. 11, personal conference".-The Mogul prince was a zealous Musulman; but his Persian schools had! taught him to revere the memory of Ali and Ho-^{14.).} Timour must have been odious to a Syrian, but the notoriety of facts would have obliged him, in some measure, to respect his enemy and himself. His bitters may correct the luscious sweets of Sherefeddin (l. v. 17-29).

CHAP.

³⁵ These interesting conversations appear to have been copied by Arabshah (tom 1 c 68. p 625-645.) from the cadhi and historian Ebn Schounah, a principal actor. Yet how could be be alive seventy-five years afterwards (D'Herbelot, p. 792.)?

CHAP.

sein; and he had imbibed a deep prejudice against the Syrians, as the enemies of the son of the daughter of the apostle of God. To these doctors he proposed a captious question, which the casuists of Bochara, Samarcand, and Herat, were incapable of resolving. "Who are the true martyrs, of "those who are slain on my side, or on that of "my enemies?" But he was silenced, or satisfied, by the dexterity of one of the cadhis of Aleppo, who replied in the words of Mahomet himself, that the motive, not the ensign, constitutes the martyr; and that the Moslems of either party, who fight only for the glory of God, may deserve that sacred appellation. The true succession of the caliphs was a controversy of a still more delicate nature, and the frankness of a doctor, too honest for his situation, provoked the emperor to exclaim, " Ye are as false as those of Damas-" cus: Moawivah was an usurper, Yezid a tyrant, " and Ali alone is the lawful successor of the pro-"phet." A prudent explanation restored his tranquillity; and he passed to a more familiar topic of conversation. "What is your age?" said he to the cadhi. "Fifty years."-" It would be the age of my eldest son: you see me here (con-" tinued Timour) a poor, lame, decrepit mortal. " Yet by my arm has the Almighty been pleased " to subdue the kingdoms of Iran, Touran, and "the Indies. I am not a man of blood; and " God is my witness, that in all my wars I have " never been the aggressor, and that my enemics " have always been the authors of their own cala-" mity." During this peaceful conversation, the streets of Aleppo streamed with blood, and re- CHAP echoed with the cries of mothers and children, with the shricks of violated virgins. The rich plunder that was abandoned to his soldiers might stimulate their avarice; but their cruelty was enforced by the peremptory command of producing an adequate number of heads, which, according to his custom, were curiously piled in columns and pyramids: the Moguls celebrated the feast of victory, while the surviving Moslems passed the night in tears and in chains. I shall not dwell on the march of the destroyer from Aleppo to Damascus, where he was rudely encountered, and almost overthrown, by the armies of Egypt. retrograde motion was imputed to his distress and despair: one of his nephews deserted to the enemy; and Syria rejoiced in the tale of his defeat, when the sultan was driven by the revolt of the Mamalukes to escape with precipitation and shame to his palace of Cairo. Abandoned by their prince, the inhabitants of Damascus still defended their walls; and Timour consented to raise the siege, if they would adorn his retreat with a gift or ransom; each article of nine pieces. But no sooner had he introduced himself into the city, under colour of a truce, than he perfidiously violated the treaty; imposed a contribution of ten Damasmillions of gold; and animated his troops to chas- A.D.1401 tise the posterity of those Syrians who had exc. Jan 27. cuted, or approved, the murder of the grandson of Mahomet. A family which had given honourable burial to the head of Hosein, and a colony of artificers, whom he sent to labour at Samarcand, were alone reserved in the general massacre; and, after a period of seven centuries, Damascus was reduced to ashes, because a Tartar was moved by religious zeal to avenge the blood of an Arab. The losses and fatigues of the campaign obliged Timour to renounce the conquest of Palestine and Egypt; but in his return to the Euphrates, he delivered Aleppo to the flames; and justified his pious motive by the pardon and reward of two thousand sectaries of Ali, who were desirous to visit the tomb of his son. I have expatiated on the personal ancedotes which mark the character of the Mogul hero; but I shall briefly mention ", that he erected on the ruins of Bagdad a pyramid of ninety thousand heads; again visited Georgia; encamped on the banks of Araxes; and proclaimed his resolution of marching against the Ottoman emperor. Conscious of the importance of the war, he collected his forces from every province: eight hundred thousand men were enrolled on his military list ";

CHAP.

and Bagdad, A. D. 1401, July 23,

> 36 The marches and occupations of Timour between the Synan and Ottoman wars, are represented by Sherefeddin (l. v. c. 29— 43.) and Arab-hah (tom. ii. c. 15—18.).

> 37 This number of 800,000 was extracted by Arabshah, or rather by Ebn Schounah, ex rationano Timun, on the faith of a Carizman officer (tons. i. c. 68 p. 617.), and it is remarkable enough, that a Greek historian (Phranza, I. i. c. 20) adds no more than 20,000 men. Poggius reckons 1,000,000; another Latin contemporary (Chros. Tarvisianum, apid Miratori, fom 818. p. 800.) 1,100,000; and the enormous sum of 1,000,000 is attested by a German soldier, who was present at the battle of Angola (Leunclas, ad Chalcoudyl, I. iii, p. 82.). Timour, in his Institutions, has not deigned to calculate his troops, his subjects, or his revenues.

but the splendid commands of five, and ten, thousand horse, may be rather expressive of the rank and pension of the chiefs, than of the genuine number of effective soldiers. In the pillage of Syria, the Moguls had acquired immense riches: but the delivery of their pay and arrears for seven years, more firmly attached them to the Imperial standard. \'

During this diversion of the Mogul arms, Baja- Invalor zet had two years to collect his forces for a more A D. 102. serious encounter. They consisted of four hundred thousand horse and foot ", whose merit and fidelity were of an unequal complexion. We may discriminate the Janizaries, who have been gradually raised to an establishment of forty thousand men; a national cavalry, the Spahis of modern times: twenty thousand cuirassiers of Europe, clad in black and impenetrable armour; the troops of Anatolia, whose princes had taken refuge in the camp of Timour, and a colony of Tartars, whom he had driven from Kipzak, and to whom Bajazet had assigned a settlement in the plains of Adrianople. The fearless confidence of the sultan urged him to meet his antagonist; and, as if he had chosen that spot for revenge, he displayed his banners near the ruins of the unfortunate Suvas. the mean while. Timour moved from the Araxes through the countries of Armenia and Anatolia: his boldness was secured by the wisest precautions; his speed was guided by order and discipline; and the woods, the mountains, and the rivers, were diligently explored by the flying squadrons, who marked his road and preceded his standard. Firm in his plan of fighting in the heart of the Ottoman kingdom, he avoided their camp; dextrously inclined to the left; occupied Cæsarea; traversed the salt desert and the river Halys; and invested Angora: while the sultan, immoveable and ignorant in his post, compared the Tartar swiftness to the crawling of a snail "; he returned on the wings of indignation to the relief of Angora; and as both generals were alike impatient for action, the plains round that city were the scene of a memorable battle, which has immortalised the glory of Timour and the shame of Ba-For this signal victory the Mogul emperor was indebted to himself, to the genius of the moment, and the discipline of thirty years. He had improved the tactics, without violating the manners, of his nation 41, whose force still consisted in the missile weapons, and rapid evolutions, of a Battle of Angora, A D.1402, July 28.

³⁶ A wide latitude of non-effectives was allowed by the Great Mogul for his own prole and the benefit of his officers. Bernier's patron was Penge-Hazari, commander of 5000 horse, of which he maintained no more than 500 (Voyages, tom. i. p. 288, 289).

⁴⁰ Timour himself fixes at 400,000 men the Ottoman army (Institutions, p. 253), which is reduced to 150,000 by Phranza (l. i. c. 29.), and swelled by the German soldier to 1,400,000. It is evident, that the Moguls were the more numerous.

CHAP.

⁴⁰ It may not be useless to mark the distances between Angora and the neighbouring cities, by the journes of the caravans, each of twenty or twenty-five miles, to Smyrna xx. to Kiotahia x to Boursa x. to Casarea viii. to Smope x. to Nicomedia ix to Constantinople xii or xiii. (see Tournefort, Voyage au Levant, tom ii, lettre xxi).

 $^{^{41}}$ See the Systems of Tactics in the Institutions, which the English editors have illustrated with elaborate plans (p. 373–407).

humerous cavalry. From a single troop to a great CHAP. army, the mode of attack was the same; a foremost . LXV. line first advanced to the charge, and was supported in a just order by the squadrons of the great vanguard. The general's eye watched over the field, and at his command the front and rear of the right and left wings successively moved forwards in their several divisions, and in a direct or oblique line: the enemy was pressed by eighteen or twenty attacks; and each attack afforded a chance of victory. If they all proved fruitless or unsuccessful, the occasion was worthy of the emperor himself, who gave the signal of advancing to the standard and main body, which he led in person ". But in the battle of Angora, the main body itself was supported, on the flanks and in the rear, by the bravest squadrons of the reserve, commanded by the sons and grandsons of Timour. The conqueror of Hindostan ostentatiously shewed a line of elephants, the trophies, rather than the instruments, of victory: the use of the Greek fire was familiar to the Moguls and Ottomans: but had they borrowed from Europe the recent invention of gunpowder and cannon, the artificial thunder, in the hands of either nation, must have turned the fortune of the day 43. In that day ⁴² The sultan himself (says Timout) thust then put the foot of courage into the surrup of patience. A Tertar metaphor, which is lost in the English, but preserved in the French, version of the Institutes p. 150, 157.).

^{5.} The Greek tree, on Timour's side, is attested by Sherefeddin (l. v. e. 47), but Voltaire's strange suspicion, that some cannon, inscribed with strange characters, must have been sent by that monarch to Delhi, is refuted by the universal silence of contemporares

Bajazet displayed the qualities of a soldier and a chief: but his genius sunk under a stronger ascendant; and, from various motives, the greatest part of his troops failed him in the decisive moment. His rigour and avarice had provoked a mutiny among the Turks; and even his 50n Soliman too hastily withdrew from the field. The forces of Anatolia, loyal in their revolt, were drawn away to the banners of their lawful princes. His Tartar allies had been tempted by the letters and emissaries of Timour 43; who reproached their ignoble servitude under the slaves of their fathers; and offered to their hopes the dominion of their new, or the liberty of their ancient, country. In the right wing of Bajazet the cuirassiers of Europe charged, with faithful hearts and irresistible arms; but these men of iron were soon broken by an artful flight and headlong pursuit: and the Janizaries, alone, without cavalry or missile weapons, were encompassed by the circle of the Mogul hunters. Their valour was at length oppressed by heat, thirst, and the weight of numbers: and the unfortunate sultan, afflicted with the gout in his hands and feet, was transported from the field on the fleetest of his horses. He was pursued and taken by the titular khan of Zagatai; and, after his capture, and the defeat of the Ottoman powers, the kingdom of Anatolia Defeat and captivity of Bajazet.

⁴⁴ Timour has dissembled this secret and important negociation with the Tartars, which is indisputably proved by the joint evidence of the Arabian (tom. i. c. 47. p. 301.), Turkish (Annal. Leunclav. p. 321.), and Persian historians (Khondemir, apud D'Herbelot, p. 882.).

submitted to the conqueror, who planted his CHAP. standard at Kiotahia, and dispersed on all sides the ministers of rapine and destruction. Mehemmed Sultan, the eldest and best beloved of his grandsons, was dispatched to Boursa, with thirty thousand horse; and such was his youthful ardour, that he arrived with only four thousand at the gates of the capital, after performing in five days a march of two hundred and thirty miles. Yet fear is still more rapid in its course: and Soliman, the son of Bajazet, had already passed over to Europe with the royal treasure. spoil, however, of the palace and city was immense: the inhabitants had escaped; but the buildings, for the most part of wood, were reduced to From Boursa, the grandson of Timour advanced to Nice, even yet a fair and flourishing city; and the Mogul squadrons were only stopped by the waves of the Propontis. The same success attended the other mirzas and emirs in their excursions: and Smyrna, defended by the zeal and courage of the Rhodian knights, alone deserved the presence of the emperor himself. After an obstinate defence, the place was taken by storm; all that breathed was put to the sword; and the heads of the Christian heroes were launched from the engines, on board of two carracks, or great ships of Europe, that rode at anchor in the har-The Moslems of Asia rejoiced in their deliverance from a dangerous and domestic foe, and a parallel was drawn between the two rivals, by observing that Timour, in fourteen days, had reduced a fortress which had sustained seven years the siege, or at least the blockade, of Bajazet15.

CHAP. LXV. The history of his iron cage

The iron cage in which Bajazet was imprisoned by Tamerlanc, so long and so often repeated as a moral lesson, is now rejected as a fable by the modern writers, who smile at the vulgar credulity.6. They appeal with confidence to the Persian history of Sherefeddin Ali, which has been given to our curiosity in a French version, and from which I shall collect and abridge a more specious narrative of this memorable transaction. No sooner was Timour informed that the captive Ottoman was at the door of his tent, than he graciously stept rian of Ti- forwards to receive him, scated him by his side, and mingled with just reproaches a soothing pity for his rank and misfortune. "Alas!" said the emperor, "the decree of fate is now accomplished " by your own fault: it is the web which you have " woven, the thorns of the tree which vourself "have planted. 'I wished to spare, and even "to assist, the champion of the Moslems: you " braved our threats; you despised our friendship; " you forced us to enter your kingdom with our " invincible armies. Behold the event. Had you

> ., 45 For the war of Anatolia or Roum, I add some hints in the Institutions, to the copious narratives of Sherefeddin (l. v. c. 44-65.) and Arabshah (tom. n. c. 20-35.). On this part only of Timour's history, it is lawful to quote the Turks (Cantemir, p. 53-55. Annal Leunclav. p. 320-322.) and the Greeks (Phranza, l. i. c 29. Ducas, c. 15-17 Chalcondyles, l. 11i.).

40 The acepticism of Voltaire (Essai our l'Histoire Generale, c. 88.) is ready on this, as on every occasion, to reject a popular tale, and to diminish the magnitude of vice and virtue, and on most occasions his incredulity is reasonable.

disproved by the Pervian histomour:

s vanquished, I am not ignorant of the fate which CHAP you reserved for myself and my troops. " disdain to retaliate: your life and honour are " secure; and I shall express my gratitude to God " by my elemency to man." The roval captive showed some signs of repentance, accepted the huinitiation of a robe of honour, and embraced with tears his son Mousa, who, at his request, was sought and found among the captives of the field. Ottoman princes were lodged in a splendid pavilion; and the respect of the guards could be surpassed only by their vigilance. On the arrival of the haram from Boursa, Timour restored the queen Despina and her daughter to their father and husband; but he piously required, that the Servian princess, who had hitherto been indulged in the profession of Christianity, should embrace without delay the religion of the prophet. In the feast of victory, to which Bajazet was invited, the Mogul emperor placed a crown on his head and a sceptre in his hand, with a solemn assurance of restoring him with an increase of glory to the throne of his ancestors. But the effect of this promise was disappointed by the sultan's untimely death: amidst the care of the most skilful physicians, he expired of an apoplexy at Akshehr, the Antioch of Pisidia, about nine months after his defeat. The victor dropped a tear over his grave; his body, with royal pomp, was conveyed to the mausoleum which he had erected at Boursa; and his son Mousa, after receiving a rich present of gold and jewels, of horses and arms, was invested by a patent in red ink with the kingdom of Anatolia.

CHAP. LXV.

Such is the portrait of a generous conqueror, which has been extracted from his own memorials, and dedicated to his son and grandson, nineteen years after his decease47; and, at a time when the truth was remembered by thousands, a manifest falsehood would have implied a satire on his real conduct. Weighty indeed is this evidence, adopted by all the Persian histories1; vet flattery, more especially in the East, is base and - audacious; and the harsh and ignominious freatment of Bajazet is attested by a chain of witnesses, seme of whom shall be produced in the order of attested, 1. their time and country. 1. The reader has not forgot the garrison of French, whom the marshal Boucicault left behind him for the defence of Constantinople. They were on the spot to receive the earliest and most faithful intelligence of the overtifrow of their great adversary; and it is more than probable, that some of them accompanied the Greek embassy to the camp of Tamerlane. From their account, the hardships of the prison and death of Bajezet are affirmed by the marshal's servant and to torian, within the

by the French;

⁴⁷ See the History of Sherefeddin (l. v c 49 52, 53 50, 60 \. This work was finished at Shiraz, in the year 1424, and dedicated to Sultan Ibrahim, the son of Sharokh, the son of Timour, who reigned in Farsistan in his father's lifetime distance of seven years4". 2. The name of Pog- CHAP cius the Italian is deservedly famous among the revivers of learning in the fifteenth century. His 2, by the elegant dialogue on the vivissitudes of fortune51 was composed in his fiftieth year, twenty-eight verrs after the Turkish victory of Tamerlane ?; whom he celebrates as not inferior to the illustrious Barbarians of antiquity. Of his exploits and discipline Poggius was informed by several ocular witnesses; nor does he forget an example so apposite to his theme as the Ottoman monarch, whom the Seythian confined like a wild beast in an iron cage, and exhibited a spectacle to Asia. I might add the authority of two Italian chronicles, perhaps of an earlier date, which would prove at least that the same story, whether false or true. was imported into Europe with the first tidings 49 La fut lui mome (Bajazet) pris, et mené en prison, en laquelle mournt de duce mort! Memoires de Boucicault, P. 1 e 37 These memous were complised while the marshal was still governor of Genoa, from whence he was expelled in the year 1409, by a popular in ensection. Minaton, Annali d'Italia, tom. xii. p. 473, 474.).

⁴⁸ After the perusal of Khondemir, Ebn Schounah, &c. the learned D'Herbelot (Bibliot. Orientale, p. 882.) may affirm, that this fable is not mentioned in the most authentic historics; but his denial of the visible testimony of Arabshah, leaves some room to suspect his accuracy.

10 The pader will find a satisfactory account of the life and writing of Poggins, in the Poggiana, an entertaining work of M. Lent int, and in the Bibliotheca Latina medic et infrair Alians of Fabricius (tom v. p. 305-308.). Poggius was born in the year 1380, and died in 14 gr

31 The dialogue de Varietate Fortuna (of which a complete and elegant edition has been published at Pans in 1723, in 4to), was composed a short time before the death of Pope Martin V (p. 5). and con equently about the end of the year 1430.

52 See a splendid and eloquent encomium of Tamerlane, p. 36-30. ipse emm novi (says Poggius) qui fuere in ejus castris Regent vivum cepit, caveaque in modum feræ inclusum per omnem Asiam eireumtuht egregium admirandumque spectaculum fortuna of the revolution57. 3. At the time when Poggius flourished at Rome, Ahmed Ebn Arabshah composed at Damascus the florid and malevolent history of Timour, for which he had collected materials in his journies over Turkey and Tartary". Without any possible correspondence between the Latin and the Arabian writer, they agree in the fact of the iron cage; and their agreement is a striking proof of their common veracity. Ahmed Arabshah likewise relates another outrage, which Bajazet endured, of a more domestic and tender nature. His indiscreet mention of women and divorces was deeply resented by the jealous Tartar: in the feast of victory, the wine was served by female cupbearers, and the sultan beheld his own concubines and wives confounded among the slaves, and exposed without a veil to the eyes of intemperance. To escape a similar indignity, it is said, that his successors, except in a single instance, have abstained from legitimate nuptials; and the Ottoman practice and belief, at least in the sixteenth century, is attested by the observing Busbequius, ambassador from the court of Vienna ^{&#}x27;53 The Chronicon Tarvisianum (in Muratori, Script. Rerum Italicarum, tom. xix. p. 800), and the Annales Estenses (tom. xvni. p. 974.). The two authors, Andrea de Redusis de Quero, and James de Delayto, were both contemporaries, and both chancellors, the one of Trevigi, the other of Ferrara. The evidence of the former is the most po-itive.

CHAP. LXV. 3. by the Arabs;

⁵⁴ See Arabshah, tom. ii. c. 28, 34. He travelled in regiones Rumæas, A. H. 839 (A.D. 1435, July 27), tom. n. c. 2, p. 13.

⁵⁵ Busbequius in Legatione Turcici, epist. i. p. 52. Yet his respectable authority is somewhat shaken by the subsequent marriages of Amurath II, with a Servan, and of Mahomet II, with an Asiatic, princess (Cantemir, p. 83.93.).

to the great Soliman. 4. Such is the separation of language, that the testimony of a Greek is not less independent than that of a Latin or an Arab. 4. by the I suppress the names of Chalcondyles and Ducas, who flourished in a later period, and who speak in a dess positive tone; but more attention is due to George Phranza⁵⁶, protovestiare of the last emperors, and who was born a year before the battle of Angora. Twenty-two years after that event, he was sent ambassador to Amurath the second; and the historian might converse with some vete--ran janizaries, who had been made prisoners with the sultan, and had themselves seen him in his iron cage. 5. The last evidence, in every sense, 5 by the is that of the Turkish annals, which have been consulted or transcribed by Leunclavius, Pocock, and Cantemir7. They unanimously deplore the captivity of the iron cage; and some credit may be allowed to national historians, who cannot stigmatize the Tartar without uncovering the shame of their king and country.

CHAP.

From these opposite premises, a fair and mode- Probable rate conclusion may be deduced. I am satisfied concluthat Sherefeddin Ali has faithfully described the first ostentatious interview, in which the conqueror, whose spirits were harmonized by success, affected the character of generosity. But his mind was insensibly alienated by the unseasonable arrogance of Bajazet; the complaints of his enemies. the Anatolian princes, were just and vehement: and Timour betraved a design of leading his roval captive in triumph to Samarcand. An attempt to facilitate his escape, by digging a mine under the tent, provoked the Mogul emperor to impose a harsher restraint; and in his perpetual marches, an iron cage on a waggon might be invented, not as a wanton insult, but as a rigorous precaution. Timour had read in some fabulous history a similar treatment of one of his predecessors, a king of Persia; and Bajazet was condemned to represent the person, and expiate the guilt, of the Roman Cæsar⁵⁶. But the strength of his mind and body fainted under the trial, and his premature death might, without injustice, be ascribed to the severity of Timour. He warred not with the dead; a tear and a sepulchre were all that he could bestow on a captive who was delivered from his power; and if Mousa, the son of Bajazet, was permitted to reign over the ruins of Boursa, the greatest part of the province of Anatolia had been restored by the conqueror to their lawful sovereigns.

⁵⁶ See the testimony of George Phranza (l. i. c. 29.), and his life in Hanckius (de Script, Byzant, P. i. c 40). Chalcondyles and Ducas speak in general terms of Bajazet's chains.

⁵⁷ Annales Leunclav. p. 321. Pocock, Prolegomen. ad Abulpharag Dynast. Cantemir, p. 55

CHAP. LXV.

Term of the conquests of Tunous, A.D.1403.

Death of Bajazet,

A D 1403, March 9.

From the Irtish and Volga to the Persian Gulf, and from the Ganges to Damascus and the Archipelago, Asia was in the hand of Timour; his armies were invincible, his ambition was boundless, 55'A Sapor, long of Persia, had been made prisoner, and inclosed in the figure of a cow's hide by Maximian or Galerius Cæsar. Such is the fable related by Entychius (Annal tom. i. p. 421' vers. Pocock). The recollection of the true history (Decline and Fall, &c. vol. ii. p. 144—156.) will teach us to appreciate the knowledge of the Orientals of the ages which precede the Hegira.

the Christian kingdoms of the West, which already trembled at his name. He touched the utmost verge of the land; but an insuperable, though narrow, sea rolled between the two continents of Europe and Asia"; and the lord of so many tomans, or myriads, of horse, was not master of a single galley. The two passages of the Bosphorus and Hellespont, of Constantinople and Gallipoli, were possessed, the one by the Christians, the other by the Turks. On this -great occasion, they forgot the difference of religion, to act with union and firmness in the common cause: the double streights were guarded with ships and fortifications; and they separately withheld the transports which Timour demanded of either nation, under the pretence of attacking their enemy. At the same time, they soothed his pride with tributary gifts and suppliant embassies, and prudently tempted him to retreat with the honours of victory. Soliman, the son of Bajazet, implored his chemency for his father and himself; accepted, by a red patent, the investiture of the kingdom of Romania, which he already held by the sword; and reiterated his ardent wish, of casting himself in person at the feet of the king of the world. The Greek and his zeal might aspire to conquer and convert CHAP.

59 Arabahah (tom. n. c. 25.) describes, like a curious traveller, the streights of Gallipoli and Constantinople. To acquire a just idea of these events, I have compared the narratives and prejudices of the Moguls, Turks, Greeks, and Arabians. The Spanish antibassador mentions this hostile union of the Christians and Ottomans (Vie de Timour, p. 96.).

CHAP. emperor 60 (either John or Manuel) submitted to pay the same tribute which he had stipulated with the Turkish sultan, and ratified the treaty by an oath of allegiance, from which he could absolve his conscience so soon as the Mogul arms had retired from Anatolia. But the fears and fancy of nations ascribed to the ambitious Tamerlane a new design of vast and romantic compass; a dcsign of subduing Egypt and Africa, marching from the Nile to the Atlantic Occan, entering Europe by the Streights of Gibraltar, and, after imposing his yoke on the kingdoms of Christendom, of returning home by the deserts of Russia and Tartary. This remote, and perhaps imaginary, danger was averted by the submission of the sultan of Egypt: the honours of the prayer and the coin, attested at Cairo the supremacy of Timour; and a rare gift of a giraffe, or camelopard, and nine ostriches, represented at Samarcand the tribute of the African world. Our imagination is not less astonished by the portrait of a Mogul, who, in his camp, before Smyrna, meditates, and almost accomplishes, the invasion of the Chinese empire 61. Timour was urged to this enterprise by national honour and religious zeal. The torrents which he had shed of Musulman blood could be expiated only by an equal destruction of the infidels; and as he now stood at the gates of paradise, he might best secure his glorious entrance by demolishing the idols of China, founding moschs in every city, and establishing the profession of faith in one God, and his prophet Mahomet. The recent expulsion of the house of Zingis was an insult on the Mogul name; and the disorders of the empire afforded the fairest opportunity for revenge. The illustrious Hongyou, founder of the dynasty of Ming, died four years before the battle of Angora; and his grandson, a weak and unfortunate youth, was burnt in his palace, after a million of Chinese had perished in the civil war". Before he evacuated Anatolia, Timour dispatched beyond the Sihoon a numerous army, or rather colony, of his old and new subjects, to open the road, to subdue the Pagan Calmucks and Mungals, and to found cities and magazines in the desert; and, by the diligence of his lieutenant, he soon received a perfect map and description of the unknown regions, from the source of the Irtish to the wall of China. During these preparations, the emperor atchieved the final conquest of Georgia; passed the winter on the banks of the Araxes; appeased the troubles of Persia; and slowly returned to his capital, after a campaign of four years and nine months.

⁶⁰ Since the name of Cæsor had been transferred to the sultans of Roum, the Greek princes of Constantinople (Sherefeddin, l. v. c. 54.) were confounded with the Christian lords of Gallipoli, Thessalonica, &c. under the title of Tekkur, which is derived by corruption from the genitive του κυριου (Cantemir, p. 51.).

⁶¹ See Sherefeddin, I. v. c. 4., who marks, in a just itimerary, the road to China, which Arabshah (tont. ni. c. 33.) paints at vague and rhetorical colours.

62. Synopsis Hist. Sinicæ, p. 74-76. (in the ivih part of the Relations de Thevenot), Duhalde, Hist. de la Chine (tom i. p. 507, 508. folio edition): and for the Chronology of the Chinese emperors, De Guignes, Hist. des Huus, tom. i. p. 71, 72.

CHAP. LXV. Ihs triumph at Samarcand, A D.1404, July— A D.1405, January 8.

On the throne of Samarcand 63, he displayed, in a short repose, his magnificence and power; listened to the complaints of the people; distributed a just measure of rewards and punishments; emploved his riches in the architecture of palaces and temples; and gave audience to the ambassadors of Egypt, Arabia, India, Tartary, Russia, and Spain, the last of whom presented a suit of tapestry which eclipsed the pencil of the Oriental The marriage of six of the emperor's grandsons was esteemed an act of religion as well as of paternal tenderness; and the pomp of the ancient caliphs was revived in their nuptials. They were celebrated in the gardens of Canighul, decorated with innumerable tents and pavilions, which displayed the luxury of a great city, and the spoils of a victorious camp. . Whole forests were cut down to supply fuel for the kitchens; the plain was spread with pyramids of meat, and vases of every liquor, to which thousands of guests were courteously invited: the orders of the state, and the nations of the earth, were marshalled at the royal banquet; nor were the ambassadors of Europe (says the haughty Persian) excluded from the feast; since even the casses, the smallest of fish, find their place in the ocean 64. The public joy was testified by illuminations and masquerades; CHAP. the trades of Samarcand passed in review; and LXV. every trade was emulous to execute some quaint device, some marvellous pageant, with the materials of their peculiar art. After the marriagecontracts had been ratified by the cadhis, the bridegrooms and their brides retired to the nuptial chambers; nine times, according to the Asiatic fashion, they were dressed and undressed; and at each change of apparel, pearls and rubies were showered on their heads, and contemptuously - abandoned to their attendants. A general indulgence was proclaimed: every law was relaxed, every pleasure was allowed; the people was free, the sovereign was idle; and the historian of Timour may remark, that, after devoting fifty years to the attainment of empire, the only happy period of his life were the two months in which he ceased to exercise his power. But he was soon awakened to the cares of government and war. The standard was unfurled for the invasion of China: the emirs made their report of two hundred thousand, the select and veteran soldiers of Iran and Touran: their baggage and provisions were transported by five hundred great waggons, and an immeuse train of horses and camels; and the troops might prepare for a long absence, since more than six months were employed in the tranquil journey of a caravan from Samarcand to p. 320, 330. Avertissement \(\frac{1}{2}\) l'Hist, de Timur Bec, p. 28-33.\(\frac{1}{2}\). There appears likewise to have been some correspondence between the Mogal emperor and the court of Charles VII. king of France (Histoire de France, par Velly et Villaret, tom. xii. p. 330).

⁶¹ For the return, triumph, and death of Timour, see She-refeddin (l. vi. c. 1-30.) and Arabshah (tom. n. c. 35-47.)

⁶⁴ Sherefoldin (l. vi. c. 24.) mentions the ambassadors of one of the most potent sovereigns of Europe. We know that vi was Henry III. king of Castile; and the curious relation of his two embassics is still extant (Mariana, Hist. Hispan, l. xix. c. 11. tom. ii.

CHAP. LXV.

Pekin. Neither age, nor the severity of the winter, could retard the impatience of Timour; he mounted on horseback, passed the Sihoon on the ice, marched seventy-six parasangs, three hundred miles, from his capital, and pitched his last camp in the neighbourhood of Otrar, where he was expected by the angel of death. Fatigue, and the indiscreet use of iced water, accelerated the A.D.1405, progress of his fever; and the conqueror of Asia expired in the seventieth year of his age, thirtyfive years after he had ascended the throne of Zagatai. His designs were lost; his armies were disbanded; China was saved; and fourteen years after his decease, the most powerful of his children sent an embassy of friendship and commerce to the court of Pekin 13

His death on the road to China, April 1.

Character and merits

The fame of Timour has pervaded the East and of Tunom. West; his posterity is still invested with the Imperial title; and the admiration of his subjects. who revered him almost as a deity, may be justified in some degree by the praise or confession of his bitterest enemies of. Although he was lame of an hand and foot, his form and stature were not unworthy of his rank; and his vigorous health, so essential to himself and to the world, was corroborated by temperance and exercise. In his familiar discourse he was grave and modest, and if he was ignorant of the Arabic language, he spoke with fluency and elegance the Persian and Turkish idioms. It was his delight to converse with the learned on topics of history and science: and the amusement of his leisure hours was the game of chess, which he improved or corrupted with new refinements 67. In his religion, he was a zealous, though not perhaps an orthodox, Musulman 64; but his sound understanding may tempt us to believe, that a superstitious reverence for omens and prophecies, for saints and astrologers, was only affected as an instrument of policy. In the government of a vast empire, he stood alone and absolute, without a rebel to oppose his power, a favourite to seduce his affections, or a minister to mislead his judgment. It was his firmest maxim, that whatever might be the consequence, the word of the prince should never be disputed or recalled; but his foes have maliciously observed, that the commands of anger and destruction were more strictly executed than those of beneficence and favour. His sons and grandsons, of whom Timour left six-and-thirty at his decease, were his first and most submissive subjects; and whenever they ⁶⁷ His new system was multiplied from 32 pieces and 64 squares to 56 pieces and 110 or 130 squares: but, except in his court, the old game has been thought sufficiently elaborate. The Mogul emperor was rather pleased than hart with the victory of a subject a chess-player will feel the value of this encomium?

⁶⁵ See the translation of the Persian account of their embassy, a curious and original piece (in the 19th part of the Relations de Thevenot.) They presented the emperor of China with an old horse which Timour had formerly rode. It was in the year 1419, that they departed from the court of Herat, to which place they returned in 1422 from Pekin.

⁶⁶ From Arabshah, tom. il. c. 96 The bright or softer colours are borrowed from Sherefeddin, D'Herbelot, and the Institutions.

⁶⁸ See Sherefeddin, I. v. c. 15, 25 Arabshah (tom. ii. c. 96, p. 861, 803.) reproves the implety of Timour and the Moguls, who almost preferred to the Koran the Parsa, or Law of Zingis (cui Deus maledicat), nor will be believe that Sharokh had abolished the use and authority of that Pagon code.

CHAP.

deviated from their duty, they were corrected, according to the laws of Zingis, with the bastonade, and afterwards restored to honour and command. Perhaps his heart was not devoid of the social virtues; perhaps he was not incapable of loving his friends and pardoning his enemies; but the rules of morality are founded on the public interest; and it may be sufficient to applaud the reisdom of a monarch, for the liberality by which he is not impoverished, and for the justice by which he is strengthened and enriched. To maintain the harmony of authority and obedience, to chastise the proud, to protect the weak, to reward the deserving, to banish vice and idleness from his dominions, to secure the traveller and merchant, to restrain the depredations of the soldier, to cherish the labours of the husbandman, to encourage industry and learning, and, by an equal and moderate assessment, to increase the revenue, without increasing the taxes, are indeed the duties of a prince; but, in the discharge of these duties, he finds an ample and immediate recompense. Timour might boast, that, at his accession to the throne, Asia was the prey of anarchy and rapine, whilst under his prosperous monarchy a child, fearless and unhurt, might carry a purse of gold from the East to Such was his confidence of merit, that from this reformation he derived an excuse for his victorics, and a title to universal dominion. four following observations will serve to appreciate his claim to the public gratitude; and perhaps we shall conclude, that the Mogul emperor was rather the scourge than the benefactor of mankind. 1. If some partial disorders, some local oppressions, were healed by the sword of Timour, the remedy was far more pernicious than the disease. By their rapine, cruelty, and discord, the petty tyrants of Persia might afflict their subjects; but whole nations were crushed under the footsteps of the reformer. The ground which had been occupied by flourishing cities, was often marked by his abominable trophies, by columns, or pyramids, of human heads. Astracan, Carizme, Delhi, Ispa-· .han, Bagdad, Aleppo, Damascus, Boursa, Smyrna, and a thousand others, were sacked, or burnt, or utterly destroyed, in his presence, and by his troops; and perhaps his conscience would have been startled, if a priest or philosopher had dared to number the millions of victims whom he had sacrificed to the establishment of peace and order". 2. His most destructive wars were rather inroads than conquests. He invaded Turkestan, Kipzak, Russia, Hindostan, Syria, Anatolia, Armenia, and Georgia, without a hope or a desire of preserving those distant provinces. From thence he departed laden with spoil; but he left behind him neither troops to awe the contumacious, nor magistrates to protect the obedient, natives. When he had ⁶⁹ Besides the bloody passages of this narrative, I must refer to an anticipation in the sixth volume of the Decline and Fall, which in a single note (p. 56, note 25) accumulates near 300,000 heads of the monuments of his cruelty. Except in Rowe's play on the fifth of November, I did not expect to hear of Timour's annable moderation (White's preface, p. 7.). Yet I can excuse a generous enthusiasin in the reader, and still more in the editor, or the Institutions.

CHAP. LXV.

broken the fabric of their ancient government, he abandoned them to the evils which his invasion had aggravated or caused, nor were these evils compensated by any present or possible benefits. 3. The kingdoms of Transoxiana and Persia were the proper field which he laboured to cultivate and adorn, as the perpetual inheritance of his familv. But his peaceful labours were often interrupted, and sometimes blasted, by the absence of the conqueror. While he triumphed on the Volga or the Ganges, his servants, and even his sons. forgot their master and their duty. The public and private injuries were poorly redressed by the tardy rigour of inquiry and punishment; and we must be content to praise the Institutions of Timour, as the specious idea of a perfect monarchy. 4. Whatsoever might be the blessings of his administration, they evaporated with his life. reign, rather than to govern, was the ambition of his children and grandchildren to; the enemies of each other and of the people. A fragment of the empire was upheld with some glory by Sharokh, his youngest son; but after his decease, the scene was again involved in darkness and blood; and before the end of a century, Transoxiana and Persia were trampled by the Uzbeks from the north, and the Turkmans of the black and white sheep. The race of Timour would have been extinet, if an hero, his descendant in the fifth degree, had not fled before the Uzbek arms to the conquest of Hindostan. His successors (the great Moguls") extended their sway from the mountains of Cashmir to Cape Comorin, and from Candahar to the gulf of Bengal. Since the reign of Aurungzebe, their empire has been dissolved; their treasures of Delhi have been rifled by a Persian robber: and the richest of their kingdoms is now possessed by a company of Christian merchants, of a remote island in the Northern ocean.

⁷⁰ Consult the last chapters of Sherefeddin and Arabshah, and M. de Guignes (Hist. des Huns, tom. iv. l. xx.), Fraser's History of Nadir Shah, p. 1—62. The story of Timour's descendants is unperfectly told; and the second and third parts of Sherefeddin are unknown.

CHAP.

LXV.

Far different was the fate of the Ottoman Challwars monarchy. The massy trunk was bent to the of the sour ground, but no sooner did the hurricane pass A.D 1403. away, than it again rose with fresh vigour and more lively vegetation. When Timour, in every sense, had evacuated Anatolia, he left the cities without a palace, a treasure, or a king. open country was overspread with hordes of shepherds and robbers of Tartar or Tarkman origin; the recent conquests of Bajazet were restored to the emirs, one of whom, in base revenge, demolished his sepulchre; and his five sons were cager. by civil discord, to consume the remnant of their patrimony. I shall enumerate their names in the order of their age and actions 70. 1. It is doubt- 1 Mustaful, whether I relate the story of the true Mus- pha, tapha, or of an impostor who personated that lost

⁷¹ Shah Allum, the present Mogul, is in the fourteenth decree from Timour, by Miran Shah, his third son. See the second volume of Dow's History of Hudostan.

⁷² The civil wars, from the death of Bajazet to that of Mustapha, are related, according to the Turks, by Demetrius Cantemir (p. 58 -82.). Of the Greeks, Chalcondyles (l. iv. and v.), Phranza 1 i c 30-32.), and Ducas (c. 18-27), the last is the most copius and best informed.

He fought by his father's side in the prince. battle of Angora: but when the captive sultan was permitted to inquire for his children, Mousa alone could be found; and the Turkish historians. the slaves of the triumphant faction, are persuaded that his brother was confounded among the slain. If Mustapha escaped from that disastrous field. he was concealed twelve years from his friends and enemics; till he emerged in Thessaly, and was hailed by a numerous party, as the son and successor of Bajazet. His first defeat would have been his last, had not the true, or false, Mustapha been saved by the Greeks, and restored, after the decease of his brother Mahomet, to liberty and empire. A degenerate mind seemed to argue his spurious birth: and if, on the throne of Adrianople, he was adored as the Ottoman sultan, his flight, his fetters, and an ignominious gibbet, delivered the impostor to popular contempt. similar character and claim was asserted by several rival pretenders; thirty persons are said to have suffered under the name of Mustapha; and these frequent executions may perhaps insinuate, that the Turkish court was not perfectly secure of the death of the lawful prince. 2. After his father's captivity, Isa73 reigned for some time in the neighbourhood of Angora, Sinope, and the Black Sea; and his ambassadors were dismissed from the presence of Timour with fair promises and honourable gifts. But their master was soon deprived of his province and life, by a jealous brother, the sovereign of Amasia; and the final event suggested a pious allusion, that the law of Moses and Jesus, of Isa and Mousa, had been abrogated by the greater Mahomet. 3. Soliman is not num- (Solomon, bered in the list of the Turkish emperors: yet he AD 1100 checked the victorious progress of the Moguls; and after their departure, united for a while the thrones of Adrianople and Boursa. In war he -was brave, active, and fortunate: his courage was softened by elemency; but it was likewise inflamed by presumption, and corrupted by intemperance and idleness. He relaxed the nerves of discipline, in a government where either the subject or the sovereign must continually tremble: his vices alienated the chiefs of the army and the law; and his daily drunkenness, so contemptible in a prince and a man, was doubly odious in a disciple of the prophet. In the slumber of intoxication he was surprised by his brother Mousa; and as he fled from Adrianople towards the Byzantine capital. Soliman was overtaken and slain in a bath. after a reign of seven years and ten months. The investiture of Mousa degraded him as the slave of the Moguls: his tributary kingdom of Anatolia was confined within a narrow limit, nor could his broken militia and empty treasury contend with the hardy and veteran bands of the sovereign of Romania. Mousa fled in disguise from the palace of Boursa; traversed the Propoutis in an open boat; wandered over the Walachian and Servian hills; and after some vain attempts, ascended the throne of Adrianople, so recently stained with the blood of Soliman. In a reign

⁷³ Arabshah, ton. 11. c. 26. whose testimony on this occasion is weighty and valuable. The existence of I a (unknown to the Turks) is likewise confirmed by Sherefeddin (l. v. c. 57.).

4. 4 Men a

CHAP. LXV.

o Mahomet L

A D 1413

-1321.

of three years and an half, his troops were victorious against the Christians of Hungary and the Morea; but Mousa was ruined by his timorous disposition and unseasonable elemency. After resigning the sovereignty of Anatolia, he fell a victim to the perfidy of his ministers, and the superior ascendant of his brother Mahomet. 5. The final victory of Mahomet was the just recompense of his prudence and moderation. Before his father's captivity, the royal youth had been entrusted with the government of Amasia, thirty days journey from Constantinople, and the Turkish frontier against the Christians of Trebizond and Georgia. The castle, in Asiatic warfare, was esteemed impregnable; and the city of Amasia74. which is equally divided by the river Iris, rises on either side in the form of an amphitheatre, and represents on a smaller scale the image of Bagdad. In his rapid career, Timour appears to have overlooked this obscure and contumacious angle of Anatolia; and Mahomet, without provoking the conqueror, maintained his silent independence, and chased from the province the last stragglers of the Tartar host. He relieved himself from the dangerous neighbourhood of Isa; but in the contests of their more powerful brethren, his firm neutrality was respected: till, after the triumph of Mousa, he stood forth the heir and avenger of the unfortunate Soliman. Mahomet obtained Anatolia by treaty, and Romania by arms: and the soldier who presented him with the head of 73 Ambshah, loc. entat - Abulfeda, Geograph tab xvii p. 302 Bushequrus, epi-t i p. 96, 97 in Innere C. P. et Amasiano.

Mousa, was rewarded as the benefactor of his king and country. The eight years of his sole and peaceful reign were usefully employed in banishing the vices of civil discord, and restoring on a firmer basis the fabric of the Ottoman monarchy. His last care was the choice of two vizirs, Bajazet and Ibrahim 25, who might guide the wouth of his Regnot son Amurath; and such was their union and pro- Amurath ! dence, that they concealed above forty days the AD 1121 emperor's death, till the arrival of his successor in Feb 9 the palace of Boursa. A new war was kindled in ____ . Europe by the prince, or impostor, Mustapha; the first vizir lost his army and his head; but the more fortunate Ibrahim, whose name and family are still revered, extinguished the last pretender to the throne of Bajazet, and closed the scene of domestic hostility.

In these conflicts, the wisest Turks, and indeed Resonant the body of the nation, were strongly attached to of the Ontonian the unity of the empire; and Romania and Ana- empire; tolia, so often torn asunder by private ambition, were animated by a strong and invincible tendency of cohesion. Their efforts might have instructed the Christian powers; and had they occupied, with a confederate fleet, the streights of Gallipoli, the Ottomans, at least in Europe, must have been But the schism of the speedily annihilated. West, and the factions and wars of France and England, diverted the Latins from this generous 75 The virtues of Ibrahim are praised by a contemporary Greel (Ducas, c 25.) His descendants are the sole nobles in Turkey they content themselves with the administration of his pious foundations, are excused from public offices, and receive two annual visits from the sultan (Cantenni, p. 76).

CHAP, enterprise: they enjoyed the present respite, without a thought of futurity; and were often tempted by a momentary interest to serve the common enemy of their religion. A colony of Genocse7, which had been planted at Phocæa" on the Ionian coast, was enriched by the lucrative monopoly of alum78; and their tranquillity, under the Turkish empire, was secured by the annual payment of tribute. In the last civil war of the Ottomans. the Genoese governor, Adorno, a bold and ambitious youth, embraced the party of Amurath; and undertook, with seven stout gallies, to transport him from Asia to Europe. The sultan and five hundred guards embarked on board the admiral's ship; which was manned by eight hundred of the bravest Franks. His life and liberty were in their hands; nor can we, without reluctance, applaud the fidelity of Adorno, who, in the midst of the passage knelt before him, and gratefully accepted a discharge of his arrears of tribute.

> 76 See Pachymer (l. v. c. 29), Nicephorus Gregoras (l. n. c. 1.) Sherefoldin 1 v. c. 57), and Ducas, p. 25 . The last of these, a curious and careful observer, is entitled, from his birth and station, to particular credit in all that concerns Ionia and the islands. Among the nations that resorted to New Phoexa, he mentions the lenglish (15; Apror); an early evidence of Mediterranean trade > 77 For the sport of mangation, and freedom of ancient Phocaes. or rather of the Phora ans, consult the 1st book of Herodotus, and the Geographical Index of his last and learned French translator, M. Laicher (tom. vii. p. 299.).

> 76 Phocaca is not enumerated by Pliny (Hi t Nat. xxxv. 52.) among the places productive of alum, he reckons Egypt as the fact, and for the second the ide of Melos, whose alum mines are described by Tournefort (tom.) lettre iv), a traveller and a naturabs). After the loss of Photoca, the Genocse, in 1459, found that useful underal in the isle of Ischia (Ismael, Bouilland, ad Ducam, c. C. .).

They landed in sight of Mustapha and Gallipoli; two thousand Italians, armed with lances and battle-axes, attended Amurath to the conquest of Adrianople; and this venal service was soon repaid by the ruin of the commerce and colony of Phocaea.

CHAP. LXV.

If Timour had generously marched at the re- State of quest, and to the relief, of the Greek emperor, he empare, might be entitled to the praise and gratitude of 1 D 1-02 the Christians?". But a Musulman, who carried into Georgia the sword of persecution, and re-_ > - spected the holy warfare of Bajazet, was not disposed to pity or succour the idolaters of Europe. The Tartar followed the impulse of ambition; and the deliverance of Constantinople was the accidental consequence. When Manuel abdicated the government, it was his prayer, rather than his hope, that the ruin of the church and state might be delayed beyond his unhappy days; and after his return from a western pilgrimage, he expected every hour the news of the sad catastrophe. a sudden, he was astonished and rejoiced by the intelligence of the retreat, the overthrow, and the captivity of the Ottoman. Manuel" immediately 79 The writer who has the most ibn ed this tabalous generes ty, is our ingenious Sir William Temple threworks, vol. in. p. 349, 250 octive edition, that lover of exotic virue. After the conquest of Russia, &c and the passage of the Danub , his Total hero relieves, visits, admires, and refuses the city of Constantine. His flattering pencil deviates in every line from the trade or history, yet his pleasure fictions are more excusable than the gross errors of Cademir.

30 For the reigns of Manuel and John, of Mahomet I and Augusth II see the Othman history of Cantemir (p. 70-05), and the three Greeks, Chalcondyles, Phranza, and Ducas, who is still superior to his rivals.

sailed from Modon in the Morea; ascended the throne of Constantinople, and dismissed his blind competitor to an easy exile in the isle of Lesbos. The ambassadors of the son of Bajazet were soon introduced to his presence; but their pride was fallen, their tone was modest; they were awed by the just apprehension, lest the Greeks should open to the Moguls the gates of Europe. Soliman saluted the emperor by the name of father; solicited at his hands the government or gift of Romania; and promised to deserve his favour by inviolable friendship, and the restitution of Thessalonica, with the most important places along the Strymon, the Propontis, and the Black Sea. alliance of Soliman exposed the emperor to the enmity and revenge of Mousa: the Turks appeared in arms before the gates of Constantinople; but they were repulsed by sea and land; and unless the city was guarded by some foreign mercenaries, the Greeks must have wondered at their own triumph. But, instead of prolonging the division of the Ottoman powers, the policy or passion of Manuel was tempted to assist the most formidable of the sons of Bajazet. He concluded a treaty with Mahomet, whose progress was checked by the insuperable barrier of Gallipoli: the sultan and his troops were transported over the Bosphorus; he was hospitably entertained in the capital; and his successful sally was the first step to the conquest of Romania. The ruin was suspended by the prudence and moderation of the conqueror: he faithfully discharged his own obligations and those of Soliman, respected the laws of gratitude and peace; and left the emperor guardian of his two younger sons, in the vain hope of saving them from the jealous cruelty of their brother Amu-But the execution of his last testament would have offended the national honour and religion: and the divan unanimously pronounced, that the royal youths should never be abandoned to the custody and education of a Christian dog. On this refusal, the Byzantine councils were divided: but the age and caution of Manuel vielded to the presumption of his son John; and they unsheathed a dangerous weapon of revenge, by dismissing the true or false Mustapha, who had long been detained as a captive and hostage, and for whose maintenance they received an annual pension of three hundred thousand aspers. At the door of his prison, Mustapha subscribed to every proposal; and the keys of Gallipoli, or rather of Europe, were stipulated as the price of his deliverance. But no sooner was he scated on the throne of Romania, than he dismissed the Greek ambassadors with a smile of contempt, declaring, in a pious tone, that, at the day of judgment, he would rather answer for the violation of an oath, than for the surrender of a Musulman city into the hands of the infidels. The emperor was at once the enemy of the two rivals; from whom he had at The Turkish asper (from the Greek acomos) is, or we, a price of white or other money, at present much debased, but which was formerly equivalent to the 54th part, at least, of a Venetian chical or sequing and the 300,000 aspers, a princely allowance or royal tithute, may be computed at 2500l, sterling (Leunclay Pandort Ture, p. 400—408).

CHAP

CHAP $\Gamma X L \cdot$

Siege of Constantinople by Amusath II. June 10sustained, and to whom he had offered, an injury; and the victory of Amurath was followed, in the ensuing spring, by the siege of Constantinople'.

The religious merit of subduing the city of the Casars, attracted from Asia a crowd of volunteers, who aspired to the crown of martyrdom: A D 1422, their military ardour was inflamed by the promise August24. of rich spoils and beautiful females; and the sultan's ambition was consecrated by the presence and prediction of Seid Bechar, a descendant of the prophet', who arrived in the camp, on a mule, with a venerable train of five hundred disciples. But he might blush, if a fanatic could blush, at the failure of his assurances. The strength of the walls resisted an army of two hundred thousand Turks: their assaults were repelled by the sallies of the Greeks and their foreign mercenaries; the old resources of defence were opposed to the new engines of attack; and the enthusiasm of the dervish, who was snatched to heaven in visionary converse with Mahomet, was answered by the credulity of the Christians, who beheld the Virgin Mary, in a violet garment, walking on the rampart and animating their courage¹⁴. After a siege of two months, Amurath was recalled to Boursa by a domestic revolt; which had been kindled by Greek treachery, and was soon extinguished by the death of a guiltless brother. While he led his Janizaries to new con- The emquests in Europe and Asia, the Byzantine empire Palæolowas indulged in a servile and precarious respite of gus I. thirty years. Manuel sunk into the grave; and July 21-John Palæologus was permitted to reign, for an Oct. 31. annual tribute of three hundred thousand aspers, and the dereliction of almost all that he held beyoud the suburbs of Constantinople.

⁸² For the siege of Constantinople in 1422, see the particular and contemporary narrange of John Cananus, published by Leo Allatius, at the end of his edition of Aeropolita (p. 188-190).

⁴³ Contemir, p. 80. Cananus, who describes Seid Bechar without naming him, supposes that the friend of Mahomet assumed in his amours the privilege of a prophet, and that the fairest of the Greek nuns were promised to the saint and his disciples.

⁶⁴ For this miraculous apparition, Cananus appeals to the Musolman saint; but who will bear testimony for Seid Bechar:

In the establishment and restoration of the Hereditary ...Turkish empire, the first merit must doubtless be and merit assigned to the personal qualities of the sultans; of the Otsince, in human life, the most important scenes will depend on the character of a single actor. By some shades of wisdom and virtue, they may be discriminated from each other; but, except in a single instance, a period of nine reigns, and two hundred and sixty-five years, is occupied, from the elevation of Othman to the death of Soliman, by a rare series of warlike and active princes, who impressed their subjects with obedience and their enemies with terror. Instead of the slothful luxury of the seraglio, the heirs of royalty were educated in the council and the field: from early youth they were entrusted by their fathers with the command of provinces and armies; and this manly institution, which was often productive of civil war, must have essentially contributed to the discipline and vigour of the monarchy. The Ottomans cannot style themselves, like the Arabian caliphs, the descendants or successors of the apostle of God; and the kindred which they claim with CHAP. the Tartar khans of the house of Zingis, appears to be founded in flattery rather than in truth ... Their origin is obscure; but their sacred and indefeasible right, which no time can crase, and no violence can infringe, was soon and unalterably implanted in the minds of their subjects. A weak or vicious sultan may be deposed and strangled; but his inheritance devolves to an infant or an ideot: nor has the most daring rebel presumed to ascend the throne of his lawful sovereign 16. While the transient dynastics of Asia have been continually subverted by a crafty vizir in the palace ora victorious general in the camp, the Ottoman succession has been confirmed by the practice of five centuries, and is now incorporated with the vital principle of the Turkish nation.

Education and discipline of the Turks.

To the spirit and constitution of that nation, a strong and singular influence may however be ascribed. The primitive subjects of Othman were the four hundred families of wandering Turkmans, who had followed his ancestors from the Oxus to the Sangar; and the plains of Anatolia are still covered with the white and black tents of their rustic brethren. But this original drop was dissolved in the mass of voluntary and vanquished subjects, who, under the name of Turks, are united by the common ties of religion, language, and manners. In the cities, from Erzeroum to Belgrade, that national appellation is common to all the Moslems, the first and most honourable inhabitants; but they have abandoned, at least in Romania, the villages, and the cultivation of the land, to the Christian peasants. In the vigorous age of the Ottoman government, the Turks were themselves excluded from all civil and military. . honours; and a servile class, an artificial people, was raised by the discipline of education to obey, to conquer, and to command of. From the time of Orchan and the first Amurath, the sultans were persuaded that a government of the sword must be renewed in each generation with new soldiers; and that such soldiers must be sought, not in effeminate Asia, but among the bearly and warlike natives of Europe. The provinces of Thrace, Macedonia, Albania, Bulgaria, and Servia, became the perpetual seminary of the Turkish army; and when the royal fifth of the captives was diminished by conquest, an inhuman tax, of the fifth child, or of every fifth year, was rigorously levied on the Christian families. At the age of twelve or fourteen years, the most robust youths were torn from their parents; their names were enrolled in a book; and from that moment ⁸⁷ Chalcondyles (1.v.) and Duens (e. 23.5 exhibit the rude lineaments of the Ottoman policy, and the transmitation of Christian children into Turkish soldiers.

85 See Ricant (1), c. 13) The Turkish sultans assume the title of khan. Yet Abulghazi is ignorant of his Ottoman cousins, 86 The third grand vizir of the name of Kiuperli, who was slain at the battle of Salankanen in 1691 (Cantemir, p. 382.), presumed to say, that all the successors of Soliman had been fools or tyrants, and that it was time to abolish the race (Marsigh Stato Militare, &c. p. 28) This political heretic was a good whig, and justified against the French ambassador the revolution of England (Mignot, Hist, des Ottomaus, tom, m. p. 434.1. His presumption condemns the singular exception of continuing offices in the same family.

CHAP, they were clothed, taught, and maintained, for the public service. According to the promise of their appearance, they were selected for the royal schools of Boursa, Pera, and Adrianople, entrusted to the care of the bashaws, or dispersed in the houses of the Anatolian peasantry. It was the first care of their masters to instruct them in the Turkish language: their bodies were exercised by every labour that could fortify their strength; they learned to wrestle, to leap, to run, to shoot with the bow, and afterwards with the musket: till they were drafted into the chambers and companies of the Janizaries, and severely trained in the military or monastic discipline of the order. The youths most conspicuous for birth, talents, and beauty, were admitted into the inferior class of Agiamoglans, or the more liberal rank of Ichoglans, of whom the former were attached to the palace, and the latter to the person of the prince. In four successive schools, under the rod of the white cunuchs, the arts of horsemanship and of darting the javelin were their daily exercise, while those of a more studious cast applied themselves to the study of the Koran, and the knowledge of the Arabic and Persian tongues. As they advanced in seniority and merit, they were gradually dismissed to military, civil, and even ecclesiastical employments: the longer their stay, the higher was their expectation; till, at a mature period, they were admitted into the number of the forty agas, who stood before the sultan, and were promoted by his choice to the government of provinces and the first honours of the empire. Such a mode of institution was ad- CHAP. mirably adapted to the form and spirit of a despotic monarchy. The ministers and generals were, . in the strictest sense, the slaves of the emperor, to whose bounty they were indebted for their instruction and support. When they left the seraglio, and suffered their beards to grow as the symbol of enfranchisement, they found themselves in an important office, without faction or friendship, without parents and without heirs, dependent on the hand which had raised them from the dust. and which, on the slightest displeasure, could break in pieces these statues of glass, as they are aptly termed by the Turkish proverb". In the slow and painful steps of education, their character and talents were unfolded to a discerning eve: the man, naked and alone, was reduced to the standard of his personal merit; and, if the sovereign had wisdom to chuse, he possessed a pure and boundless liberty of choice. The Ottoman candidates were trained by the virtues of abstinence to those of action; by the habits of submission to those of command. A similar spirit was diffused among the troops; and their silence and sobriety, their patience and modesty, have extorted the re-

⁸⁸ This sketch of the Turkish education and decaptive is chiefly borrowed from Ricaut's State of the Ottoman Empire, the Stuo Militare del' Imperio Ottomanno ol count Marsigh, in Haya, 1732, in folio), and a Discription of the Seraelio, approved by Mr. Greaves hunselt, a currous traveller, and reserved in the second volume of his works

⁶⁹ From the series of excitants, till the siege of Vienna (Marsich, p. 13%, their place may be valued at this years and shalf purchase

CHAP. LXV luctant praise of their Christian enemics. Nor can the victory appear doubtful, if we compare the discipline and exercise of the Janizaries with the pride of birth, the independence of chivalry, the ignorance of the new levies, the mutinous temper of the veterans, and the vices of intemperance and disorder, which so long contaminated the armies of Europe.

Invention and use of gunpowder.

The only hope of salvation for the Greek empire, and the adjacent kingdoms, would have been some more powerful weapon, some discovery in the art of war, that should give them a decisive superiority over their Turkish foes. Such a weavon was in their hands; such a discovery had been made in the critical moment of their fate. chymists of China or Europe had found, by casual or claborate experiments, that a mixture of saltpetre, sulphur, and charcoal, produces, with a spark of fire, a tremendous explosion. It was soon observed, that if the expansive force were compressed in a strong tube, a ball of stone or iron might be expelled with irresistible and destructive velocity. The precise æra of the invention and application of gunpowder" is involved in doubtful traditions and equivocal language; yet we may clearly discern, that it was known before the middle of the fourteenth century; and that before the end of the same, the use of artillery in battles and sieges. by sea and land, was familiar to the states of Germany, Italy, Spain, France, and England. The priority of nations is of small account; none could derive any exclusive benefit from their previous or superior knowledge; and in the common improvement, they stood on the same level of relative power and military science. Nor was it possible to circumscribe the secret within the pale of the church; it was disclosed to the Turks by the treachery of apostates and the selfish policy of rivals; and the sultans had sense to adopt, and wealth to reward, the talents of a Christian engineer. Genoese, who transported Amurath into Europe, must be accused as his preceptors; and it was probably by their hands that his cannon was cast and directed at the siege of Constantinople"3. The first attempt was indeed unsuccessful; but in the general warfare of the age, the advantage was on their side who were most commonly the assailants: for a while the proportion of the attack and defence was suspended; and this thundering artillery was pointed against the walls and towers

⁹⁰ See the entertaining and judicious letters of Busbequius.

⁹¹ The first and second volumes of Dr. Warson's Chemical Essays contain two valuable discourses on the discovery and composition of gunpowder

CHAP. LXV

92 On this subject modern testimonies cannot be trusted. The original passages are collected by Ducange (Gloss Latin ton) i. p. 675. Bombardo). But in the early doubtful twile hi, the name, sound, fire, and effect, that seem to express our artiflery, may be fairly interpreted of the old engines and the Greck fare. For the English cannon at Creey, the authority of John Villain (Chron, I and 653) must be weighed against the altence of Frossard. Yet Muraton. Antiquit, Italia media. Evi, torn in Dissert XXVI p. 5143. This produced a decrease passage from Petrarch de Remedia attrusque Fortuna Dialog), who, before the year 1444, executes this terpestral thunder, name rara, name commun.

95 The Turk'sh cannon, which Dieas (c=30 \) first introduces before Belgrade (A=D=1430), is mentioned by Chalcondyles (1/8) p=1 \(\mathbb{O}\) in 1422, at the siege of Constantinople.

CHAP. LXV.

which had been erected only to resist the less potent engines of antiquity. By the Venetians, the use of gunpowder was communicated without reproach to the sultans of Egypt and Persia, their allies against the Ottoman power; the secret was soon propagated to the extremities of Asia; and the advantage of the European was confined to his easy victories over the savages of the new world. If we contrast the rapid progress of this mischievous discovery with the slow and laborious advances of reason, science, and the arts of peace, a philosopher, according to his temper, will laugh. or weep at the folly of mankind.

CHAP. LXVI.

Applications of the Eastern Emperors to the Popes .- Visits to the West, of John the First, Manuel, and John the Second, Palacologus .--Union of the Greek and Latin Churches, promoted by the Council of Basil, and concluded at Ferrara and Florence.-State of Literature at Constantinople .-- Its Revival in Italy by the Greek Fugitives .- Curiosity and Emulation of the Latins.

In the four last centuries of the Greek emperors, their friendly or hostile aspect towards the pope and the Latins may be observed as the thermo- Embassy meter of their prosperity or distress; as the scale of of the vounger the rise and fall of the Barbarian dynasties. When Andronsthe Turks of the house of Seljuk pervaded Asia, none Beand threatened Constantinople, we have seen at indust XII the council of Placentia, the suppliant ambassa- A D. 1339 dors of Alexius imploring the protection of the common father of the Christians. No sooner had the arms of the French pilgrims removed the sultan from Nice to Iconium, than the Greek princes resumed, or avowed, their genuine hatred and contempt for the schismatics of the West, which precipitated the first downfal of their empire. date of the Mogul invasion is marked in the soft and charitable language of John Vataces.

VOL. XII.

CHAP LXVI.

the recovery of Constantinople, the throne of the first Palæologus was encompassed by foreign and domestic enemies: as long as the sword of Charles was suspended over his head, he basely courted the favour of the Roman pontiff; and sacrificed to the present danger, his faith, his virtue, and the affection of his subjects. On the decease of Michael, the prince and people asserted the independence of their church, and the purity of their creed: the elder Andronicus neither feared nor loved the 'Latins: in his last distress pride was the safeguard of superstition; nor could he decently retract in his age the firm and orthodox declarations of his youth. His grandson, the younger Andronicus, was less a slave in his temper and situation; and the conquest of Bithynia by the Turks, admonished him to seek a temporal and spiritual alliance with the Western princes. After a separation and silence of fifty years, a secret agent, the monk Barlaam, was dispatched to pope Benedict the twelfth: and his artful instructions appear to have been drawn by the master-hand of the great domestic1. "Most holy father," was he commissioned to say, "the emperor is not less " desirous than yourself of an union between the " two churches: but in this delicate transaction. " he is obliged to respect his own dignity and the

The arguments for a crusade and union

¹ This curious instruction was transcribed (I believe) from the Vatican archives, by Odoricus Raynaldus, in his Continuation of the Annals of Baromus (Romas, 1646—1677, in x volumes in folio). I have contented myself with the Abbé Fleury (Hist. Ecclesiastique, tom. xx p. 1—8.), whose abstracts I have always found to be clear, accurate, and impartial.

" mejudices of his subjects. The ways of union " are two-fold; force, and persuasion. Of force, " the inefficacy has been already tried; since the " Latins have subdued the empire, without sub-"duing the minds, of the Greeks. The method " of persuasion, though slow, is sure and perma-" nent. A deputation of thirty or forty of our " doctors would probably agree with those of the " Vatican, in the love of truth and the unity of " belief, but on their return, what would be the " use, the recompense of such agreement? the "scorn of their brethren, and the reproaches of "a blind and obstinate nation. Yet that nation " is accustomed to reverence the general councils, " which have fixed the articles of our faith; and " if they reprobate the decrees of Lyons, it is be-"cause the Eastern churches were neither heard " nor represented in that arbitrary meeting. For " this salutary end, it will be expedient, and even " necessary, that a well-chosen legate should be " sent into Greece, to convene the patriarchs of " Constantinople, Alexandria, Antioch, and Je-" rusalem; and, with their aid, to prepare a free "and universal synod. But at this moment," continued the subtle agent, "the empire is as-" saulted and endangered by the Turks, who have " occupied four of the greatest cities in Anatolia. " The Christian inhabitants have expressed a wish " of returning to their allegiance and religion; " but the forces and revenues of the emperor are " insufficient for their deliverance: and the Roman " legate must be accompanied, or preceded, by an " army of Franks, to expel the infidels, and open

CHAP

CHAP LXVI.

" a way to the holy sepulchre." If the suspicious Latins should require some pledge, some previous effect of the sincerity of the Greeks, the auswers of Barlaam were perspicuous and rational. " 1. A general synod can alone consummate the " union of the churches; nor can such a synod be "held till the three Oriental patriarchs, and a " great number of bishops, are enfranchised from " the Mahometan yoke. 2. The Greeks are alien-" ated by a long series of oppression and injury: . " they must be reconciled by some act of brotherly " love, some effectual succour, which may fortify " the authority and arguments of the emperor, and "the friends of the union. 3. If some difference " of faith or ceremonies should be found incurable. " the Greeks however are the disciples of Christ; " and the Turks are the common enemies of the " Christian name. The Armenians, Cyprians, "and Rhodians, are equally attacked; and it " will become the piety of the French princes " to draw their swords in the general defence of 4. Should the subjects of Androni-" religion. " cus be treated as the worst of schismatics, of " heretics, of pagans, a judicious policy may yet "instruct the powers of the West to embrace an " useful ally, to uphold a sinking empire, to guard "the confines of Europe; and rather to join the "Greeks against the Turks, than to expect the " union of the Turkish arms with the troops and " treasures of captive Greece." The reasons, the offers, and the demands, of Andronicus, were eluded with cold and stately indifference. kings of France and Naples declined the dangers and glory of a crusade: the pope refused to call a new synod to determine old articles of CHAP faith: and his regard for the obsolete claims of LXVI the Latin emperor and clergy engaged him to use an offensive superscription; "To the moderator" " of the Greeks, and the persons who style them-" selves the patriarchs of the Eastern churches." For such an embassy, a time and character less propitious could not easily have been found. Benedict the twelfth' was a dull peasant, perplexed with scruples, and immersed in sloth and wine: his pride might enrich with a third crown the papal tiara, but he was alike unfit for the regal and the pastoral office.

After the decease of Andronicus, while the Noon Greeks were distracted by intestine war, they tomot Cantenacould not presume to agitate a general union of reac wah the Christians. But as soon as Cantacuzene had \" subdued and pardoned his enemies, he was anxious $^{A(\mathrm{D}(1))}$ to justify, or at least to extenuate, the introduction of the Turks into Europe, and the nuptials of his daughter with a Musulman prince.

2 The ambiguity of this title is happy or ingenious, and roalsrator, as synonymous to rector, gulernator, is a word of classical, and even Ciccronian, Latinity, which may be found, not in the Glossary of Ducange, but in the Thesaurus of Robert Stephen

3 The first epistle (sine titulo) of Petrarch exposes the danger of the bark, and the meapacity of the pilot Here mier, vino maddie, ævo gravis, ac soponfero rore perfusus, jamjani mutiat, dornutat, jani soinno praccess, atque / atmam solus) ruit telicius patrio terram sulcasset aratro, quam scalimum piscatorium ascendisset. This satire engages his biographer to weigh the virtues and vices of Benedict XII which have been exaggerated by Guelphs and Ghibelines, by Papists and Protestants (see Memones sur la Vie de Petrarque, tom. 1 p. 259, n noi xv p. 13-16 . He gave occasion to the saying, Bibanius papaliter.

CHAP. LXVI. officers of state, with a Latin interpreter, were sent in his name to the Roman court, which was transplanted to Avignon, on the banks of the Rhône, during a period of seventy years; they represented the hard necessity which had urged him to embrace the alliance of the miscreants, and pronounced by his command the specious and edifying sounds of union and crusade. Pope Clement the Sixth', the successor of Benedict, received them with hospitality and honour, acknowledged the innocence of their sovereign, excused his distress, applauded his magnanimity, and displayed a clear knowledge of the state and revolutions of the Greek empire, which he had imbibed from the honest accounts of a Savoyard lady, an attendant of the empress Anne'. If Clement was ill endowed with the virtues of a priest, he possessed however the spirit and magnificence of a prince, whose liberal hand distributed benefices and kingdoms with equal facility. Under his reign Avignon was the seat of pomp and pleasure: in his youth he had surpassed the licentiousness of a baron; and the palace, nay, the bed-chamber of the pope, was adorned, or polluted, by the visits of his female favourites. The wars of France and England were adverse to the holy enterprise; but his vanity was amused by the splendid idea; and the Greek ambassadors returned with two Latin bishops, the ministers of the pontiff. On their arrival at Constantinople, the emperor and the nuncies admired each other's piety and elequence: and their frequent conferences were filled with mutual praises and promises, by which both parties were amused, and neither could be deceived. " I am delighted," said the devout Cantacuzene, " with the project of our holy war, which must re-"dound to my personal glory, as well as to the " public benefit of Christendom. My dominions " will give a free passage to the armics of France: " my troops, my gallies, my treasures. shall be " consecrated to the common cause; and happy " would be my fate, could I deserve and obtain " the crown of martyrdom. Words are insuffi-"cient to express the ardour with which I sigh " for the re-union of the scattered members of "Christ. If my death could avail, I would " gladly present my sword and my neck: if the " spiritual phœnix could arise from my ashes, I " would erect the pile, and kindle the flame with "my own hands." Yet the Greek emperor presumed to observe, that the articles of faith which divided the two churches had been introduced by the pride and precipitation of the Latins: he disclaimed the servile and arbitrary steps of the first Palæologus; and firmly declared, that he would never submit his conscience unless to the decrees of a free and universal synod. "The situation of

See the original Lives of Clement VI. in Muratori (Script. Rerum Italicarum, tom. iii. P. ii. p. 550—589.), Matteo Villani (Chron. l. iii. c. 43. in Muratori, tom. xiv. p. 186.) who styles him, molto cavallaresco, poco religioso; Fleury (Hist. Eccles. tom. xx p. 126.) and the Vie de Petrarque (tom. ii. p. 42—45.). The Abbé de Sade treats him with the most indulgence; but he is a gentleman as well as a priest.

⁵ Her name (most probably corrupted) was Zampea. She had accompanied, and alone remained with her mistress at Constantinople, where her prudence, erudition, and politicness, deserved the praises of the Greeks themselves (Cantacuzen. l. 1. c. 42.).

CHAP. LXVI. CHAP. LXVI

"the times," continued he, "will not allow the " pope and myself to meet either at Rome or "Constantinople; but some maritime city may "be chosen on the verge of the two empires, to "unite the bishops, and to instruct the faithful. " of the East and West." The nuncios seemed content with the proposition; and Cantacuzene affects to deplore the failure of his hopes, which were soon overthrown by the death of Clement, and the different temper of his successor. own life was prolonged, but it was prolonged in a cloister; and, except by his prayers, the humble monk was incapable of directing the counsels of his pupil or the state6.

Treaty of John Palæologus I. cent VI. A.D.1355.

Yet of all the Byzantine princes, that pupil, John Palæologus, was the best disposed to emwith Inno brace, to believe, and to obey, the shepherd of the West. His mother, Anne of Savoy, was baptized in the bosom of the Latin church: her marriage with Andronicus imposed a change of name, of apparel, and of worship, but her heart was still faithful to her country and religion; she had formed the infancy of her son, and she governed the emperor, after his mind, or at least his stature, was enlarged to the size of man. In the first year of his deliverance and restoration, the Turks were still masters of the Hellespont; the son of Cantacuzene was in arms at Adrianople; and Palæologus could depend neither on himself nor on his people. By his mother's advice, and in the hope of foreign aid, he abjured the rights both of the church and state; and the act of slavery, subscribed in purple ink, and sealed with the golden bull, was privately entrusted to an Italian agent. The first article of the treaty is an oath of fidelity and obedience to Innocent the sixth and his successors, the supreme pontiffs of the Roman and Catholic church. The emperor promises to entertain with due reverence their legates and nuncios: to assign a palace for their residence, and a temple for their worship; and to deliver his second son Manuel as the hostage of his faith. For these condescensions he requires a prompt succour of fifteen gallies, with five hundred men at arms, and a thousand archers, to serve against his Christian and Musulman enemies. Palæologus engages to impose on his clergy and people the same spiritual yoke; but as the resistance of the Greeks might be justly foreseen, he adopts the two effectual methods of corruption and education. The legate was empowered to distribute the vacant benefices among the ecclesiastics who should subscribe the creed of the Vatican: three schools were instituted to instruct the youth of Constantinople in the language and doctrine of the Latins; and the name of Andronicus. the heir of the empire, was enrolled as the first student. Should he fail in the measures of persuasion or force, Palæologus declares himself unworthy to reign; trans-

⁶ See this whole negotiation in Cantacuzene (l. iv. c. 9.) who, amidst the praise wirtnes which he bestows on himself, reveals the unessing of a guilty conscience.

⁷ See this ignominious treaty in Fleury (Hist. Eccles p. 151-154.), from Raynaldus, who drew it from the Vatican archives. It was not worth the trouble of a pious forgery.

CHAP. LXVI. ferred to the pope all regal and paternal authority; and invests Innocent with full power to regulate the family, the government, and the marriage, of his son and successor. But this treaty was neither executed nor published: the Roman gallies were as vain and imaginary as the submission of the Greeks; and it was only by the secrecy, that their sovereign escaped the dishonour of this fruitless humiliation.

Visit of John Pa-Leologus to Urban V. at Rome, A.D. 1363, October 13, &c.

The tempest of the Turkish arms soon burst on his head; and, after the loss of Adrianople and Romania, he was inclosed in his capital, the vassal of the haughty Amurath, with the miserable hope of being the last devoured by the savage. In this abject state, Palæologus embraced the resolution of embarking for Venice, and casting himself at the feet of the pope; he was the first of the Byzantine princes who had ever visited the unknown regions of the West, yet in them alone he could seek consolation or relief: and with less violation of his dignity he might appear in the sacred college than at the Ottoman Porte. After a long absence, the Roman pontiffs were returning from Avignon to the banks of the Tyber; Urban the fifth", of a mild and virtuous character, encouraged or allowed the pilgrimage of the Greek prince; and, within the same year, enjoyed the glory of receiving in the Vatican the two Imperial CHAP shadows who represented the majesty of Constantine and Charlemagne. In this suppliant visit, the emperor of Constantinople, whose vanity was lost in his distress, gave more than could be expected of empty sounds and formal submissions. A previous trial was imposed; and in the presence of four cardinals, he acknowledged, as a true Catholic, the supremacy of the pope, and the double procession of the Holy Ghost. After this purification he was introduced to a public audience in the church of St. Peter: Urban, in the midst of the cardinals, was scated on his throne: the Greek monarch, after three genuflexions, devoutly kissed the feet, the hands, and at length the mouth, of the holy father, who celebrated high mass in his presence, allowed him to lead the bridle of his mule, and treated him with a sumptuous banquet in the Vatican. The entertainment of Palæologus was friendly and honourable; yet some difference was observed between the emperors of the East and West'; nor could the former be entitled to the rare privilege of chaunting the gospel in the rank of a deacon ". In favour of his proselyte, Urban

³ See the two first original Lives of Urban Y. (in Muratori, Script. Rerum Italicarum, tom. iii. P. ii. p. 628. 635.), and the Ecolesiastical Annals of Spondanus, tom. i. p. 573. A. D. 1369, No. 7.), and Raynaldus (Fleury, Hist. Eccles. tom. xx. p. 223, 224.). Yet, from some variations, 1 suspect the papel writers of slightly magnifying the genuflexions of Palæologus.

O Paullo minus quam si fuisset Imperator Romanorum his title of Imperator Gracorum was no longer disputed (Vit. Urban V. p. 623.)

¹⁰ It was confined to the successors of Charlemagne, and to them only on Christmas-day. On all other festivals these Imperial deacons were content to serve the pope, as he said mass, with the book and the corporal. Yet the Abbé de Sade generously thinks that the ments of Charles IV, might have entitled him, though not on the proper day (A.D. 1368, November 1) to the Whole privilege. He seems to affix a just value on the privilege, and the man (Vie de Petrarque, tom. iii. p. 735.)

CHAP, strove to rekindle the zeal of the French king, and the other powers of the West; but he found them cold in the general cause, and active only in their domestic quarrels. The last hope of the emperor was in an English mercenary, John Hawkwood", or Acuto, who, with a band of adventurers, the white brotherhood, had ravaged Italy from the Alps to Calabria: sold his services to the hostile states: and incurred a just excommunication by shooting his arrows against the papal residence. A special licence was granted to negotiate with the outlaw, but the forces, or the spirit, of Hawkwood were unequal to the enterprize; and it was for the advantage, perhaps, of Palæologus to be disappointed of a succour, that must have been costly, that could not be effectual, and which might have been dangerous12. The disconsolate Greek 13 prepared for his return, but even his return was impeded by a most ignominious ob- CHAP. stacle. On his arrival at Venice, he had borrowed . IXVI large sums at exorbitant usury; but his coffers were empty, his creditors were impatient, and his person was detained as the best security for the payment. His eldest son Andronicus, the regent of Constantinople, was repeatedly urged to exhaust every resource; and, even by stripping the churches, to extricate his father from captivity and disgrace. But the unnatural youth was insensible of the disgrace, and secretly pleased with the captivity of the emperor; the state was poor, the clergy were obstinate; nor could some religious scruple be wanting to excuse the guilt of his indifference and Such undutiful neglect was severely reproved by the piety of his brother Manuel, who instantly sold or mortgaged all that he possessed, embarked for Venice, relieved his father, and pledged his own freedom to be responsible for the debt. On his return to Constantinople, the parent His return and king distinguished his two sons with suitable stanting rewards; but the faith and manners of the slothful AD 1170 Palæologus had not been improved by his Roman pilgrimage; and his apostacy or conversion, devoid of any spiritual or temporal effects, was speedily forgotten by the Greeks and Latins ".

¹¹ Through some Italian corruptions, the etymology of Falcone an losco (Matteo Villani, l. xi. c. 79. in Muratori, tom xv. p. 746), suggests the English word Hawkwood, the true name of our adventurous countryman (Thomas Walsingham, Hist. Auglican, inter Scriptores Cambdeni, p. 184) After two-and-twenty victories, and one defeat, he died, in 1394, general of the Florentines, and was buried with such honours as the republic has not paid to Dante or Petrarch (Muratori, Annalı d'Italia, tom. xii. p. 212-371.).

¹² This torrent of English (by birth or service) overflowed from France into Italy after the peace of Bretigny in 1360. Yet the exclamation of Muratori (Annali, tom. xii. p. 197.) is rather true than civil. "Ci mancava ancor questo, che dopo essere calpestrata "PItalia da tanti masnadieri Tedeschi ed Ungheri, venissero fin dall' Inghliterra nuovi cani a finire di divorarla."

¹³ Chalcondyles, l. i. p. 25, 26. The Greek supposes his journey to the king of France, which is sufficiently refuted by the silence of the national historians. Nor am I much more inclined to believe that Palæologus departed from Italy, valde bene consolatus et contentus (Vit. Urban V. p. 623.).

Thirty years after the return of Palæologus, his Visitotihe son and successor, Manuel, from a similar motive, emperor Manuel but on a larger scale, again visited the countries of the West. In a preceding chapter I have related his treaty with Baiazet, the violation of that treaty. the siege or blockade of Constantinople, and the French succour under the command of the gallant Boucicault 15. By his ambassadors, Manuel had solicited the Latin powers; but it was thought that the presence of a distressed monarch would draw tears and supplies from the hardest barbarians 16; and the marshal who advised the journey, prepared the reception, of the Byzantine prince. The land was occupied by the Turks; but the navigation of Venice was safe and open: Italy received him as the first, or, at least, as the second of the Christian. princes; Manuel was pitied as the champion and confessor of the faith; and the dignity of his behaviour prevented that pity from sinking into contempt. From Venice he proceeded to Padua and Pavia; and even the duke of Milan, a secret ally of Bajazet, gave him safe and honourable conduct to the verge of his dominions 17. On the confines of France 18 the royal officers undertook A D.1400, the care of his person, journey, and expenses; to the court of France. June 3.,

¹⁶ His return in 1370, and the coronation of Manuel, Sept, 25, 1373 (Ducange, Fam. Byzant. p. 241), leaves some interinedials æra for the conspiracy and punishment of Andronicus.

15 Memoires de Boucicault, P. i. c. 35, 36.

16 His journey into the west of Europe is slightly, and I believe reluctantly, noticed by Chalcondyles (l. ii. c. 44-50.) and Ducas

17 Muratori, Annali d'Italia, tom. xii. p. 409. John Galeazzo was the first and most powerful duke of Milan. His connection with Bajazet is attested by Froissard; and he contributed to save and deliver the French captives of Nicopolis.

18 For the reception of Manuel at Paris, see Spondanus (Annal. Eccles. tom. i. p. 676, 677. A. D. 1400, No. 5.), who quotes Juvenal des Ursins, and the monk of St. Denys; and Villaret (Hist. de France, tom. xii; p. 331-334.), who quotes nobody, according to the last fashion of the French writers.

and two thousand of the richest citizens, in arms and on horseback, came forth to meet him as far as Charenton, in the neighbourhood of the capital. At the gates of Paris, he was saluted by the chancellor and the parliament; and Charles the sixth. attended by his princes and nobles, welcomed his brother with a cordial embrace. The successor of Constantine was clothed in a robe of white silk. and mounted on a milk-white steed, a circumstance. in the French ceremonial, of singular importance: the white colour is considered as the symbol of sovereignty; and, in a late visit, the German emperor, after an haughty demand and a peevish refusal, had been reduced to content himself with a black courser. Manuel was lodged in the Louvre: a succession of feasts and balls, the pleasures of the banquet and the chace, were ingeniously varied by the politeness of the French, to display their magnificence, and amuse his grief: he was indulged in the liberty of his chapel; and the doctors of the Sorbonne were astonished, and possibly scandalised, by the language, the rites, and the vestments, of his Greek clergy. But the slightest glance on the state of the kingdom must teach him to despair of any effectual assistance. The unfortunate Charles, though he enjoyed some lucid intervals, continually relapsed into furious or stupid insanity: the reins of government were alternately seized by his brother and uncle, the dukes of Orleans and Burgundy, whose factious competition prepared the miseries of civil war. former was a gay youth, dissolved in luxury and love: the latter was the father of John count of

CHAP.

CHAP. Nevers, who had so lately been ransomed from Turkish captivity; and, if the fearless son was ardent to revenge his defeat, the more prudent Burgundy was content with the cost and peril of the first experiment. When Manuel had satiated the curiosity, and perhaps fatigued the patience, of the French, he resolved on a visit to the adjacent island. In his progress from Dover, he was entertained at Canterbury with due reverence by the prior and monks of St. Austin; and, on Blackheath, king Henry the fourth, with the English court, saluted the Greek hero (I copy our old historian), who, during many days, was lodged and treated in London as emperor of the East 19. But the state of England was still more adverse to the design of the holy war. In the . same year, the hereditary sovereign had been deposed and murdered: the reigning prince was a successful usurper, whose ambition was punished by jealousy and remorse; nor could Henry of Lancaster withdraw his person or forces from the defence of a throne incessantly shaken by conspiracy and rebellion. He pitied, he praised, he feasted, the emperor of Constantinople; but if the English monarch assumed the cross, it was > 19 A short note of Manuel in England, is extracted by Dr. Hody from a MS. at Lambeth (de Græcis illustribus, p. 14.), C. P. Imperator, diu variisque et horrendis Paganorum insultibus coarctatus, ut pro ersdem resistentiam triumphalem perquireret Anglorum Regem visitare decrevit, &c. Rex (says Walsingham, p. 364.) nobili apparatů ... suscepit (ut decuit) tantum Heros, duxitque Londonias, et per multos dies exhibuit gloriose, pro expensis hospitii sui solvens, et eura respiciens tanto fastigio donativis. He repeats the same in his Upodigma Neustriæ (p. 550.).

of England. A D 1400. December.

only to appease his people, and perhaps his con- CHAP science, by the merit or semblance of this pions intention". Satisfied, however, with gifts and honours, Manuel returned to Paris; and, after a Historia residence of two years in the West, shaped his Vicini course through Germany and Italy, crabacked at Venice, and patiently expected, in the Mona, the moment of his ruin or deliverance. Yet he had escaped the ignominious necessity of offering his religion to public or private sale. The Latin church was distracted by the great schism; the kings, the nations, the universities, of Europe, were divided in their obedience between the popes of Rome and Avignon; and the emperor, anxious to conciliate the friendship of both parties, abstained from any correspondence with the indigent and unpopular rivals. His journey coincided with the year of the jubilee; but he passed through Italy without desiring, or deserving, the plenary indulgence which abolished the guilt or penance of the sins of the faithful. The Roman pope was offended by this neglect: accused him of irreverence to an image of Christ; and exhorted the princes of Italy to reject and abandon the obstinate schismatie 1.

During the period of the crusades, the Greeks Greek beheld with astonishment and terror the perpetual and de-

Sulpators

²⁹ Shakespeare begins and ends the play of Heary IV with that prince's yow of a crusade, and his belief that he hould die in Jeru dein ²¹ This fact is preserved in the Historia Politica, A.D. 1501-1478, published by Martin Crustov (Times Green, p. 1-43 The image of Christ, which the Greek emperor rebised to worship, was probably a work of sculpture.

CHAP.

stream of emigration that flowed, and continued to flow, from the unknown climates of the West. The visits of their last emperors removed the veil of separation, and they disclosed to their eyes the powerful nations of Europe, whom they no longer presumed to brand with the name of Barbarians. The observations of Manuel, and his more inquisitive followers, have been preserved by a Byzantine historian of the times. his scattered id as I shall collect and abridge; and it may be amusing enough, perhaps instructive, to contemplate the rude pictures of Germany, France, and England. whose ancient and modern state are so familiar to our minds. I. GERMANY (says the Greek Chalcondyles) is of ample latitude from Vienna to the Ocean; and it stretches (a strange geography) from Prague in Bohemia to the river Tartessus, and the Pyrenæan mountains?'. The soil, except in figs and olives, is sufficiently fruitful; the air is salubrious: the bodies of the natives are robust of Germany;

²² The Greek and Turkish history of Laonicus Chalcondyles ends with the winter of 1403, and the abrupt conclusion seems to mark, that he laid down his pen in the same year. We know that he was an Athenian, and that some contemporaries of the same name contributed to the revision of the Greek language in Italy. But in his numerous digressions, the modest historian has never introduced himself, and his editor Leunclavius, as well as Fabricius (Bibliot Greec tom. vi. p. 474.), seems ignorant of his life and character. For his descriptions of Germany, France, and England, see I. n. p. 36, 37, 44—50.

23 I shall not animadvert on the geographical errors of Chalcondyles. In this instance, he perhaps followed, and mistook, Herodotus (l. n. c. 33), whose text may be explained (Herodote de Larcher, tom ii p. 219, 220), or whose ignorance may be excused. Had these modern Greeks never read Strabo, or any of their lesser geographers?

and healthy; and these cold regions are seldom CHAP. visited with the calamities of pestilence, or earth- LXVI. quakes. After the Scythians or Tartars, the Germans are the most numerous of nations; they are brave and patient, and were they united under a single head, their force would be irresistable. the gift of the pope, they have acquired the privilege of chusing the Roman emperor"; nor is any people more devoutly attached to the faith and obcdience of the Latin patriarch. The greatest part of the country is divided among the princes and prelates: but Strasburgh, Cologne, Hamburgh, and more than two hundred free cities, are governed by sage and equal laws, according to the will, and for the advantage, of the whole community. The use of duels, or single combats on foot, prevails among them in peace and war; their industry excels in all the mechanic arts, and the Germans may boast of the invention of gunpowder and cannon, which is now diffused over the greatest part of the world. II. The king- or France; dom of FRANCE is spread above fifteen or twenty days journey from Germany to Spain, and from the Alps to the British ocean; containing many flourishing cities, and among these Paris, the seat of the king, which surpasses the rest in riches and luxury. Many princes and lords alternately wait 23 A citizen of new Rome, while new Rome surveyd, woold have scotted to dignify the German Put with the titles of Bacters or Αύτοπρατως 'Ράμαιων but all pride was extinct to the bo om cf Chalcondyles, and he describes the Byzantine prince, and he subject, by the proper, though humble, names of 'Exagers, and Barares Ellnewr.

in his palace, and acknowledge him as their sovereign; the most powerful are the dukes of Bretague and Burgundy, of whom the latter possesses the wealthy province of Flanders, whose harbours are frequented by the ships and merchants of our own, and the more remote, seas. The French are an ancient and opulent people; and their language and manners, though somewhat different, are not dissimilar from those of the Italians. Vain of the Imperial dignity of Charlemagne, of their victories over the Saracens, and of the exploits of their heroes, Oliver and Rowland ; they esteem themselves the first of the western nations; but this foolish arrogance has been recently humbled by the unfortunate events of their wars against the English, the inhabitants of the British island. III. BRITAIN, in the ocean, and opposite to the shores of Flanders, may be considered either as one, or as three islands; but the whole is united by a common interest, by the same manners, and by a similar government. The measure of its circumference is five thousand stadia: the land is overspread with towns and villages: though destitute of wine, and not abounding in fruit-trees, it is fertile in wheat and barley; in honey and wool; and much cloth is manufactured by the inhabitants. In populousof Lugland.

2) Most of the old romaness were translated in the xivth century into French prose, and soon became the favorities amasement of the brights and ladies in the court of Charles VI. It a Greek believed in the exploits of Rowland and Oliver, he may sprely be excured, since the monks of St. Denys, the national historials, have merited the tables of archbishop Turpan in their Chronicles of France.

ness and power, in riches and luxury, London', the metropolis of the isle, may claim a pre-eminence over all the cities of the West. It is situate on the Thames, a broad and rapid river, which at the distance of thirty miles falls into the Gallie Sea; and the daily flow and ebb of the tide affords a safe entrance and departure to the vessels of commerce. The king is the head of a powerful and turbulent aristocracy; his principal vassals hold their estates by a free and unalterable tenure; and the laws define the limits of his authority and their obedience. The kingdom has been often afflicted by foreign conquest and donestic sedition; but the natives are bold and hardy, renowned in arms and victorious in war. The form of their shields or targets is derived from the Italians, that of their swords from the Greeks; the use of the long bow is the peculiar and decisive advantage of the English. Their language bears no affinity to the idioms of the continent: in the habits of domestic life, they are not easily distinguished from their neighbours of France; but the most singular circonstance of their manners is their disregard of conjugal honom and of female chastity. In their mutual visits, as the first act of hospitality, the guest is welcomed in the embraces of their wives and daughters; among friends they are lent and

CHAP.

To Anthon, ... The remains bounded for the control of the respective for the control of the sequence of the se borrowed without shame; nor are the islanders of fended at this strange commerce, and its inevitable consequences. Informed as we are of the cus toms of old England, and assured of the virtue of our mothers, we may smile at the credulity, or resent the injustice, of the Greek, who must have confounded a modest salute. With a criminal embrace. But his credulity and injustice may teach an important lesson; to distrust the accounts of foreign and remote nations, and to suspend our belief of every tale that deviates from the laws of nature and the character of man. The suspending of the character of man.

CHAP.

Indifference of Manuel towards the Latins, A. D. 1402 —1417.

After his return, and the victory of Timour, Manuel reigned many years in prosperity and peace. As long as the sons of Bajazet solicited his friendship and spared his dominions, he was satisfied with the national religion; and his leisure was employed in composing twenty theological dialogues for its defence. The appearance of the Byzautine ambassadors at the council of Constance.

27 If the double sense of the verb Kw (osculor, and in interogero) be equivocal, the context and pious horror of Chalcondyles can leave no doubt of his meaning and mistake (p. 49).

26 Eresnus (Fpist Fausto Andrehno) has a pretty passage on the English fashion of kissing strangers on their arrival and departure, from whence, however, he draws no scandalous inferences.

29 Perhaps we may apply this remark to the community of wives among the old Britons, as it is supposed by Cresar and Diou (Dion Cassius, I Isin ton in p. 1007.), with Rennar's judicious annotation. The hirory of Otalicite, so certain at first, is become less visible and scandalous, in proportion as we have studied the magners of that gentle and amorous people.

20 See Lenfant, Hist du Concile de Constance, tom 11. p. 576; and for the ecclesiastical history of the times, the Annals of Spondanus, the Bibliotheque of Dupin, tom xii and xxist and xxid volumes of the History, or rather the Continuation, of Fleury.

amounces the restoration of the Turkish power, as well as of the Latin church; the conquest of the sultans, Mahomet and Amurath, reconciled the emperor to the Vatican; and the siege of Constantinople almost tempted him to acquiesce in the double procession of the Holy Ghost. When Martin the fifth ascended without a rival the chair of St. Peter, a friendly intercourse of letters and embassies was revived between the East His negaand West. Ambition on one side, and distress on A D 1417 the other, dictated the same decent language of -142 charity and peace: the artful Greek expressed a desire of marrying his six sons to Italian princesses; and the Roman, not less artful, dispatched the daughter of the marquis of Montferrat, with a company of noble virgins, to soften, by their charms, the obstinacy of the schismatics. under this mask of zeal, a discerning eve will perceive that all was hollow and insincere in the court and church of Constantinople. According to the vicissitudes of danger and repose, the emperor advanced or retreated; alternately instructed and disavowed his ministers; and escaped from an importunate pressure by urging the duty of inquiry, the obligation of collecting the sense of his patriarchs and bishops, and the impossibility of convening them at a time when the Turkish arms were at the gates of his capital. From a review of the public transactions it will appear, that the Greeks insisted on three successive measures, a succour, a council, and a final re-union, while the Latins cluded the second, and only promised the first, as a consequential and voluntary reward of the third. But we have an opportunity of unfold ing the most secret intentions of Manuel, as he ex plained them in a private conversation without ar tifice or disguise. In his declining age, the empe ror had associated John Paleologus, the second of the name, and the eldest of his sons, on whom he devolved the greatest part of the authority and weight of government. One day, in the presence only of the historian Phranza ', his favourite chamberlain, he opened to his colleague and successor the true principle of his negociations with the pope 32. " Our last resource," said Manuel, " against the " Turks is their fear of our union with the Latins, " of the warlike nations of the West, who may arm " for our relief and for their destruction. As often " as you are threatened by the miscreants, present " this danger before their eyes. Propose a council; " consult on the means; but ever delay and avoid the " convocation of an assembly, which cannot tend " either to our spiritual or temporal emolument.

CHAP. LXVI. His puvate inati i

of From his early youth, Goods, Phranza, or Phranzes, was emploved in the service of the state and palage; and Handbus, de-Script Byrant P. r. e. 40.) has collected his life from his own withings. He was no more than four-and-twenty years of oge at the death of Maruel, who recommended him in the strongest terms to his successor. Imprimis vero hunc Phranzen tala commendo, qui ministravit mihi fideliter et diligenter (Phances, 1 n. Let the emperor John was cold, and he preferred the service of the despots of Peloponnesus.

32 See Phranzes, l. ii c. 13 While so many manuscripts of the Greek original are extant in the libraries of Rome, Milan, the Escurial, &c. it is a matter of shame and reproach, that we should be reduced to the Latin version, or abstract, of James Pontanus cad calcem Theophylact, Simocattae, Ingolstadt, 1604), so deferent m accuracy and elegance Tabric, Bibliot, Grac. tom. vi. p. 615-620.).

"The Latins are proud; the Greeks are obsti-" nate; neither party will recede or retract; and ." the attempt of a perfect union will confirm the " schism, alienate the churches, and leave us, with-" out hope or defence, at the mercy of the barba-"rians." Impatient of this salutary lesson, the royal youth arose from his seat, and departed in silence; and the wise monarch (continues Phranza) casting his eyes on me, thus resumed his discourse: " My son deems himself a great and heroic prince; "but, alas! our miserable age does not afford " scope for heroism or greatness. His daring spi-" rit might have suited the happier times of our " ancestors; but the present state requires not an " emperor, but a cautious steward of the last re-" has of our fortunes. Well do 1 remember the •• lofty expectations which he built on our alliance " with Mustapha; and much do I fear, that his " rash courage will urge the ruin of our house, and " that even religion may precipitate our down-Yet the experience and authority of Manucl preserved the peace, and cluded the council; till, in the seventy-eighth year of his age, and in His death the habit of a monk, he terminated his career, dividing his precious moveables among his children and the poor, his physicians and his favourite servants. Of his six sons . Androniens the second was invested with the principality of Thessalonica, and died of a leprosy soon after the sale -of that city to the Venetians and its final conquest by the Turks. Some fortunate incidents had restored Peloponnesus, or the Morea, to the empire: and in his more prosperous days, Manuel had fortified the narrow isthmus of six miles 35 with a stone wall and one hundred and fifty-three towers. The wall was overthrown by the first blast of the Ottomans: the fertile peninsula might have been sufficient for the four younger brothers, Theodore and Constantine, Demetrius and Thomas; but they wasted in domestic contests the remains of their strength; and the least successful of the rivals were reduced to a life of dependence in the Byzantine palace.

CHAP LXVI.

Zeal of John Palæologus II -1437.

The eldest of the sons of Manuel, John Palavologus the second, was acknowledged, after his A.D. 1425 father's death, as the sole emperor of the Greeks. He immediately proceeded to repudiate his wife, and to contract a new marriage with the princess of Trebizond: beauty was in his eyes the first qualification of an empress; and the clergy had vielded to his firm assurance, that unless he might be indulged in a divorce, he would retire to a cloister, and leave the throne to his brother Constantine. The first, and in truth the only, victory of Palacologus, was over a Jews, whom, after a long and learned dispute, he converted to the Christian faith; and this momentous conquest is carefully recorded in the history of the times. But he soon resumed the design of uniting the East and West; and, regardless of his father's advice. listened, as it should seem with sincerity, to the proposal of meeting the pope in a general council beyond the Adriatic. This dangerous project was encouraged by Martin the fifth, and coldly entertained by his successor Eugenius, till, after a tedious negociation, the emperor received a summons from the Latin assembly of a new character, the independent prelates of Basil, who styled themselves the representatives and judges of the Catholie church. '

The exact measure of the Hexamilion, from sea to sea, was 3800 orgyie, or toises, of six Greek feet, (Phranzes, 1 i c. 38), which would produce a Greek mile, still smaller than that of 000 French torses, which is assigned by D'Anville as still in use in Turkey. Five miles are commonly reckoned for the breadth of the 15thmus. See the Travels of Spon, Wheeler, and Chandler.

³ The first objection of the Jews is on the death of Christ . it it were voluntary. Christ was a snieide: which the emperer parries with a nivstery. They then dispute on the conception of the Virgin, the sense of the proplicies, &c (Phrances, l. ii. c. 12, a whole chapter'.

CHAP. LXVI.

The Roman pontiff had fought and conquered Corrupin the cause of ecclesiastical freedom; but the vic- hon of the Latin torious clergy were soon exposed to the tyranny of church their deliverer; and his sacred character was invulnerable to those arms which they found so keen and effectual against the civil magistrate. Their great charter, the right of election, was annihilated by appeals, evaded by trusts or commendams, disappointed by reversionary grants, and superseded by previous and arbitrary reservations ". A public auction was instituted in the court of Rome: the cardinals and favourites were enriched with the spoils of nations; and every country might complain that the most important and valuable bene-36 In the treatise delle Materie Beneficiarie of Fra Paoro (in the ivth volume of the last, and best, edition of his works; the papal system is deeply studied and freely described. Should Rome and her religion be annihilated, this golden volume may still survive, a philosophical history, and a salutary warning

CHAP. LXVI.

Schi-m. A.D 1377

-1429

fices were accumulated on the heads of aliens and absentees. During their residence at Avignon, the ambition of the popes subsided in the meaner passions of avarice " and luxury: they rigorously imposed on the clergy the tributes of first-fruits and tenths; but they freely tolerated the impunity of vice, disorder, and corruption. These manifold scandals were aggravated by the great schism of the West, which continued above fifty years. In the furious conflicts of Rome and Avignon, the vices of the rivals were mutually exposed; and their precarious situation degraded their authority, relaxed their discipline, and multiplied their Council of wants and exactions. To heal the wounds, and restore the monarchy, of the church, the synods of Constance, Pisa and Constance were successively convened; but these great assemblies, conscious of their strength, resolved to vindicate the privileges of the Christian anistocraev. From a personal sentence against two pontiffs, whom they rejected, and a third, their acknowledged sovereign, whom they deposed, the fathers of Constance proceeded to examine the nature and limits of the Roman supremacy; nor did they separate till they had

P.s., A.D. 1400 , of AD 1414 -1418.

> 5 Pope John XXII in 1334; left lighted him, at Avignous end the value of seven millions of sold floring, and the value of seven millions more in plate and jewels. See the Chronicle of John Villand L xe e 20, m Muniton's Collection, tom xiii p 7050, whose brother received the account from the papal treasurers. A treasure of six or cight millions sterling in the sixth century is enormous, and almost incredible

> 30 A learned and liberal Protestant, M. Lenfant, has green a fair history of the councils of Pisa, Constructe, and Basil, in six volumes in quarto; but the last part is the most hasty and imperfect, except in the account of the troubles of Bohemia.

established the authority, above the pope, of a general council. It was enacted, that, for the government and reformation of the church, such assemblies should be held at regular intervals; and that each synod, before its dissolution, should appoint the time and place of the subsequent meeting. By the influence of the court of Rome, the next convocation at Sienna was easily cluded; but the bold and vigorous proceedings of the council of Basil 'had almost been fatal to the reigning pon- o P. J. tiff, Eugenius the fourth. A just suspicion of $\sum_{i=1}^{n-1} i$ his design prompted the fathers to hasten the promulgation of their first decree, that the representatives of the church-militant on earth were invested with a divine and spiritual jurisdiction over all Christians, without excepcing the pope; and that a general council could not be dissolved, prorogued, or transferred, unless by their free deliberation and consent. On the notice that Eugenius had fulnimated a bull for that purpose, they ventured to summon, to admonish, to threaten, to censure, the contumacions successor of St. Peter. After many delays, to allow time for reportance, then is they finally declared, that, unless he submitted language within the term of sixty days, he was suspended it from the exercise of all temporal and ecclesiastical authority. And to mark their jurisdiction over

2 The organizations or manages of the colors door Bard, or spireerved in the pulsa Pare, in the la volume in the B. De is on free cury, conveniently structe on one Rinner, and in read is the arms of the realthousing and considering Server by Corp. the university was founded by pape Pais II. If mee Silving with had been scenetally to the council. But what is a sunted, or a r university, to the present of Frederica and the real source of the many

CHAP.

the prince as well as the priest, they assumed the government of Avignon, annulled the alienation of the sacred patrimony, and protected Rome from the imposition of new taxes. Their boldness was justified, not only by the general opinion of the clergy, but by the support and power of the first monarchs of Christendom: the emperor Sigismond declared himself the servant and protector of the synod; Germany and France adhered to their cause; the duke of Milan was the enemy of Eugenius; and he was driven from the Vatican by an insurrection of the Roman people. Rejected at the same time by his temporal and spiritual subjects, submission was his only choice: by a most humiliating bull, the pope repealed his own acts, and ratified those of the council; incorporated his legates and cardinals with that venerable body; and seemed to resign himself to the decrees of the supreme legislature. Their fame pervaded the countries of the East; and it was in their presence that Sigismond received the ambassadors of the Turkish sultan ", who laid at his feet twelve large vases, filled with robes of silk and pieces of gold. The fathers of Basil aspired to the glory of reducing the Greeks, as well as the Bohemians, within the pale of the church; and their deputies invited the emperor and patriarch of Constantinople to unite with an assembly which possessed the confidence of the Western nations. Palæologus was not averse to the proposal; and his ambassadors were introduced with due honours into the Catholic senate. But the choice of the place appeared to be an insuperable obstacle, since he refused to pass the Alps, or the sea of Sicily, and positively required that the synod should be adjourned to some convenient city in Italy, or at least on the Danube. The other articles of this treaty were more readily stipulated: it was agreed to defray the travelling expences of the emperor, with a train of seven hundred persons", to remit an immediate sum of eight thousand ducats " for the accommodation of the Greek elergy; and in his absence to grant a supply of ten thousand ducats, with three hundred archers and some gallies, for the protection of Constantinople. The city of Avignon advanced the funds for the preliminary expences; and the embarkation was prepared at Marseilles with some difficulty and delay.

Negociations with the Greeks, A D. 1434—1437.

⁴⁾ This Turkish embassy, attested only by Crantzius, is related with some doubt by the annulist Spondanus, A. D. 1433, No. 25 ton: 1 p. 824.

In his distress, the friendship of Palaeologus to he Palaeologus was disputed by the ecclesiastical powers of the West; but the dextrous activity of a monarch prevailed over the slow debates and inflexible values, temper of a republic. The decrees of Basil continually tended to circumscribe the despotism of

John Pa-Jeologus

4) Syropulus, p. 10. In this list, the Grieks appear to have exceeded the real numbers of the cleray and laity which afterwards artended the emperor and patriarch, but which are not clearly specified by the great ecclesiarch. The 7 0000 florus which they asked in this negociation of the pape (p. 0), were more than they could hope or want.

42 I use indifferently the words, durat and them, which derive their names, the former from the dukes of Milan, the later teem the republic of Florence. These gold pieces, the torst that were counted in Italy, perhaps in the Latin world, may be compared in weight and value to one third of the English curve.

CHAP.

the pope, and to creet a supreme and perpetual tribunal in the church. Eugenius was impatient of the yoke; and the union of the Greeks might afford a decent pretence for translating a rebellious synod from the Rhine to the Po. The independence of the fathers was lost if they passed the Alps: Savoy or Avignon, to which they acceded with reluctance, were described at Constantinople as situate far beyond the pillars of Hereules1; the emperor and his clergy were apprehensive of the dangers of a long navigation; they were offended by an haughty declaration, that after suppressing the new heresy of the Bohemians, the council would soon eradicate the old heresy of the Greeks". On the side of Eugenius, all was smooth, and vielding, and respectful: and he invited the Byzantine monarch to heal by his presence the schism of the Latin, as well as of the Eastern, church. Ferrara, near the coast of the Adriatic, was proposed for their amicable interview; and with some indulgence of forgery and theft, a surreptitions decree was procured, which transferred the synod, with its own consent, to that Italian city. Nine gallies were equipped for this service at Venice, and in the isle of Candia; their diligence anticipated the slower vessels of Basil: the Roman admiral was commissioned to burn, sink, and destroy"; and these priestly squadrons might have encountered each other in the same seas where Athens and Sparta had formerly contended for the pre-eminence of glory. Assaulted by the importunity of the factions, who were ready to fight for the possession of his person, Palæologus hesitated before he left his palace and country on a perilous experiment. His father's advice still dwelt on his memory: and reason must suggest, that since the Latins were divided among themselves, they could never unite in a foreign cause. Sigismond dissnaded the unseasonable adventure: his advice was impartial, since he adhered to the council; and it was enforced by the strange belief, that the German Cæsar would nominate a Greek his heir and successor in the empire of the West 16. Even the Turkish sultan was a counsellor whom it might be unsafe to trust, but whom it was dangerous to of-Amurath was unskilled in the disputes, but he was apprehensive of the union, of the Christians. From his own treasures, he offered to relieve the wants of the Byzantine court; yet he declared with

³⁾ At the end of the Latin version of Phanzes, we read a long Greek epists of declaration of George of Treheroid, who salvies the emperor to preof Pagennis and Indy. He treats with contempt the schematic assembly of Bod, the Balbirians of Gauliand Germany, who had conspired to man port the chair of St. Peter beyond the Alps. occasions to man port the chair of St. Peter beyond the Alps. occasions show the security metal to the statement of the statement of the provided with a map?

⁴ Syropulus p. 20—31 attests his own indignation, and that of his countrymen, and the Basil deputies, who excused the rash declaration, could nother deny not alter an act of the council.

⁴⁵ Condolmers, the Pope's nephew and admiral, expressly declared, ότι όρισμου εχει πορα του Παπα ίνα πολεμησι, όπου αν ευρη τα κα'ερία της Συνόδου, και ει διυ ηθη καταδ ση και οφούση. The naval orders of the synod were less peremptory, and, till the hostile squadious appeared, both parties tried to conceal their quitted from the Greeks.

⁴⁰ Syropulus mentions the hopes of Palæologus (p. 30), and the dast advice of Sigismond (p. 57.). At Corfu, the Grock emperor was informed of his friend's death, had he known it corner, he would have returned home (p. 70).

seeming magnanimity, that Constantinople should be secure and inviolate, in the absence of her sovereign 47. The resolution of Palæologus was decided by the most splendid gifts and the most specious promises: he wished to escape for a while from a scene of danger and distress; and after dismissing with an ambiguous answer the messengers of the council, he declared his intention of embarking in the Roman gallies. The age of the patriarch Joseph was more susceptible of fear than of hope; he trembled at the perils of the sea, and expressed his apprehension, that his feeble voice, with thirty perhaps of his orthodox brethren, would be oppressed in a foreign land by the power and numbers of a Latin synod. He yielded to the royal mandate, to the flattering assurance. that he would be heard as the oracle of nations. and to the secret wish of learning from his brother of the West, to deliver the church from the voke of kings16. The five cross-bearers, or dignitaries, of St. Sophia, were bound to attend his person; and one of these, the great ecclesiarch or preacher, Sylvester Syropulus", has composed a free and ³⁷ Phrames himself, though from different motives, was of the advice of Amurath et al. (2.13). I financial partitude erail. This Turkish embassy is likewise mentioned by Syropulus (p. 58%, and Amurath kept his word. He might threaten (p. 125, 219%, but he never attacked, the city.)

^{*} The reader will smile at the simplicity with which he imparted these hopes to his favourites τοιαυτην ωληφοφομίαν σχησείν ηλωίζε και δια του Παπα εθαίχει ελευθεμώσαι την εκκλησίαν από της απότεθειση, αυτου δουλείες ωαρά του βασίλεως (p. 192). Yet it would have been difficult for him to have practised the lessons of Gregory VII.

⁴⁹ The Christian name of Sylvester is borrowed from the Latin calendar. In modern Greek, σουλος, as a diminutive, is added to curious history 5" of the false union 51. Of the clergy that reluctantly obeyed the summons of the cmperor and the patriarch, submission was the first duty, and patience the most useful virtue. chosen list of twenty bishops, we discover the metropolitan titles of Heraclea and Cyzicus, Nice and Nicomedia, Ephesus and Trebizond, and the personal merit of Mark and Bessarion, who, in the confidence of their learning and eloquence, were promoted to the episcopal rank. Some monks and philosophers were named to display the science and sanctity of the Greek church: and the service of the choir was performed by a select band of singers and musicians. The patriarchs of Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem, appeared by their genuine or fictitious deputies; the primate of Russia represented a national church, and the Greeks might contend with the Latins in the extent of their spiritual empire. The precious vases of St. Sophia were exposed to the winds and waves, that the end of words. nor can any reasoning of Creyghton, the editor, excuse his changing into Sgnopulus (Sguros, fuscus) (Re Syropuhas of his own manuscript, whose name is subscribed with his own hand in the acts of the council of Florence. Why might not the author be of Syrian extraction?

50 From the conclusion of the history, I should by the date to the year 1444, four years after the synod, when the great co-lesiarch had abdicated his office (sectio xii p 330-350). His passions were cooled by time and retirement, and, although Syropolus is often partial, he is never intemperate. "

51 Vera historia unionis non veræ inter Græcis et Latires : Hagæ Comitis, 1660, in folio), was first published with a loose and florid rion, by Robert Creyghton, chaplain to Charles II. in his exile The zeal of the editor has prefixed a polemic tule, for the beginning of the original is wanting. Syropulus may be ranked with the best of the Byzantine writers for the merit of his narration, and even of his style, but he is excluded from the orthodox collections of the councils the patriarch might officiate with becoming splendour; whatever gold the emperor could procure, was expended in the massy ornaments of his bed and chariot "; and while they affected to maintain the prosperity of their ancient fortune, they quarrelled for the division of fifteen thousand ducats. the first alms of the Roman pontiff. necessary preparations, John Palæologus, with a numerous train, accompanied by his brother Demetrius, and the most respectable persons of the church and state, embarked in eight vessels with sails and oars, which steered through the Turkish streights of Gallipoli to the Archipelago, the Morea, and the Adriatic Gulf ".

CHAP. LXVI

His triumphal entry at Venice, Feb. 9.,

After a tedious and troublesome navigation of seventy-seven days, this religious squadron cast A D.1438, anchor before Venice; and their reception proclaimed the joy and magnificence of that powerful republic. In the command of the world, the modest Augustus had never claimed such honours from his subjects as were paid to his feeble successor by an independent state. Seated on the poop, on a lofty throne, he received the visit, or, in the Greek style, the adoration, of the doge and ⁵² Syropulus (p. 63.) simply expresses his intention iν ούτω wouwaw iv Itahois heras Basiheus wag' ekenwu vojugorto; and the Latin of Creyghton may afford a specimen of his florid paraphrase. Ut pompå circumductus noster Imperator Italiæ populis aliquis deauratus Jupiter crederctur, aut Chesus ex opulenta Lydia.

⁵⁸ Although I cannot stop to quote Syropulus for every fact, I will observe that the navigation of the Greeks from Constantinople to Venice and Ferrara is contained in the 1vth section (p. 67-100.), and that the historian has the uncommon talent of placing each scene before the reader's eye.

senators34. They sailed in the Bucentaur, which was accompanied by twelve stately gallies: the sea was overspread with innumerable gondolas of pomp and pleasure; the air resounded with music and acclamations; the mariners, and even the vessels, were dressed in silk and gold; and in all the emblems and pageants, the Roman eagles were blended with the lions of St. Mark. The triumphal procession, ascending the great canal, passed under the bridge of the Rialto; and the Eastern strangers gazed with admiration on the palaces, the churches, and the populousness of a city, that seems to float on the bosom of the waves". They sighed to behold the spoils and trophies with which it had been decorated after the sack of Constantinople. After an hospitable entertainment of fifteen days, Palæologus pursued his journey by land and water from Venice to Ferrara: and, on this occasion, the pride of the Vatican was tempered by policy to indulge the ancient dignity of the emperor of the East. He made his entry on a black horse; but a milk-white steed, whose trappings were embroidered with golden eagles, was led before him; and the canopy was borne over his head by the princes of Este, the sons or kinsmen of Ni-

CHAP LXVI

n to Ferrari, Fub. 28

⁵⁹ At the time of the synod, Phranzes was in Peloponnesis, but he received from the despot Demetrius, a faithful account of the honourable reception of the emperor and patriarch both at Venice and Ferrara (Dux.... seduction Imperatorem adorat, which are more slightly mentioned by the Latius d. n. c. 14, 15, 10

55 The astonishment of a Greek prince and a French Ambassador (Memoires de Philippe de Comines, L. vii. c. 18.) at the sight of Ventce, abundantly prove, that in the with century it was the first and most splendid of the Christian cities. For the spoils of Constantinople at Venice, see Syropulus (p. 87).

THE DECLINE AND FALL

CHAP. LXVI.

cholas, marquis of the city, and a sovereign more powerful than himself 56. Palæologus did not alight till he reached the bottom of the staircase: the pope advanced to the door of the apartment; refused his proffered genuflection; and, after a paternal embrace, conducted the emperor to a seat on his left-Nor would the patriarch descend from his galley, till a ceremony, almost equal, had been stipulated between the bishops of Rome and Constantinople. The latter was saluted by his brother with a kiss of union and charity: nor would any of the Greek ecclesiastics submit to kiss the feet of the Western primate. On the opening of the synod, the place of honour in the centre was claimed by the temporal and ecclesiastical chiefs; and it was only by alleging that his predecessors had not assisted ' in person at Nice or Chalcedon, that Eugenius could evade the ancient precedents of Constantine and Marcian. After much debate, it was agreed that the right and left sides of the church should be occupied by the two nations; that the solitary chair of St. Peter should be raised the first of the Latin line: and that the throne of the Greek emperor, at the head of his clergy, should be equal and opposite to the second place, the vacant seat of the emperor of the West 57.

⁵⁶ Nicholas III. of Fiste reigned forty-eight years (A.D. 1393—1441), and was lord of Ferrara, Modena, Reggio, Parma, Rovigo, and Commachio. See his Life in Muratori (Antichità Estense, tom in p. 159—201).

⁵⁷ The Latin vulgar was provoked to laughter at the strange dresses of the Greeks, and especially the length of their garments, their sleeves, and their beards; nor was the emperor distinguished, except by the purple colour, and his diadem or mara with a jewel

. But as soon as festivity and form had given place to a more serious treaty, the Greeks were dissatisfied with their journey, with themselves, Council of and with the pope. The artful pencil of his emis- and Latins saries had painted him in a prosperous state; at at Ferrara the head of the princes and prelates of Europe, rence. obedient at his voice, to believe and to arm. thin appearance of the universal synod of Ferrara A.D 15, 9, July 6 betrayed his weakness; and the Latins opened the first session with only five archbishops, eighteen bishops, and ten abbots, the greatest part of whom were the subjects or countrymen of the Italian pontiff. Except the duke of Burgundy, none of the potentates of the West condescended to appear in person, or by their ambassadors; nor was it possible to suppress the judicial acts of Basil against the dignity and person of Eugenius, which were finally concluded by a new election. Under these circumstances, a truce or delay was asked and granted, till Palæologus could expect from the . consent of the Latins some temporal reward for an unpopular union; and, after the first session, the public proceedings were adjourned above six months. The emperor, with a chosen band of his favourites and Janizaries, fixed his summer residence at a pleasant spacious monastery, six miles from Ferrara; forgot, in the pleasures of the chace, the distress of the church and state; and persisted in destroving the game, without listening to the just on the top (Hody de Græcis Illustribus, p. 31). Vet another spectator confesses, that the Greek tashion was pin grave e pin degna than the Italian Vespasiano, in Vit Eugen IV in Mura-IATI, tom mai p. gh) .

CHAP LXVI. The Oct 8CHAP LXVI.

complaints of the marquis or the husbandman 3. In the mean while, his unfortunate Greeks were exposed to all the miseries of exile and poverty; for the support of each stranger, a monthly allowance was assigned of three or four gold florins; and although the entire sum did not amount to seven hundred florins, a long arrear was repeatedly incurred by the indigence or policy of the Roman court . They sighed for a speedy deliverance, but their escape was prevented by a triple chain: a passport from their superiors was required at the gates of Ferrara; the government of Venice had engaged to arrest and send back the fugitives; and inevitable punishment awaited them at Constantinople; excommunication, fines, and a sentence, which did not respect the sacerdotal dignity, that they should be stripped naked and publicly whipped 60. It was only by the alternative of hunger or dispute that the ⁵⁸ For the emperor's hunting, see Syropulus (p. 143, 144-101). The pope had sent him eleven miserable hacks; but he bought a strong and swift horse that came from Russia. The name of Janizaries may surprise but the name, rather than the institution, had passed from the Ottoman, to the Byzantine, court, and is often used in the last age of the empire.

⁶⁹ The Greeks obtained, with much difficulty, that instead of provisions, money should be distributed, four florins per month to the persons of honourable rank, and three florins to their servants, with an addition of thirty more to the emperor, twenty-five to the patriarch, and twenty to the prince, or despot, Demetrius. The payment of the first mouth amounted to 601 florins, a sum which will not allow us to reckon above 200 Greeks of every condition (Syropulus, p. 104, 105.) On the 20th October 1438, there was an arrear of four months; in April 1439, of three; and of five and a half in July, at the time of the union (p. 172, 225, 271.).

⁶⁰ Syropulus (p. 141, 142, 204, 221.) deplores the imprisonment of the Greeks, and the tyranny of the emperor and patriarch.

Greeks could be persuaded to open the first conference; and they yielded with extreme reluctance to attend from Ferrara to Florence the rear of a flying syhod. This new translation was urged by inevitable necessity: the city was visited by the plague; the fidelity of the marquis might be suspected; the mercenary troops of the duke of Milan were at the gates; and as they occupied Romagna, it was not without difficulty and danger that the pope, the emperor, and the bishops, explored their way through the unfrequented paths of the Apennine 6.

Yet all these obstacles were surmounted by time and policy. The violence of the fathers of Basil rather promoted than injured the cause of Eugenius: the nations of Europe abhorred the schism, and disowned the election, of Felix the fifth, who was successively a duke of Savoy, an hermit, and a pope; and the great princes were gradually reclaimed by his competitor to a favourable neutrality and a firm attachment. The legates, with some respectable members, deserted to the Roman army, which insensibly rose in numbers and reputation: the council of Basil was reduced to thirty-nine bishops, and three hundred of the inferior clergy of while the Latins of Florence could produce the subscriptions of the pope himself, eight cardinals, two patriarchs, eight archbishops, fifty-two bishops, and forty-five abbots, or chiefs of religious orders. After the labour of nine months, and the debates of twenty-five sessions. they attained the advantage and glory of the re-union of the Grecks. Four principal questions had been agitated between the two churches: 1. The use of unleavened bread in the communion of Christ's body. 2. The nature of purgatory. 3. The supremacy of the pope. And, 4. The single or double procession of the Holy Ghost. cause of either nation was managed by ten theological champions: the Latins were supported by the inexhaustible eloquence of cardinal Julian: and Mark of Ephesus and Bessarion of Nice were the bold and able leaders of the Greek forces. may bestow some praise on the progress of human reason, by observing, that the first of these questions was now treated as an immaterial rite, which might innocently vary with the fashion of the age and country. With regard to the second, both parties were agreed in the belief of an intermediate state of purgation for the venial sins of the faithful; and whether their souls were purified by elemental fire was a doubtful point, which in a few years might be conveniently settled on the spot by the disputants. The claims of supremacy appeared of a more weighty and substantial kind; yet by the Orientals

⁶t The wars of Italy are most clearly represented in the sinth volume of the Annals of Muratori. The schismatic Greek, Syrophius (p. 145.), appears to have exaggerated the lear and disorder of the pope in his retreat from Ferrata to Florence, which is proved by the acts to have been somewhat more decent and deliberate.

^{68.} Syropulus is pleased to reckon seven hundred prelates in the council of Basil The error is manifest, and perhaps voluntary.

That extravagant number could not be supplied by all the ecclesiastics of every degree who were present at the council, nor by all the absent bishops of the West, who, expressly or tacitly, might adhere to its degrees

OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

the Roman bishop had ever been respected as the CHAP. first of the five patriarchs; nor did they scruple to admit, that his jurisdiction should be exercised agreeable to the holy canons; a vague allowance, which might be defined or eluded by occasional convenience. The procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father alone, or from the Father and the Son, was an article of faith which had sunk much déeper into the minds of men; and in the sessions of Ferrara and Florence, the Latin addition of filioque was subdivided into two questions, whether it were legal, and whether it were orthodox. Perhaps it may not be necessary to boast on this subject of my own impartial indifference; but I must think that the Greeks were strongly supported by the prohibition of the council of Chalcedon, against adding any article whatsoever to the creed of Nice, or rather of Constantinople 60. In earthly affairs, it is not easy to conceive how an assembly of legislators can bind their successors invested with powers equal to their own. But the dictates of inspiration must be true and unchangeable; nor should a private bishop, or a provincial synod, have presumed to innovate against the judgment of the Catholic church. On the substance of the doctrine, the controversy was equal and endless: reason is confounded by the procession of a deity;

⁶³ The Greeks, who disliked the union, were unwilling to sally from this strong fortress (p. 178, 193-195, 202 of Syropulus.). The shame of the Latins was aggravated by their producing an old MS. of the second council of Nice, with filtoque in the Nicene creed. A palpable forgery! (p. 173).

CHAP.

the gospel, which lay on the altar, was silent: the various texts of the fathers might be corrupted by fraud or entangled by sophistry; and the Grecks were ignorant of the characters and writings of the Latin saints 64. Of this at least we may be sure, that neither side could be convinced by the argu-Prejudice may be enments of their opponents. lightened by reason, and a superficial glance may be rectified by a clear and more perfect view of an object adapted to our faculties. But the bishops and monks had been taught from their infancy to repeat a form of mysterious words; their national and personal honour depended on the repetition of the same sounds: and their narrow minds were hardened and inflamed by the acrimony of a public dispute.

Negociations with theGreeks. While they were lost in a cloud of dust and darkness, the pope and emperor were desirous of a seeming union, which could alone accomplish the purposes of their interview; and the obstinacy of public dispute was softened by the arts of private and personal negociation. The patriarch Joseph had sunk under the weight of age and infirmities; his dying voice breathed the counsels of charity and concord, and his vacant benefice might tempt the hopes of the ambitious clergy. The ready and active obedience of the archbishops of Russia and Nice, of Isidore and Bessarion, was prompted and recompensed by their speedy promotion to the dignity of cardinals. Bessarion, in the first debates, had stood forth the most strenuous and cloquent champion of the Greek church; and if the apostate, the bastard, was reprobated by his country 65, he appears in ecclesiastical story a rare example of a patriot who was recommended to court-favour by loud opposition and well-timed compliance. With the aid of his two spiritual coadiutors, the emperor applied his arguments to the general situation and personal characters of the bishops, and each was successively moved by authority and example. Their revenues were in the hands of the Turks. their persons in those of the Latins: an episcopal treasure, three robes and forty ducats, was soon exhausted ": the hopes of their return still depended on the ships of Venice and the alms of Rome; and such was their indigence, that their arrears, the payment of a debt, would be accepted as a favour, and might operate as a bribe 67. The danger and relief of Constantinople might excuse some prudent and pious dissimulation; and it was insinuated, that the obstinate heretics who should resist the consent of the East and West, would be 65 See the polite altereation of Mark and Bessarion in Syropulus

^{65 °}Ως εγω (Said an einment Greek) ότον ειτ ναον εισελθω Λατινών ου ασφοσωνώ στινα των εκεισε όχιων, επει ουδε γνωριζώ τινα (Syropulus, p. 109.) See the perplexity of the Greeks (p. 217, 218, 252, 953-273.)

(p. 257), who never dissembles the vices of his own party, and fairly praises the virtues of the Latins.

60 For the poverty of the Greek bishops, see a remarkable passage of Ducas (c. 31). One had povessed, for his whole property, three old gowns, &c. By teaching one-and-twenty years in his monastery, Bessarion himself had collected forty gold florus, but of these, the archbishop had expended twenty-right in his voyage from Peloponnesus, and the remainder at Constantinople (Syropulus, p. 127).

67 Sympulus demes that the Greeks received any money before they had subscribed the act of amon (p. 26.3)—yet he relates some suspicious circumstances, and their bribery and corruption are positively affirmed by the historian Ducas. CHAP.

abandoned in a hostile land to the revenge or justice of the Roman pontiffor. In the first private assembly of the Greeks, the formulary of union was approved by twenty-four, and rejected by twelve, members; but the five cross-bearers of St. Sophia, who aspired to represent the patriarch, were disqualified by ancient discipline; and their right of voting was transferred to an obsequious train of monks, grammarians, and profane laymen. The will of the monarch produced a false and servile unanimity, and no more than two patriots had courage to speak their own sentiments and those of their country. Demetrius, the emperor's brother, retired to Venice, that he might not be witness of the union; and Mark of Ephesus, mistaking perhaps his pride for his conscience, disclaimed all communion with the Latin heretics. and avowed himself the champion and confessor of the orthodox creed 6. In the treaty between the two nations, several forms of consent were proposed, such as might satisfy the Latins, without dishonouring the Greeks: and they weighed the scruples of words and syllables, till the theological balance trembled with a slight preponderance in favour of the Vatican. It was agreed (I must entreat the attention of the reader), that the Holy ⁶n The Greeks most piteously express their own fears of exile and perpetual slavery (Syropul p. 196): and they were strongly moved by the emperor's threats (p. 260).

^{•9} I had forgot another popular and orthodox protester: a favourite hound, who usually lay quiet on the foot-cloth of the emperor's throne, but who barked most furiously while the act of union was reading, without being silenced by the soothing or the lashes of the royal attendants. Syropul. p. 265, 266).

Shost proceeds from the Father and the Son, as from one principle and one substance; that he proceeds by the Son, being of the same nature and substance, and that he proceeds from the Father and the Son, by one spiration and production. It is less difficult to understand the articles of the preliminary treaty; that the pope should defray all the expences of the Greeks in their return home; that he should annually maintain two gallies and three hundred soldiers for the defence of Constantinople; that all the ships which transported pllgrims to Jerusalem should be obliged to touch at that port; that as often as they were required, the pope should furnish ten gallies for a year, or twenty for six months; and that he should powerfully solicit the princes of Europe, if the emperor had occasion for land-forces.

The same year, and almost the same day, were Eugenius marked by the deposition of Eugenius at Basil; deposed at Basil; and, at Florence, by his re-union of the Greeks AD 1438. and Latins. In the former synod (which he styled indeed an assembly of dæmons), the pope was branded with the guilt of simony, perjury, tyranny, heresy, and schism "; and declared to be incorrigible in his vices, unworthy of any title, and incapable of holding any cerlesiastical office. the latter he was revered as the true and holy Greeks at vicar of Christ, who, after a separation of six hun-Florence,

In Re-union A D.1438, July 6.

⁷⁰ From the original Lives of the Popes, in Mutatori's Collection (join, iii, p. ii, tom [xxv]), the manners of Fugerius IV appear to have been decent, and even exemplar. His situation, exposed to the world and to his enemies, was a restraint, and is a pledge dred years, had reconciled the Catholics of the East and West, in one fold, and under one shep-The act of union was subscribed by the herd. pope, the emperor, and the principal members of both churches; even by those who, like Syropulus71. had been deprived of the right of voting. copies might have sufficed for the East and West; but Eugenius was not satisfied, unless four authentic and similar transcripts were signed and attested as the monuments of his victory iv. On a memorable day, the sixth of July, the successors of St. Peter and Constantine ascended their thrones: the two nations assembled in the cathedral of Florence; their representatives, cardinal Julian and Bessarion archbishop of Nice, appeared in the pulpit, and, after reading in their respective tongues the act of union, they mutually embraced, in the name and the presence of their applauding brethren. The pope and his ministers then officiated according to the Roman liturgy; the creed was chaunted with the addition of filioque; the acquiescence of the Greeks was poorly excused by their ignorance of the harmonious, but inarti-

CHAP. LXVI.

⁷¹ Syropalus, rather than subscribe, would have assisted, as the least evil, at the ceremony of the union. He was compelled to do both, and the great ecclesiarch poorly excuses his submission to the emperor (p. 290—292).

⁷º None of these original acts of union can at present be produced. Of the ten MSS that are preserved (five at Rome, and the remainder at Florence, Bologna, Venice, Paris, and London) nine have been examined by an accurate critic (M. de Brequigny), who condemns them for the variety and imperfections of the Greek signatures. Yet several of these may be esteemed as authentic copies, which were subscribed at Florence, before (26th August 1439) the final separation of the pope and emperor (Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom. xhii, p. 287—311) cidate, sounds"; and the more scrupulous Latins refused any public celebration of the Byzantine rite. Yet the emperor and his clergy were not totally unmindful of national honour. 'The treaty was ratified by their consent: it was tacitly agreed that no innovation should be attempted in their creed or ceremonies: they spared, and secretly respected, the generous firmness of Mark of Ephesus; and, on the decease of the patriarch, they refused to elect his successor, except in the cathedral of St. Sophia. In the distribution of public and private rewards, the liberal pontiff exceeded their Their rehopes and his promises: the Greeks, with less pomp Constants and pride, returned by the same road of Ferrara and AD 1144. Venice; and their reception at Constantinople Feb 1 was such as will be described in the following chapter 7. The success of the first trial encouraged Eugenius to repeat the same edifying seenes; and the deputies of the Armemans, the Maronites. the Jacobites of Syria and Egypt, the Nestorians and the Æthiopians, were successively introduced, to kiss the feet of the Roman pontiff, and to announce the obedience and the orthodoxy of the East. These Oriental embassies, unknown in the countries which they presumed to represent ", didused over

CHAP.

⁷³ Ήμεν δε ώς ασημαι εδοκούν φωναι ("\τοριί | ρ 🚓)

⁷⁴ In their return, the Greeks conversed at Bologna with the ambassidors of England, and after come questions and answers, these impartial strangers laughed at the pretended union of Tiorence (Syropul p 307)

⁷⁵ Sq nugatory, or rather 50 fabulous, are these re-unions of the . Nestorians, Jacobites, &c. that I have turned over, without success, the Bibliotheca Oran dis of Assemannus, a faithful sla r of the Vatican the West the fame of Eugenius: and a clametur was artfully propagated against the remnant of a schism in Switzerland and Savoy, which alone impeded the harmony of the Christian world. The vigour of opposition was succeeded by the lassitude of despair: the council of Basil was silently dissolved, and Fælix, renouncing the tiara, again withdrew to the devout or delicious hermitage of Ripaille in.

CHAP. LXVI.

Final pcace of the church, A.D 1449

A general peace was secured by mutual acts of oblinion and indemnity: all ideas of reformation subsided; the popes continued to exercise and abuse their ecclesiastical despotism; nor has Rome been since disturbed by the mischiefs of a contested election ⁷⁷.

The journies of three emperors were unavailing for their temporal, or perhaps their spiritual, salvation; but they were productive of a beneficial consequence; the revival of the Greek learning in Italy, from whence it was propagated to the last nations of the West and North. In their lowest servitude and depression, the subjects of 76 Ripaille is situate near Thonon in Savoy, on the southern side of the lake of Geneva. It is now a Carthusian abbey; and Mr. Addison (Travels into Italy, vol. ii. p. 147—148 of Baskerville's edition of his works, has celebrated the place and the founder. Æneas Sylvins, and the fathers of Basil, appland the austere life of the ducal hermit, but the French and Italian proveibs most unluckily affect the popular opinion of his luxury.

77 In this account of the councils of Basil, Ferrara, and Florence, I have consulted the original acts, which fill the winth and winth tomes of the edution of Venice, and are closed by the perspicuous, though partial, history of Augustin Patricius, an Italian of the with century. They are digested and abridged by Dupin (Bibliothéque Eccles, tom mi.), and the continuator of Fleury (tom. xxii.); and the respect of the Gallican church for the adverse parties confines their members to an awkward moderation.

the Byzantine throne were still possessed of a CHAP. golden key that could unlock the treasures of antiquity; of a musical and prolific language, that gives a soul to the objects of sense, and a body to the abstractions of philosophy. Since the barriers of the monarchy, and even of the capital, had been trampled under foot, the various Barbarians had doubtless corrupted the form and substance of the national dialect; and ample glossaries have been composed, to interpret a multitude of words of Arabic, Turkish, Sclavonian, Latin, or French origin 79. But a purer idiom was spoken in the court and taught in the college; and the flourishing state of the language is described, and perhaps embellished, by a learned Italian 79, who, by a long residence and noble marriage ", was naturalized at Constantinople about thirty years before the Turkish conquest. "The vulgar speech," says 78 In the first attempt, Vieursia collected 2000 Gue osbarbarous words, to which, in a second edition, he subsouned 1800 more, yet what plenteous gleanings did he leave to Portius, Ducange, Fabrotti, the Bollandists, &c. Labric Bibliot Graction x p. 101, &c) Some Persic words may be found in Xenophon, and some Latin ones in Plutirch, and such is the mevitable effect of war and commerce but the form and substance of the language were not affected by this slight alloy.

79 The Life of Francis Philelphus, a sophist, proud, restless, and rapacions, has been diligently composed by Lancelot Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom x p. 691-751) and Tiraboschi, Istoria della Letteratura Italiana, tom vii p. 282-194) for the most part from his own letters. His elaborate writings, and those of his contemporaries, are forgotten but then familiar epistles still describe the men and the times.

w He married, and had perhaps debauched, the daughter of John. and the grand-daughter of Manuel Chrysolorae She was young, beautiful, and wealthy; and her noble family was allied to the Dorias of Genoa and the emperors of Constantinople.

CHAP.

Philelphus", "has been deprayed by the people. " and infected by the multitude of strangers and " merchants, who every day flock to the city and " mingle with the inhabitants. It is from the " disciples of such a school that the Latin language " received the versions of Aristotle and Plato; so " obscure in sense, and in spirit so poor. But the " Greeks who have escaped the contagion, are those " whom her follow; and they alone are worthy of "our imitation. In familiar discourse, they still " speak the tongue of Aristophanes and Euripides, " of the historians and philosophers of Athens; " and the style of their writings is still more cla-" borate and correct. The persons who, by their " birth and offices, are attached to the Byzantine " court, are those who maintain, with the least " alloy, the ancient standard of elegance and pu-" rity; and the native graces of language most con-" spicuously shine among the noble matrons, who " are excluded from all intercourse with foreigners. " With foreigners do I say? They live retired " and sequestered from the eyes of their fellow-citi-" zens. Seldom are they seen in the streets; and " when they leave their houses, it is in the dusk of "evening, on visits to the churches and their " nearest kindred. On these occasions, they are on " horseback, covered with a veil, and encompassed " by their parents, their husbands, or their ser-" vants"."

CHAP

Among the Greeks, a numerous and opulent clergy was dedicated to the service of religion: their monks and bishops have ever been distinguished by the gravity and austerity of their manners; nor were they diverted, like the Latin priests, by the pursuits and pleasures of a secular. and even military, life. After a large deduction for the time and talents that were lost in the devotion, the laziness, and the discord, of the church and cloyster, the more inquisitive and ambitious minds would explore the sacred and profane erudition of their native language. The ecclesiastics presided over the education of vonth; the schools of philosophy and cloquence were perpetuated till the fall of the empire; and it may be affirmed, that more books and more knowledge were included within the walls of Constantinople, than could be dispersed over the extensive countries of the West'. But an important distinction has Companbeen already noticed: the Greeks were stationary Goods and or retrograde, while the Latins were advancing 1 at a with a rapid and progressive motion. tions were excited by the spirit of independence

²² Phylophus, absurdly enough, derives this Greek or Over tal judousy from the reamers of ancient Rome.

⁶³ See the 2 ite of learning in the winth and with centurie, in the Lorned and judicious Mo heim (Institut, Hist, Leck) is 4.41 -440, 400-404 % and emulation; and even the little world of the Italian states contained more people and industry than the decreasing circle of the Byzantine empire. In Europe, the lower ranks of society were relieved from the voke of feudal servitude; and freedom is the first step to curiosity and knowledge. The use, however rude and corrupt, of the Latin tongue had been preserved by superstition; the universities, from Bologna to Oxford¹⁴, were peopled with thousands of scholars; and their misguided ardour might be directed to more liberal and manly studies. In the resurrection of science. Italy was the first that east away her shroud; and the eloquent Petrarch, by his lessons and his example, may justly be applauded as the first harbinger of day. A purer style of composition, a more generous and rational strain of sentiment, flowed from the study and imitation of the writers of ancient Rome; and the disciples of Cicero and Virgil approached, with reverence and love, the sanctuary of their Grecian masters. In the sack of Constantinople, the French, and even the Venetians, had despised and destroyed the works of Lysippus and Homer: the monuments of art may be annihilated by a single blow; but the immortal mind is renewed and multiplied by the copies of the pen; and such copies it was v4 At the end of the xyth century, there existed in Europe about fifty universities, and of these the foundation of ten or twelve is prior to the year 1300. They were crowded in proportion to their searcity. Bologua contained 10,000 students, chiefly of the civil law. In the year 1337 the number at Oxford had decreased from 50,000 to 0000 scholars (Henry's History of Great Binain, vol. iv. p. 478.). Yet even this decrease is much superior to the present list of the members of the university.

the ambition of Petrarch and his friends to possess and understand. The arms of the Turks undoubtedly pressed the flight of the muses; vet we may tremble at the thought, that Greece might have been overwhelmed, with her schools and libraries, before Europe had emerged from the deluge of barbarism, that the seeds of science might have been scattered by the winds, before the Italian soil was prepared for their cultivation.

The most learned Italians of the fifteenth cen- Revisal of tury have confessed and applauded the restoration in the Greek tion of Greek literature, after a long oblivion Italy. of many hundred years ". Yet in that country, and beyond the Alps, some names are quoted; some profound scholars, who in the darker ages were honourably distinguished by their knowledge of the Greek tongue; and national vanity has been loud in the praise of such rare examples of erudition. Without scrutinising the merit of individuals, truth must observe, that their science is without a cause, and without an effect; that it. was easy for them to satisfy themselves, and their more ignorant contemporaries; and that the idiom. which they had so marvellously acquired, was transcribed in few manuscripts, and was not taught in any university of the West. In a corner of

CHAP. LXVI.

15 Of those writers who professedly treat of the resonation of the Greek learning in Italy, the two principal are Hodin , Dr. Heinphrey Hody de Græcis Illustribus, Lingua Gracia Literarumque humamorum Instauratoribus; Londini, 1742, in large octavos, and Tiraboschi, Litoria della Letteratura Italiana, tom v. p. 404-377. tom vi p 112-144. The Oxford professor is a laborrous schola , but the librarian of Modena enjoys the superiority of a modern and national historian.

CHAP. LXVI.

Italy, it faintly existed as the popular, or at least the ecclesiastical, dialect ". The first impression of the Doric and Ionic colonies has never been completely erazed: the Calabrian churches were long attached to the throne of Constantinople; and the monks of St. Basil pursued their studies in Mount Athos and the schools of the East. bria was the native country of Barlaam, who has already appeared as a sectary and an ambassador; Leasons of and Barlaam was the first who revived, beyond the Alps, the memory, or at least the writings, of Homer 16. He is described, by Petrarch and Boccace 80, as a man of a diminutive stature, though truly great in the measure of learning and genius; of a piercing discernment, though of a slow and painful elecution. For many ages (as they affirm) Greece had not produced his equal in the knowledge of history, grammar, and philosophy; and his merit was celebrated in the attestations of the princes and doctors of Constantinople. One of •these attestations is still extant; and the emperor Cantacuzene, the protector of his adversaries, is forced to allow, that Euclid, Aristotle, and Plato.

Barlaam, A D.1330.

¹⁰ In Calabria que olim magna Græcia dicebatur, colonis Græcis repleta, remansit quadam linguæ veteris cognitio (Hodius, p. 2 v. If it were cradicated by the Romans, it was revived and perpetuated by the mords of St. Basil, who possessed seven convents at Rossano alone Giannone, Istoria di Napoli, tom. i p. 500. .

⁸⁷ It Barban (says Petrarch, the French and Germans) viv., non dicam libros sed nomen Homen andwerunt. Perhaps, in that respect, the xinth century was less happy than the age of Charle-were familiar to that profound and subtle logician". In the court of Avignon, he formed an intimate connection with Petrarch ", the first of the Latin scholars; and the desire of mutual instruction was the principle of their literary com-The Tuscan applied himself with eager Studies of curiosity and assiduous diligence to the study of AD 1330 the Greek language; and in a laborious struggle -1:74. with the dryness and difficulty of the first rudiments, he began to reach the sense, and to feel the spirit, of poets and philosophers, whose minds were congenial to his own. But he was soon deprived of the society and lessons of this useful assistant: Barlaam relinquished his fruitless embassy; and, on his return to Greece, he rashly provoked the swarms of fanatic monks, by attempting to substitute the light of reason to that of their navel. After a separation of three years, the two friends again met in the court of Naples: but the generous pupil renounced the fairest occasion of improvement; and by his recommendation Barlaam was finally settled in a small bishopric of his native Calabria ". The manifold avocations of Petrarch, love and friendship, his

⁸⁶ See the character of Barlaam, in Boccace de Genealog, Deorum, l. xv c. 6.

Cantacuzen, l'u e 3ti,

For the connection of Petrarch and Barlaam, and the two interviews, at Avignon in 1339, and at Naples in 1342, see the excellent Memoires sur la Vie de Petranjue, tom 1/p/400-410 tom, it p 75-77 of The bishoprie to which Barlaam retired, was the old Locii, in the middle ages Seta. Cyriaca, and by corruption Hieracium, Gerace (Dissert Chorographic) Italiae medit Avi, p. 312 c. The dives opum of the Norman times soon lapsed into poverty, since even the church was poor yet the total still contains 5000 inhabi-* tauts (Swinbinne, p. 310.).

various correspondence and frequent journies, the Roman laurel, and his claborate compositions in prose and verse, in Latin and Italian, diverted him from a foreign idiom; and as he advanced in life, the attainment of the Greek language was the object of his wishes rather than of his hopes. When he was about fifty years of age, a Byzantine ambassador, his friend, and a master of both tongues, presented him with a copy of Homer; and the answer of Petrarch is at once expressive of his doquence, gratitude, and regret. After celebrating the generosity of the donor, and the value of a gift more precious in his estimation than gold or rubies, he thus proceeds: "Your present of the " genuine and original text of the divine poet, the " fountain of all invention, is worthy of yourself and " of me: you have fulfilled your promise, and sa-" tisfied my desires. Yet your liberality is still " imperfect: with Homer you should have given " me yourself; a guide, who could lead me into the " fields of light, and disclose to my wondering eyes " the specious miracles of the Iliad and Odyssev. " But, alas! Homer is dumb, or I am deaf; nor is " it in my power to enjoy the beauty which I pos-" sess. I have scated him by the side of Plato, " the prince of poets near the prince of philoso-" phers; and I glory in the sight of my illustrious " guests. Of their immortal writings, whatever " had been translated into the Latin idiom, I had " already acquired; but, if there be no profit, " there is some pleasure, in beholding these ve-. " nerable Greeks in their proper and national I am delighted with the aspect of . " habit.

CHAP. LXVI.

"Homer: and as often as I embrace the silent " volume, I exclaim with a sigh, Illustrious bard! " with what pleasure should I listen to thy song, " if my sense of hearing were not obstructed and " lost by the death of one friend, and in the " much-lamented absence of another. Nor do " I yet despair; and the example of Cato sug-" gests some comfort and hope, since it was in the " last period of age that he attained the knowledge " of the Greek letters"."

was obtained by the fortune and industry of his A.D. 1300. friend Boccace", the father of the Tuscan prose. &c That popular writer, who derives his reputation from the Decameron, an hundred novels of pleasantry and love, may aspire to the more serious praise of restoring in Italy the study of the Greek language. In the year one thousand three hundred and sixty, a disciple of Barlaam, whose name was Leo, or Leontius Pilatus, was detained in his way to Avignon by the advice and hospitality of Boccace, who lodged the stranger in his house, prevailed on the republic of Florence to

The prize which eluded the efforts of Petrarchy of Boc-

98 I will transcribe a passize from this episth of Petratch 'Famil. ix 2 . Donasti Homerum non malienuiu sermonem violento alveo derivatum, sed ex ipsis Green cloquin scatchins, et qualis divino illi profluxit ingemo-Since the voce Homerus turns apid me mitus, minio vero ego apud illum suidus sum. Gandeo tamen vel adspectu solo, ae sape illum amplexus atque su-pirais dico, O magne ve, ∞r . 90 For the life and writings of Boreace, who was born in 1313, and died ri 137), Fabricius Bibliot Leim medii Tai, toni i p 243, &c coad Traboschi tom v p 83/430-431 (may be coasulted. The editions, versions, mutations of his novels, are minimerable. Yet he was ashuned to communicate that training, and perhaps scandalous, work to Petrirch, his re-pectable friend, in whose letters and memous he conspicuously appears allow him an annual stipend, and devoted his leisure to the first Greck professor, who taught that language in the Western countries of Europe.

CHAP. LXVI.

Leo Pilatus, first Greel professor at Florence We-t. AD 1360 -1303

The appearance of Leo might disgust the most eager disciple; he was clothed in the mantle of a philosopher, or a mendicant; his countenance was and in the hideous; his face was overshadowed with black hair; his beard long and uncombed; his deportment rustic; his temper gloomy and inconstant; nor could he grace his discourse with the ofnaments, or even the perspicuity, of Latin elocution. But his mind was stored with a treasure of Greek learning; history and fable, philosophy and grammar, were alike at his command; and he read the poems of Homer in the schools of Florence. It was from his explanation that Boccace composed and transcribed a literal prose version of the Iliad and Odyssey, which satisfied the thirst of his friend Petrarch, and which perhaps, in the succeeding century, was claudestinely used by Laurentius Valla, the Latin interpreter. It was from his narratives that the same Boccace collected the materials for his treatise on the genealogy of the heathen gods, a work, in that age, of stupendous erudition, and which he ostentatiously sprinkled with Greek characters and passages, to excite the wonder and applause of his more ignorant readers "4. The first steps of learning are slow and laborious; no more than ten votaries of Homer could be enumerated in all Italy: and neither Rome, nor Venice, nor Naples, could add a single name to this studious catalogue. But their numbers would have multiplied, their progress would have been accelerated, if the inconstant Leo, at the end of three years, had not relinquished an honourable and beneficial station. his passage, Petrarch entertained him at Padua a short time; he enjoyed the scholar, but was justly offended with the gloomy and unsocial temper of Discontented with the world and with the man. himself, Leo depreciated his present enjoyments, while absent persons and objects were dear to his imagination. In Italy he was a Thessalian, in Greece a native of Calabria; in the company of the Latins he disdained their language, religion, and manners: no sooner was he landed at Constantinople, than he again sighed for the wealth of Venice and the elegance of Florence. His Italian friends were deaf to his importunity; he depended on their curiosity and indulgence, and embarked on a second voyage; but on his entrance into the Adriatic, the ship was assailed by a tempest, and the unfortunate teacher, who like Ulysses had fastened himself to the mast, was struck dead by a flash of lightning. The humane Petrarch dropt a tear on his disaster; but he was most anxious to learn whether some copy of Euripides or Sophocles might not be saved from the hands of the mariners95. CHAP.

⁹⁴ Boccace indulges an honest vanity; Ostentationis causa Guera carmina adscripsi ... jure utor meo , meum est hor decus mea gloria sedicet inter Ltruscos Graeis uti carminibus Nonne ego fui qui Leontium Pilatum, &c (de Genealogia Deorum, I xv. c. 7. a work which, though now forgotten, has run through durteen or fourteen editions.).

⁹³ Leontius, or Leo Pilatus, is sufficiently made known by Hody (p *2-11.) and the Abbé de Sade (Vie de Petrarque, tom. 111.

CHAP. LXVI. Foundation of the Greek language in Italy by Manuel Chry-oloras, A.D 1300 - :1415.

But the faint rudiments of Greek learning. which Petrarch had encouraged and Boccace had planted, soon withered and expired. The succeeding generation was content for a while with the improvement of Latin eloquence; nor was it before the end of the fourteenth century, that a new and perpetual flame was rekindled in Italy 90. ous to his own journey, the emperor Manuel disnatched his envoys and orators to implore the compassion of the Western princes. Of these envoys, the most conspicuous, or the most learned, was Manuel Chrysoloras 67, of noble birth, and whose Roman ancestors are supposed to have migrated with the great Constantine. After visiting the courts of France and England, where he obtained some contributions and more promises, the envoy was invited to assume the office of a professor; and Florence had again the honour of this second invitation. By his knowledge, not only of the Greek, but of the Latin tongue, Chrysoloras deserved the stipend, and surpassed the expectation, of the repub-His school was frequented by a crowd of dis-

p. 625-634. 670-673 (who has very happily caught the lively and dramatic manner of his original.

16 Dr. Hody (p. 54 + 15 angry with Leonard Arein, Guannus, Paulus Jovius, &c. for alliming, that the Grick letters were restored in Italy post septiments annos; as if, says he, they had flourished till the end of the with century. These writers most probably reckoned from the last period of the exarchate, and the presence of the Greek magistrates and troops at Rayenna and Rome, must have preserved, in some degree, the use of their native tongue.

97 See the article of Emanuel, or Manuel Chrysoloras, in Hody (p. 12—54.) and Tirahoschi (tim. vii. p. 113—118.) The precise date of his arrival floats between the years 1390 and 1400, and is only confined by the reign of Boniface IV.

ciples of every rank and age; and one of these, in a general history, has described his motives and his success. "At that time," says Leonard Aretin", " I was a student of the civil law; but my " soul was inflamed with the love of letters; and "I bestowed some application on the sciences of " logic and rhetoric. On the arrival of Manuel. "I hesitated whether I should desert my legal " studies, or relinquish this golden opportunity; " and thus, in the ardour of youth, I communed " with my own mind-Wilt thou be wanting to "thyself and thy fortune? Wilt thou refuse to " be introduced to a familiar converse with Homer, " Plato, and Demosthenes? with those poets, phi-" losophers, and orators, of whom such wonders are " related, and who are celebrated by every age as " the great masters of human science? Of professors " and scholars in civil law, a sufficient supply will " always be found in our universities; but a teacher, " and such a teacher, of the Greek language, if he " once be suffered to escape, may never afterwards " be retrieved. Convinced by these reasons, I gave " myself to Chrysoloras; and so strong was my " passion, that the lessons which I had imbibed "in the day were the constant subject of my 98 The name of Archines has been assumed by five or six natives of Arexto in Tuscany, of whom the most famous and the most worthless lived in the xith century. Leonardus Brainis Archines, the disciple of Chrysolotas, was a languast, an orator, and an historian, the secretary of four successive popes, and the chuncellor of the republic of Plorence, where he died A D 1444, at the age of seventy-five (Fabric Bibliot, melu Ævi, tom. 1 p. 190, No. Tus-bosch, tom. vi. p. 33-38)

CHAP. LXVI. CHAP.

" nightly dreams"." At the same time and place, the Latin classics were explained by John of Ravenna, the domestic pupil of Petrarchine: the Italians, who illustrated their age and country, were formed in this double school; and Florence became the fruitful seminary of Greek and Roman erudition 101. The presence of the emperor recalled Chrysoloras from the college to the court; but he afterwards taught at Pavia and Rome with equal industry and applause. The remainder of his life, about fifteen years, was divided between Italy and Constantinople, between embassies and lessons. In the noble office of enlightening a foreign nation, the grammarian was not unmindful of a more sacred duty to his prince and country; and Emanuel Chrysoloras died at Constance on a public mission from the emperor to the council.

The Greek letters in Italy was prosecuted by a series of emiin Italy,
A.D. 1400 grants, who were destitute of fortune, and endowed with learning, or at least with language.

99 See the passage in Arctin. Commentario Rentan suo Tempore in Italia gestarum, apud Hodium, p. 28-30.

often complains of the eager curiosity, restless temper, and proud feelings, which announce the genius and glory of a riper age (Memoires sur Petrarque, toni, in p. 700—709.).

101 Hine Græcæ Latinæque scholæ exortæ sunt, Guarino Philelpho, Leonardo Aretino, Caroloque, ac plerisque alia tanquam ex eque Trojano prodeuntibus, quoram emulatione multa ingenia deinceps ad laudem excitata sunt (Platina in Bomfacio IX.). Another Italian writer adda the names of Paulus Petrus Vergenius, Omnibonus Vincentius, Poggius, Franciscus Barbarus, &c. But I question whether a rigid chronology would allow Chrysoloras all these eminent scholars (Hodius, p. 25—27, &c.).

From the terror or oppression of the Turkish arms, the natives of Thessalonica and Constantinople escaned to a land of freedom, curiosity, and wealth. The synod introduced into Florence the lights of the Greek church and the oracles of the Platonic philosophy; and the fugitives who adhered to the union, had the double merit of renouncing their country, not only for the Christian, but for the catholic, cause. A patriot, who sacrifices his party and conscience to the allurements of favour, may be possessed however of the private and social virtues: he no longer hears the reproachful cuithets of slave and apostate; and the consideration which he acquires among his new associates, will restore in his own eyes the dignity of his character. prudent conformity of Bessarion was rewarded with Bessarion. the Roman purple: he fixed his residence in Italy, and the Greek cardinal, the titular patriarch of Constantinople, was respected as the chief and protector of his nation 102: his abilities were exercised in the legations of Bologna, Venice, Germany, and France; and his election to the chair of St. Peter floated for a moment on the uncertain breath of a conclave 103. His ecclesiastical honours diffused a splendour and pre-eminence over his literary merit and service: his palace

CHAP. .

100 See in Hody the article of Bessarion (p. 136-177.) Theodore Gaza, George of Trebizond, and the rest of the Greek-, whom I have named or comitted, are inserted in their proper chapters of his learned work.. See likewise Titaboschi, in the 1 t and 2nd parts of the vith tome ^{. 104} The cardinals knocked at his door, but his conclavist refused to interrupt the studies of Bessanon, " Nicholas," said he, " thy " respect has cost thee an hat, and me the tiara" was a school; as often as the cardinal visited the Vatican, he was attended by a learned train of both nations 101; of men applauded by themselves and the public; and whose writings, now overspread with dust, were popular and useful in their own times. I shall not attempt to enumerate the restorers of Grecian literature in the fifteenth century; and it may be sufficient to mention with gratitude the names of Theodore Gaza, of George of Trebizond, of John Argyropulus, and Demetrius Chalcocondyles, who taught their native language in the schools of Florence and Rome. Their labours were not inferior to those of Bessarion, whose purple they revered, and whose fortune was the secret object of their envy. the lives of these grammarians were humble and obscure: they had declined the lucrative paths of the church; their dress and manners secluded them from the commerce of the world; and since they were confined to the merit, they might be content with the rewards, of learning. this character. Janus Lascaris 105 will deserve an exception. His eloquence, politeness, and Imperial descent, recommended him to the French monarchs; and in the same cities he was alternately employed to teach and to negociate. Duty and interest prompted them to cultivate the study of the Latin language: and the most successful attained the faculty of writing and speaking with fluency and elegance in a foreign idiom. they ever retained the inveterate vanity of their country: their praise, or at least their esteem, was reserved for the national writers, to whom they owed their fame and subsistence; and they sometimes betrayed their contempt in licentious eriticism or satire on Virgil's poetry and the oratory of Tully 106. The superiority of these masters arose from the familiar use of a living language; and their first disciples were incapable of discerning how far they had degenerated from the knowledge, and even the practice, of their ancestors. A vicious pronunciation 107, which they introduced,

CHAP.

Their faults and merits

¹⁰⁴ Such as George of Trebizond, Theodore Gaza, Arayropulus, Andronicus of Thessalonica, Philelphus, Poggius, Blondus, Nicholas Perrot, Valla, Campanus, Platina, S.c. Viri (says Hody with the pious zeal of a scholar) nullo avo perituri (p. 156).

105 He was born before the taking of Constantinople, but his honourable life was stretched far into the xiith century (A. D. 1530). Leo X, and Francis I, were his noblest patrons, under whose anspices he founded the Greek colleges of Rome and Paris (Hods, p. 247—275.). He fit posterity in France; but the counts de Vintinulle, and their numerous branches, derive the name of Liscaus from a doubtful marriage in the suith century with the daughter of a Greek emperor (Ducange, Fam. Byzant, p. 224–230.).

CHAP. LXVI.

100 Two of his epigrams against Virgil, and three against Tully, are proserved and related by Franciscus Flondus, who can find no better names than Graeulus ineptus et impudent (Hody, p. 274.). In our own times, an English critic has accused the Lineid of contaming multa languida, nugatoria, spiniti et majestate carimins heroici defecta, many such verses as he, the said Jeremiah Markland, would have been ashamed of owning (præfat, ad Statu Sylvas, p. 21, 22).

107 Emanuel Chrysoloras, and his colleagues, are accused of ignorance, envy, or avarice (Sylloge, &c tom in p. 235.). The modern Greeks pronounce the θ as a V consonant, and confound three vowels (η + ϑ), and extra diphthongs. Such was the vulgar pronunciation which the stern Gardiner maintained by penal statutes in the university of Cambridge: but the monosyllable $\theta\eta$ represented to an Atuc can the bleating of sheep, and a beliwether is better evidence than a bishop or a chancellor. The treatises of those scholars, particularly Erasmus, who asserted a more classical pronunciation, are collected in the Sylloge of Havercamp, (2 vols

CHAP LXVI. was banished from the schools by the reason of the succeeding age. Of the power of the Greek accents they were ignorant, and those musical notes, which, from an Attic tongue, and to an Attic ear, must have been the secret soul of harmony, were to their eyes, as to our own, no more than minute and unmeaning marks, in prose superfluous, and troublesome in verse. The art of grammar they truly possessed: the valuable fragments of Apollonius and Herodian were transfused into their lessons; and their treatises of syntax and etymology, though devoid of philosophic spirit, are still useful to the Greek student. In the shipwreck of the Byzantine libraries, each fugitive seized a fragment of treasure, a copy of some author, who, without his industry, might have perished: the transcripts were multiplied by an assiduous, and sometimes an elegant, pen; and the text was corrected and explained by their own comments, or those of the elder scholiasts. sense, though not the spirit, of the Greek classics, was interpreted to the Latin world: the beauties of style evaporate in a version; but the judgment of Theodore Gaza selected the more solid works of Aristotle and Theophrastus, and their natural histories of animals and plants opened a rich fund of genuine and experimental science.

The Platone philos sphy

Yet the fleeting shadows of metaphysics were pursued with more curiosity and ardour. After a in octavo, (Lugd. Bat. 1736, 1740.): but it is difficult to paint sounds by words, and in their reference to modern use, they can be understood only by their respective countrymen. We may observe, that our peculiar pronunciation of the e, th, is approved by Erasmus (tom. ii. p. 130.).

long oblivion. Plato was revived in Italy by a venerable Greek 100, who taught in the house of Cosmo of Medicis. While the synod of Florence was involved in theological debate, some beneficial consequences might flow from the study of his elegant philosophy: his style is the purest standard of the Attic dialect; and his subline thoughts are sometimes adapted to familiar conversation, and sometimes adorned with the richest colours of poetry and eloquence. The dialogues of Plato are a dramatic picture of the life and death of a sage; and, as often as he descends from the clouds, his moral system inculcates the love of truth, of our country, and of mankind. The precept and example of Socrates recommended a modest doubt and liberal inquiry: and if the Platonists, with blind devotion, adored the visions and errors of their divine master, their enthusiasm might correct the dry dogmatic method of the Peripatetic school. So equal, yet so opposite, are the merits of Plato and Aristotle, that they may be balanced in endless controversy; but some spark of freedom may be produced by the collision of adverse servitude The modern Greeks were divided between the two sects: with more fury than skill they fought under the banner of their leaders; and the field of battle was removed in their flight from Constantinople to Rome. But this philosophical debate soon degenerated into an angry and personal quarrel of hea George Gemistus Pletho, a various and voluminous writer, the master of Bessarion, and all the Platonists of the times. He visited Italy in his old age, and soon returned to end his day in Peloponnesus. See the curious Diatribe of Leo Allatons de Georgius, in Fabricius (Bibliot, Græe, tom x p. 730—756)

CILAP. LXVI. CHAP. LXVI. grammarians; and Bessarion, though an advocate for Plato, protected the national honour, by interposing the advice and authority of a mediator. In the gardens of the Medici, the academical doctrine was enjoyed by the polite and learned: but their philosophic society was quickly dissolved; and if the writings of the Attic sage were perused in the closet, the more powerful Stagyrite continued to reign the oracle of the church and school ¹⁶³.

Limilation and proguess of the Latins I have fairly represented the literary merits of the Greeks; yet it must be confessed, that they were seconded and surpassed by the ardour of the Latins. Italy was divided into many independent states; and at that time, it was the ambition of princes and republics to vie with each other in the encouragement and reward of literature. The fame of Nicholas the fifth "has not been adequate to his merits. From a plebeian origin he raised himself by his virtue and learning: the character of the man prevailed over the interest of the pope; and he sharpened those weapons which were soon pointed against the Roman church".

Nicholas V A D 1447 —1455.

> (i) The state of the Platonic philosophy in Italy, is illustrated by Bown Mem de PAcad des Inscriptions, form in p. 715—7293, and Tiraboschi form vi. P. (p. 950—288).

> 10 See the Lite of Nicholas V by two contemporary anthors, Janotius Mancitus (tom, in P in p. 905—062) and Vespasian of Florence (tom, xxv. p. 207—200.) in the collection of Muratori, and consult Turabuschi (tom vi. P ii. p. 46—52) tog v and Hody, in the articles of Theodore Gaza, George of Tubizond, &c.

10 Lord Bolingbruke observes, with truth and sprit, that the popes in the instance were worse politicians than the mutits, and that the chaini which had bound mankand for so many ages, was broken by the magicians themselves (Letters on the Study of History, l. vi. p. 165, 166, octavo edition, 1779.).

CHAP

He had been the friend of the most eminent scholars of the age: he became their patron; and such was the humility of his manners, that the change was searcely discernible either to them or to himself. If he pressed the acceptance of a liberal gift, it was not as the measure of desert, but as the proof of benevolence: and when modest merit declined his bounty, "accept it," would he say with a consciousness of his own worth; " ye will not always have a Nicholas among you." The influence of the holy see pervaded Christendom: and he exerted that influence in the search. not of benefices, but of books. From the ruins of the Byzantine libraries, from the darkest monasteries of Germany and Britain, he collected the dusty manuscripts of the writers of antiquity; and wherever the original could not be removed, a faithful copy was transcribed and transmitted for his use. The Vatican, the old repository for bulls and legends, for superstition and forgery, was daily replenished with more precious furniture: and such was the industry of Nicholas, that in a reign of eight years, he formed a library of five thousand volumes. To his munificence the Latin world was indebted for the versions of Xenophon, Diodorus, Polybius, Thucydides, Herodotus, and Appian; of Strabo's Geography, of the Iliad, of the most valuable works of Plato and Aristotle, of Ptolemy and Theophrastus, and of the fathers of the Greek church. The example of the Roman pon- Lorenzo tiff was preceded or imitated by a Florentine mer- of Medicischant, who governed the republic without arms and -1402 without a title. Cosmo of Medicis 118 was the father of a line of princes, whose name and age are almost synonymous with the restoration of learning: his credit was ennobled into fame: his riches were dedicated to the service of mankind: he corresponded at once with Cairo and London: and a cargo of Indian spices and Greek books was often imported in the same vessel. The genius and education of his grandson Lorenzo rendered him not only a patron, but a judge and candidate, in the literary race. In his palace, distress was entitled to relief, and merit to reward; his leisure hours were delightfully spent in the Platonic academy: he encouraged the emulation of Demetrius Chalcocondyles and Angelo Politian; and his active missionary Janus Lascaris returned from the East with a treasure of two hundred manuscripts, fourscore of which were as yet unknown in the libraries of Europe". The rest of Italy was animated by a similar spirit, and the progress of the nation repaid the liberality of her princes. The Latins held the exclusive property of their own literature: and these disciples of Greece were 112 See the literary history of Cosmo and Lorenzo of Medicis, in Tiraboschi (tom vi. P. i. 1. i. c. 2.), who bestows a due measure of praise on Alphonso of Arragon, king of Naples, the dukes of Milan, Ferrara, Urbino, &c.—The republic of Venice has deserved the least from the gratitude of scholars.

CHAP. LXVI.

113 Tiraboschi (tom. vi. P. i. p. 104.) from the preface of Janus Lascaris to the Greek Anthology, printed at Florence 1494. Latebant (says Aldus in his preface to the Greek orators, apud Hodium, p. 249.) in Atho Thracia monte. Eas Lascaris in Italian reportavit. Miserat enim ipsum Laurentius ille Medices in Græciam ad inquirendos simul, et quantovis eniendos pretio bonos libros. It is remarkable enough, that the research was facilitated by sultan Bajazet II.

soon capable of transmitting and improving the lessons which they had imbibed. After a short succession of foreign teachers, the tide of emigration subsided; but the language of Constantinople was spread beyond the Alps; and the natives of France, Germany, and England ", imparted to their country the sacred fire which they had kindled in the schools of Florence and Rome ". In the productions of the mind, as in those of the soil. the gifts of nature are excelled by industry and skill: the Greek authors, forgotten on the banks of the Ilissus, have been illustrated on those of the Elbe and the Thames; and Bessarion or Gaza might have envied the superior science of the Barbarians; the accuracy of Budæus, the taste of Erasmus, the copiousness of Stephens, the crudition of Scaliger, the discernment of Reiske, or of Bentley. On the side of the Latins, the discovery of printing was a casual advantage: but this useful art has been applied by Aldus, and his innumerable successors, to perpetuate and multiply the works of antiquity 116. A single manuscript imported from

CHAP.

114 The Greek language was introduced into the university of Oxford in the lost years of the xith century, by Grocyn, Limacer, and Latimer, who had all studied at Florence under Demotrias Chalcocondyles. See Dr. Kinght's curious Life of Brasmus Although a stout academical patriot, he is forced to acknowledge that Erasmus learned Greek at Oxford, and taught it at Cambridge 115 The jealous Italians were desirons of keeping a monopoly of Greek learning. When Aldus was about to publish the Greek scholiasts on Sophocles and Euripides, Cave (said they), cave hoc facias, no Bailing istis adjuit donit maneant, et pauciores in Italiam ventitent (Dr. Knight, in his life of Erasinus, p. 305, from Beatus Rhenanus.).

116 The press of Aldus Manuttus, a Román, was established at Venice about the year 1494, he printed above sixty considerable Greece is revived in ten thousand copies; and each copy is fairer than the original. In this form, Homer and Plato would peruse with more satisfaction their own writings; and their scholiasts must resign the prize to the labours of our Western editors.

Use and abuse of accent learning.

Before the revival of classic literature, the Barbarians in Europe were immersed in ignorance; and their vulgar tongues were marked with the rudeness and poverty of their manners. The students of the more perfect idioms of Rome and Greece were introduced to a new world of light and science; to the society of the free and polished nations of antiquity; and to a familiar converse with those immortal men who spoke the sublime language of clo-Such an intercourse must tend quence and reason. to refine the taste, and to clevate the genius, of the moderns; and vet, from the first experiments, it might appear that the study of the ancients had given fetters, rather than wings, to the human mind. However laudable, the spirit of imitation is of a servile cast; and the first disciples of the Greeks and Romans were a colony of strangers in the midst of their age and country. The minute and laborious diligence which explored the antiquities of remote times, might have improved or adorned the present works of Greek Interature, almost all for the first time, several containing different treatises and authors, and of several authors two, three, or four editions (Fabric Bibliot Gree, tom xiii p. 605, &c.). Yet his glory must not tempt us to forget, that the first Greek book, the Grammar of Constantine Lascaus, was purified at Milan in 1476 and that the Florence Homer of 1488 displays all the luxury of the typographical art. See the Annales Typographical of Mataire, and the Bibliographic Instructive of De Burs, a knowing bookseller of Paris.

state of society: the critic and metaphysician were the slaves of Aristotle; the poets, historians, and orators, were proud to repeat the thoughts and words of the Augustan age; the works of nature we're observed with the eyes of Pliny and Theophrastus: and some Pagan votaries professed a secret devotion to the gods of Homer and Plato 117. The Italians were oppressed by the strength and number of their ancient auxiliaries: the century after the deaths of Petrarch and Boccace was filled with a croud of Latin imitators, who decently repose on our shelves; but in that æra of learning, it will not be easy to discern a real discovery of science, a work of invention or eloquence, in the popular language of the country 110. But as soon as it had been deeply saturated with the celestial dew, the soil was quickened into vegetation and life; modern idioms were refined; the classics

CHAP.

10. I will cheet those singular examples of this classic enthusiasm 1. At the pool of Florence, Gernistus Pletho said, in familiar conversation to George of Trebizond, that in a short time markind voidd mammorsly ren onice the Go pel and the Koran, tora religion similar to that of the Gentiles (Leo Allanus, apid Fabricium, tom x p. 7 of 2. 2. Paul II persecuted the Roman academy, which had been founded by Pomponius Latus, and the principal members were accused of here y, impiety, and paganom (Tiraboschi, tom 1 P. p. 84, 82 o. 3. In the next contury, some scholars and poets in France celebrated the success of Jodelle's tragedy of Cropatra, by a testival of Bacchus, and, as it is said, by the sacrifice of a go, tyclach, Dictionnaire, Jorie 13. Frontinelle, form in p. 56 − 0.1. Yet the sparit of bigotify might often discern a scrious impactly in the sporter, play of fancy and learning.

10 Table sorre of Bo care ded in the year 1475, and we connot place before 1480, the composition of the Morgante Mercros of Lule), and the Orlando Jeannotato of Boyardo (Tuabos in, tom vi. P. u. p. 174—177).

CHAP. Athens and Rome inspired a pure taste and a generous emulation; and in Italy, as afterwards in France and England, the pleasing reign of poetry and fiction was succeeded by the light of speculative and experimental philosophy. Genius may anticipate the season of maturity; but in the education of a people, as in that of an individual. memory must be exercised, before the powers of reason and fancy can be expanded: nor may the artist hope to equal or surpass, till he has learned to imitate, the works of his predecessors.

CHAP. LXVII.

Schism of the Greeks and Latins .- Reign and Character of Amurath the Second .- ('rusade of Ladislaus King of Hungary .-- His Defeat and Death.—John Huniades.—Scanderbeg.— Constantine Palæologus, last Emperor of the East.

THE respective merits of Rome and Constantinople are compared and celebrated by an eloquent Greek, the father of the Italian schools '. view of the ancient capital, the seat of his ances- $\frac{\text{sor ot}}{\text{Rome and}}$ tors, surpassed the most sanguine expectations of Constanti-Emanuel Chrysoloras; and he no longer blamed the exclamation of an old sophist, that Rome was the habitation, not of men, but of gods. gods, and those men, had long since vanished; but to the eye of liberal enthusiasm, the majesty of ruin restored the image of her ancient prosperity. The monuments of the consuls and Cæsars, of the martyrs and apostles, engaged on all sides the curiosity of the philosopher and the Christian; and he confessed, that in every age the arms and the religion of Rome were destined to reign over the earth. While Chrysoloras admired the venerable beauties of the mother, he was not forgetful of his native, country, her fairest daughter, her Imperial colony; and the Byzantine patriot expatiates with zeal and truth, on the eternal advantages of nature, and the more transitory glories of art and dominion, which adorned, or had adorned, the city of Constantine. Yet the perfection of the copy still redounds (as he modestly observes) to the honour of the original, and parents are delighted to be renewed, and even excelled, by the superior merit of their children. "Constanti-".nople," says the orator, "is situate on a com-" manding point, between Europe and Asia, be-"tween the Archipelago and the Euxine. "her interposition, the two seas, and the two " continents, are united for the common benefit " of nations; and the gates of commerce may " be shut or opened at her command. The har-"bour, encompassed on all sides by the sea and " the continent, is the most secure and capacious " in the world. The walls and gates of Constan-" tinople may be compared with those of Baby-"lon: the towers are many; each tower is a solid "and lofty structure; and the second wall, the " outer fortification, would be sufficient for the " defence and dignity of an ordinary capital. " broad and rapid stream may be introduced into "the ditches; and the artificial island may be "encompassed, like Athens", by land or water."

CHAP. LXVII. The Compari-

¹ The epistle of Emanuel Chrysolorus to the emperor John Palæologus will not offend the eye or ear of a classical student rad calcem Codini de Antiquitatibus C P p 107-120 . The superscription suggests a chronological remark, that John Paleologus II. was associated in the empire before the year 1414, the date of Chrysoloras's death. A still earlier date, at least 1408, is deduced from the age of his youngest sons, Demetrius and Thomas, who were both Porphyrogeniti (Ducange, Fam. Byzant p 244 247).

CHAP.

² Somebody observed that the city of Athens might be circumnavigated (τις είπεν την ανολίν των Αθηναίων δυνασθαί και αναφαπλεί και ανεφιπλείν). But what may be true in a rhetorical sense of Constanting.

CHAP. LXVII.

Two strong and natural causes are alleged for the perfection of the model of new Rome. The royal founder reigned over the most illustrious nations of the globe; and in the accomplishment of his designs, the power of the Romans was combined with the art and science of the Greeks. cities have been reared to maturity by accident and time; their beauties are mingled with disorder and deformity; and the inhabitants, unwilling to remove from their natal spot, are incapable of correcting the errors of their ancestors, and the original vices of situation or climate. But the free idea of Constantinople was formed and executed by a single mind; and the primitive model was improved by the obedient zeal of the subjects and successors of the first monarch. The adjacent isles were stored with an inexhaustible supply of marble; but the various materials were transported from the most remote shores of Europe and Asia; and the pubhe and private buildings, the palaces, churches, aqueducts, cisterns, porticoes, columns, baths, and hippodromes, were adapted to the greatness of the capital of the East. The superfluity of wealth was spread along the shores of Europe and Asia; and the Byzantine territory, as far as the Euxune, the Hellespont, and the long wall, might be considered as a populous suburb and a perpetual gar-In this flattering picture, the past and the present, the times of prosperity and deeay, are artfully confounded; but a sigh and a confession tinople, cannot be applied to the situation of Athere, five males from the sea, and not intersected or surrounded by $my mx^{-1/4}e$ stream, escape from the orator, that his wretched country was the shadow and sepulchre of its former self. The works of ancient sculpture had been defaced by Christian zeal or Barbaric violence: the fairest structures were demolished; and the marbles of Paros or Numidia were burnt for lime, or applied to the meanest uses. Of many a statue, the place was marked by an empty pedestal; of many a column, the size was determined by a broken capital; the tombs of the emperors were scattered on the ground; the stroke of time was accelerated by storms and earthquakes; and the vacant space was adorned, by vulgar tradition, with fabulous monuments of gold and silver. From these wonders, which lived only in memory or belief, he distinguishes, however, the porphyry pillar, the column and colossus of Justinian, and the church, more especially the dome, of St. Sophia; the best conclusion, since it could not be described according to its merits, and after it no other object could deserve to be mentioned. But he forgets, that a century before, the trembling fabrics of the colossus and the church had been saved and supported by the timely care of Andronicus the elder. Thirty years after the emperor had fortified St. Sophia with two new buttresses or pyramids, the eastern hemisphere suddenly gave way; and the images, the altars, and the sanctuary, were crushed by the falling ruin. mischief indeed was speedily repaired; the rubbish was cleared by the incessant labour of every rank and age; and the poor remains of riches and industry were consecrated by the Greeks to the most stately and venerable temple of the East 1.

¹ Nicephorus Gregoras has described the Colossus of Justiman (Lvn. 12.)—but his measures are false and meousistent. The editor Boivin consulted his friend Girardon, and the sculptor gave him the true proportions of an equistrian statue. That of Justiman was still visible to Peter Gyllius, not on the column, but in the outward court of the seriglio, and he was at Constantinople when it was melted down, and east into a brass cannon (de Topograph, C. P. Liu, C. 17.)

The last hope of the falling city and empire TheGreek was placed in the harmony of the mother and after the daughter, in the maternal tenderness of Rome, council c and the filial obedience of Constantinople. the synod of Florence, the Greeks and Latins had embraced, and subscribed, and promised; but these signs of friendship were perfidious or fruitless; and the baseless fabric of the union vanished like a dream". The emperor and his prelates returned home in the Venetian gallies; but as they touched at the Morea and the isles of council of In A.D. 1440 -1448.

4 See the decay and repairs of St. Sophia, in Nicephorus Gregoras (l vii 12, l xv 2) The building was propped by Andronicus in 1317, the costern hemisphere fell in 134). The Greeks, in their pompous rhetoric, exalt the beauty and holiness of the church, an earthly heaven, the abode of angels, and of God himself, &c

5 The genuine and original narrative of Syropulus (p. 312-3-1-) opens the schism from the first office of the Greeks at Venice, to the general opposition at Constantinople of the clergy and people.

On the schism of Constantinople, see Phranza (1 ii c 17), Laonicus Chalcondyles (1 vi. p. 155, 150), and Ducas (1 31.); the last of whom writes with truth and freedom. Among the moderns we may distinguish the continuator of Fleury (tom. xxii p. 338, &c. 401, 420, &c.) and Spondanus (AD, 1440-50) The sense of the latter is drowned in prejudice and passion, as soon as Rome and religion are concerned.

CHAP. LXVII.

Corfu and Lesbos, the subjects of the Latins complained that the pretended union would be an instrument of oppression. No sooner did they land on the Byzantine shore, than they were saluted, or rather assailed, with a general murmur of zeal and discontent. During their absence, above two years, the capital had been deprived of its civil and ecclesiastical rulers: fanaticism fermented in anarchy; the most furious monks reigned over the conscience of women and bigots; and the hatred of the Latin name was the first principle of nature and religion. fore his departure for Italy, the emperor had flattered the city with the assurance of a prompt relief and a powerful succour; and the clergy, confident in their orthodoxy and science, had promised themselves and their flocks an easy victory over the blind shepherds of the West. The double disappointment exasperated the Greeks; the conscience of the subscribing prelates was awakened; the hour of temptation was past; and they had more to dread from the public resentment, than they could hope from the favour of the emperor or the pope. Instead of justifying their conduct, they deplored their weakness, professed their contrition, and cast themselves on the mercy of God and of their brethren. the reproachful question, what had been the event or the use of their Italian synod? they answered with sighs and tears, "Alas! we have made a " new faith; we have exchanged piety for im-" piety; we have betrayed the immaculate sacri-"fice; and we are become Azymites."

Azymites were those who celebrated the communion with unleavened bread; and I must retract or qualify the praise which I have bestowed on the growing philosophy of the times.) "Alas! we have been seduced by distress, by " fraud, and by the hopes and fears of a transi-"tory life. The hand that has signed the union "should be cut off; and the tongue that has "pronounced the Latin creed deserves to be "torn from the root." The best proof of their repentance was an increase of zeal for the most trivial rites and the most incomprehensible docand an absolute separation from all, without excepting their prince, who preserved some regard for honour and consistency. After the decease of the patriarch Joseph, the archbishops of Heraclea and Trebizond had courage to refuse the vacant office; and cardinal Bessarion preferred the warm and comfortable shelter of the Vatican. The choice of the emperor and his clergy was confined to Metrophanes of Cyzicus: he was consecrated in St. Sophia, but the temple was vacant. The cross-bearers abdicated their service; the infection spread from the city to the villages; and Metrophanes discharged, without effect, some ecclesiastical thunders against a nation of schismatics. The eyes of the Greeks were directed to Mark of Ephesus, the champion of his country; and the sufferings of the holy confessor were repaid with a tribute of admiration and applause. His example and writings propagated the flame of religious discord; age and infirmity soon removed him from CHAP LXVII. CHAP. LXVII. the world; but the gospel of Mark was not a law of forgiveness; and he requested with his dying breath, that none of the adherents of Rome might attend his obsequies or pray for his soul.

Zeal of the Orientals and Rus-

The schism was not confined to the narrow limits of the Byzantine empire. Secure under the Mamaluke sceptre, the three patriarchs of Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem, assembled a numerous synod; disowned their representatives at Ferrara and Florence: condemned the creed and council of the Latins; and threatened the emperor of Constantinople with the censures of the Eastern church. Of the sectaries of the Greek communion, the Russians were the most powerful, ignorant, and superstitious. Their primate, the cardinal Isidore, hastened from Florence to Moscow7, to reduce the independent nation under the Roman yoke. But the Russian bishops had been educated at Mount Athos; and the prince and people embraced the theology of their They were scandalized by the title, the pomp, the Latin cross of the legate, the friend of those impious men who shaved their beards, and performed the divine office with gloves on their hands and rings on their fingers: Isidore was condemned by a synod; his person was imprisoned in a monastery; and it was with extreme difficulty,

⁷ Isidore was-metropolitan of Kiow, but the Greeks subject to Poland have removed that see from the ruins of Kiow to Lemberg, or Leopold (Herbestein, in Ramusio, tom, ii. p. 127.). On the other hand, the Russians transferred their spiritual obedience to the archbishop, who became, in 1588, the patnarch, of Moscow (Levesque, Hist. de Russie, tom. iii. p. 188. 190. from a Greek MS. at Turin, Iter et labores Archiepiscopi Arsenii that the cardinal could escape from the hands of CHAP. a fierce and fanatic people 8. The Russians re- LXVII fused a passage to the missionaries of Rome who aspired to convert the pagans beyond the Tanais": and their refusal was justified by the maxim, that the guilt of idolatry is less damnable than that of The errors of the Bohemians were excused by their abhorrence for the pope; and a deputation of the Greek clergy solicited the friendship of those sanguinary enthusiasts1". While Eugenius triumphed in the union and orthodoxy of the Greeks, his party was contracted to the walls. or rather to the palace, of Constantinople. zeal of Palæologus had been excited by interest; it was soon cooled by opposition: an attempt to violate the national belief might endanger his life and crown; nor could the pious rebels be destitute of foreign and domestic aid. The sword of 8 The curious narrative of Levesque (Hist de Russie, tom inp 242-247.) is extracted from the partiarchal archives. The scenes of Ferrara and Florence are described by acnorance and passion, but the Russians are credible in the account of their own prémdices

9 The Shamanism, the ancient religion of the Samanzans and Gynmosophists, has been driven by the more popular Bramms from India into the northern deserts; the naked philosophers were compelled to wrap themselves in fur; but they insensibly sunk into wizards and physicians. The Mordvans and Tcheremisses in the European Russia adhere to this religion, which is formed on the earthly model of one king or God, his ministers or angels, and the rebellious spirits who oppose his government. As these tribes of the Volga have no mages, they might more justly retort on the Latin missionaries the name of idolaters (Levesque, Hist des Peuples soums à la Domination des Russes, tom 1 p 494-237, 423-400).

¹⁰ Spondanus, Annal Eccles tom n. A D. 1451, No. 13 The Epi-tle of the Greeks, with a Latin version, is extant in the college library at Prague

CHAP. XLVII. his brother Demetrius, who in Italy had maintained a prudent and popular silence, was half unsheathed in the cause of religion; and Amurath, the Turkish sultan, was displeased and alarmed by the seeming friendship of the Greeks and Latins.

Reign and character of Amurath II.
A.D. 1421
—1451,
Feb 9.

"Sultan Murad, or Amurath, lived forty-nine, " and reigned thirty years, six months, and eight "days. He was a just and valiant prince, of a "great soul, patient of labours, learned, merci-"ful, religious, charitable; a lover and encou-" rager of the studious, and of all who excelled "in any art or science; a good emperor, and "a great general. No man obtained more " or greater victories than Amurath: Belgrade " alone withstood his attacks. Under his reign. "the soldier was ever victorious, the citizen " rich and secure. If he subdued any country, " his first care was to build moschs and caravan-"scras, hospitals, and colleges. Every year he " gave a thousand pieces of gold to the sons " of the prophet; and sent two thousand five "hundred to the religious persons of Mecca, "Medina, and Jerusalem"." This portrait is transcribed from the historian of the Othman empire: but the applause of a servile and superstitious people has been lavished on the worst of tyrants; and the virtues of a sultan are often the vices most useful to himself, or most agreeable to his subjects. A nation ignorant of the equal benefits of liberty and law, must be awed by the flashes of arbitrary power: the cruelty of a despot will assume the character of justice; his profusion, of liberality; his obstinacy, of firmness. most reasonable excuse be rejected, few acts of obedience will be found impossible: and guilt must tremble, where innocence cannot always be secure. The tranquillity of the people, and the discipline of the troops, were best maintained by perpetual action in the field: war was the trade of the Janizaries; and those who survived the peril, and divided the spoil, applauded the generous ambition of their sovereign. To propagate the true religion, was the duty of a faithful Musulman: the unbelievers were his enemies, and those of the prophet; and, in the hands of the Turks, the seymetar was the only instrument of conversion. Under these circumstances, however, the justice and moderation of Amurath are attested by his conduct, and acknowledged by the Christians themselves; who consider a prosperous reign and a peaceful death as the reward of his singular merits. In the vigour of his age and military power, he seldom engaged in war till he was justified by a previous and adequate provocation: the victorious sultan was disarmed by submission; and in the observance of treaties, his word was inviolate and sacred12. The Hungarians were commonly the aggressors; he was ¹² See Chalcondyles 1 vn. pf. 186–198 i, Ducas (c. 33.), and Marinus Barletius in Vit. Scanderbeg, p. 145, 146.). In his good faith towards the garrison of Stengrade, he was a lesson and example to his son Mahomer.

¹¹ See Cantemir, History of the Othman Empire, p. §4. Murad, or Morad, may be more correct; but I have preferred the popular name, to that obscure diligence which is rarely successful in translating an Oriental, into the Roman, alphabet.

CHAP LXVII

CHAP. LXVII. provoked by the revolt of Scanderbeg; and the perfidious Caramanian was twice vanquished, and twice pardoned, by the Ottoman monarch. Before he invaded the Morea, Thebes had been surprised by the despot: in the conquest of Thessalonica, the grandson of Bajazet might dispute the recent purchase of the Venetians; and after the first siege of Constantinople, the sultan was never tempted, by the distress, the absence, or the injuries of Palæologus, to extinguish the dying light of the Byzantine empire.

H1-double abdication, A.D 1442

But the most striking feature in the life and character of Amurath, is the double abdication of the Turkish throne; and, were not his motives debased by an alloy of superstition, we must praise the royal philosopher ', who at the age of forty could discern the vanity of human greatness. Resigning the sceptre to his son, he retired to the pleasant residence of Magnesia; but he retired to the society of saints and hermits. It was not till the fourth century of the Hegira, that the religion of Mahomet had been corrupted by an institution so adverse to his genius; but in the age of the crusades, the various orders of Dervishes were multiplied by the example of the Christian, and even the Latin, monks 1. The lord of nations submitted to fast, and pray, and turn round in endless rotation with the fanatics, who mistook the giddiness of the head for the illumination of LXVII. the spirit . But he was soon awakened from this dream of enthusiasm, by the Hungarian invasion: and his obedient son was the foremost to urge the public danger and wishes of the people. Under the banner of their veteran leader, the Janizaries fought and conquered; but he withdrew from the field of Varna, again to pray, to fast, and to turn round with his Magnesian brethren. These pious occupations were again interrupted by the danger of the state. A victorious army disdained the inexperience of their youthful ruler: the city of Adrianople was abandoned to rapine and slaughter; and the unanimous divan implored his presence to appease the tumult, and prevent the rebellion, of the Janizaries, At the well-known voice of their master, they trembled and obeyed; and the reluctant sultan was compelled to support his splendid servitude, till, at the end of four years, he was relieved by the angel of death. Age or disease, misfortune or caprice, have tempted several princes to descend from the throne: and they have had leisure to repent of their irretrievable step. But Amurath alone, in the full liberty of choice, after the trial of empire and solitude, has repeated his preference of a private life.

¹³ Voltaire Essai sur l'Histoire Generale, c. 89, p. 283, 284) admires le Philosophe Ture; would be have bestowed the same praise on a Christian prince for retiring to a monastery? In his way. Voltaire was a bigot, an intolerant logot.

¹⁴ See the articles Derrische, Falar, Nasser, Rohlamat, in D'Herbelor's Bibliothéque Quentale. Yet the subject is superficially treated from the Persian and Arabian writer. It is among the Turks these orders have principally flourished.

¹⁰ Rycaut (in the present State of the Ottoman Empire, p.243-208) affords much information, which he drew from his personal conversation with the heads of the dervishes, most of whom ascribed their origin to the time of Orchan He does not mention the Zyhida of Chalcondyles (1 vir p. 286), among whom Amurath retired the Seids of that author are the descendants of Mahomet.

EHAP. LXVII. Eugenius forms a league Turks,

After the departure of his Greek brethren. Eugenius had not been unmindful of their temporal interest; and his tender regard for the Byzantine empire was animated by a just appreagainst the hension of the Turks, who approached, and might A.D 1443, soon invade, the borders of Italy. But the spirit of the crusades had expired; and the coldness of the Franks was not less unreasonable than their beadlong passion. In the eleventh century, a fanatic monk could precipitate Europe on Asia for the recovery of the holy sepulchre; but in the fifteenth, the most pressing motives of religion and policy were insufficient to unite the Latins in the defence of Christendom. Germany was an inexhaustible store-house of men and arms 16: but that complex and languid body required the impulse of a vigorous hand; and Frederic the Third was alike impotent in his personal character and his Imperial dignity. A long war had impaired the strength, without satiating the animosity, of France and England ": but Philip, duke of Burgundy, was a vain and magnificent prince; > to In the year 1431, Germany raised 40,000 horse, men at arms, against the Hussites of Bohemia (Lenfaut, Hist, du Concile de Basle, tom i p 318). At the siege of Nuvs, on the Rhule, in 1474, the princes, prelates, and cities, sent their respective quotas and the bishop of Munster (qui n'est pas des plus grands) furmshed 1400 horse, 6000 foot, all in green, with 1200 waggons The united armies of the king of England and the duke of Burgundy scarcely equalled one-third of this German host (Memoires de Philippe de Comines, Liv. e 2 j. At présent, six or seven hundred thousand men are maintained in constant pay and admurable discipline, by the powers of Germany and he enjoyed, without danger or expense, the CHAP adventurous piety of his subjects, who sailed, in a LXVII. gallant fleet, from the coast of Flanders to the Hellespont. The maritime republics of Venice and Genoa were less remote from the scene of action: and their hostile fleets were associated under the standard of St. Peter. The kingdoms of Hungary and Poland, which covered as it were the interior pale of the Latin church, were the most nearly concerned to oppose the progress of the Turks. Arms were the patrimony of the Sevthians and Sarmatians, and these nations might appear equal to the contest, could they point, against the common foc, those swords that were so wantonly drawn in bloody and domestic quarrels. But the same spirit was adverse to concord and obedience: a poor country and a limited monarch are incapable of maintaining a standing force; and the loose bodies of Polish and Hungarian horse were not armed with the sentiments and weapons which, on some occasions, have given irresistible weight to the French chivalry. Yet, on this side, the designs of the Roman pontiff, and the eloquence of cardinal Julian, his legate, were promoted by the circumstances of the times "; by the union of the two crowns on the head of Ladislaus".

> 17 It was not till the year 1444, that France and England could agree on a truce of some months (See Rymer's Forders, and the chronicles of both nations)

¹³ In the Hungarian criside, Spondains (Annal Eccles A D 1443, 1444) has been my leading guide. He has diligently read, and critically compared, the Greek and Turkish materials, the listorians of Hungary, Poland, and the West. His narrative is perspicuous, and where he can be free from a religious bias, the judgment of Spondanus is not contemptible.

¹⁹⁴¹ have curtailed the harsh letter (Wladislaus) which most writers affect to his name, either in compliance with the Polish a young and ambitious soldier; by the valour of an hero, whose name, the name of John Huniades, was already popular among the Christians, and formidable to the Turks. An endless treasure of pardons and indulgences was scattered by the legate; many private warriors of France and Germany enlisted under the holy banner; and the crusade derived some strength, or at least some reputation, from the new allies both of Europe and Asia. A fugitive despot of Servia exaggerated the distress and ardour of the Christians beyond the Danube, who would unanimously rise to vindicate their religion and liberty. The Greek emperor ", with a spirit unknown to his father, engaged to guard the Bosphorus, and to sally from Constantinople at the head of his national and mercenary troops. The sultan of Caramania et announced the retreat of Amurath, and a powerful division in the heart of Anatolia; and if the fleets of the West could occupy at the same moment the streights of the Hellespont, the Ottoman monarchy would be dissevered and destroyed. Heaven and earth must rejoice in the perdition of the miscreants; and the pronunciation, or to distinguish him from his rival the infant Ladislans of Austria. Their competition for the crown of Hungary is described by Callimachus (l. i, n. p. 447—486.), Bonfinius (Decad. iii. l. iv.), Spondanus, and Lenfant.

(a) The Greek historians, Phranza, Chalcondyles, and Ducas, do not ascribe to their prince a very active part in this crusade, which he seems to have promoted by his wishes, and injured by his tears.

²¹ Canteunt (p. 88.) ascribes to his policy the original plan, and transcribes his animating epistle to the king of Hungary. But the Mahometan powers are seldom informed of the state of Christendom, and the situation and correspondence of the knights of Rhodes must connect them with the sultan of Caramania.

legate, with prudent ambiguity, instilled the CHAP. opinion of the invisible, perhaps the visible, aid of LXVII. the Son of God, and his divine mother.

Of the Polish and Hungarian diets, a religious Ladislaus, king of war was the unanimous cry; and Ladislaus, after Poland and passing the Danube, led an army of his confede-marches rate subjects as far as Sophia, the capital of the agunst Bulgarian kingdom. In this expedition they obtained two signal victories, which were justly ascribed to the valour and conduct of Hunjades. In the first, with a vanguard of ten thousand men, he surprised the Turkish camp; in the second, he vanguished and made prisoner the most renowned of their generals, who possessed the double advantage of ground and numbers. The approach of winter, and the natural and artificial obstacles of Mount Hæmus, arrested the progress of the hero, who measured a narrow interval of six days march from the foot of the mountains to the hostile towers of Adrianople, and the friendly capital of the Greek empire. The retreat was undisturbed; and the entrance into Buda was at once a military and religious triumph. An ecclesiastical procession was followed by the king and his warriors on foot: he nicely balanced the merits and rewards of the two nations; and the pride of conquest was blended with the humble temper of Christianity. Thirteen bashaws, nine standards, and four thousand captives, were unquestionable trophies; and as all were willing to believe, and none were present to contradict, the crusaders multiplied, with unblushing confidence, the myriads of Turks whom they had left on the field of battle 22. The most solid proof, and the most salutary consequence, of victory, was a deputation from the divan to solicit peace, to restore Servia, to ransom the prisoners, and to evacuate the Hungarian frontier. By this treaty, the rational objects of the war were obtained: the king, the despot, and Huniades himself, in the diet of Segedin, were satisfied with public and private emolument; a truce of ten years was concluded; and the followers of Jesus and Mahomet, who swore on the Gospel and the Koran, attested the word of God as the guardian of truth and the avenger of perfidy. In the place of the Gospel, · the Turkish ministers had proposed to substitute the Eucharist, the real presence of the Catholic deity; but the Christians refused to profane their holy mysteries; and a superstitious conscience is less forcibly bound by the spiritual energy, than by the outward and visible symbols, of an oath-'.

CHAP. LXVII. The Turkish peace.

Violation of the prace, A.D 1444. During the whole transaction, the cardinal legate had observed a sullen silence, unwilling to approve, and unable to oppose, the consent of the king and people. But the diet was not dissolved before Julian was fortified by the welcome intelligence, that Anatolia was invaded by the Caramanian, and Thrace by the Greek emperor; that

²² In their letters to the emperor Frederic III. the Hungarians slay 30,000 Turks in one battle, but the modest Julian reduces the slaughter to 6000 or even 2000 infidels (Æneas Sylvius in Europ c. 5 and epist. 44 81. apud Spondanum)

²⁴ See the origin of the Turkish war, and the first expedition of Ladislaus, in the vth and vith books of the ind Decad of Bonfinius, who, in his division and style, copies Livy with tolerable success. Callimachus (l. 11 p. 487—496.) is still more pure and authentic the ficets of Genoa, Venice, and Burgundy, were masters of the Hellespont; and that the allies, informed of the victory, and ignorant of the treaty, of Ladislaus, impatiently waited for the return of his victorious army. " And is it thus," exclaimed the cardinal ", " that you will desert their expec-"tations and your own fortune? It is to them, " to your God, and your fellow-Christians, that " you have pledged your faith; and that prior ob-" ligation annihilates a rash and sacrilegious oath " to the enemies of Christ. His vicar on earth is " the Roman pontiff; without whose sanction you " can neither promise nor perform. In his name " I absolve your perjury and sanctify your arms: " follow my footsteps in the paths of glory and sal-" vation; and if still ye have scruples, devolve on " my head the punishment and the sin." This mischievous casuistry was seconded by his respectable character, and the levity of popular assemblies: war was resolved on the same spot where peace had so lately been sworn; and, in the execution of the treaty, the Turks were assaulted by the Christians; to whom, with some reason, they might apply the epithet of Infidels. The falsehood of Ladislaus to his word and oath, was palliated by the religion of the times: the most perfect, or at least the most popular, excuse would ²⁴ I do not pretend to warrant the literal accuracy of Julian's speech, which is variously worded by Callimachus (I in p. 505—507) Bonfinius (Dec. in I vi. p. 457, 458), and other historians, who might indulge their owneloquence, while they represent one of the orators of the age. But they all agree in the advice and arguments for perjury, which in the field of controversy are fiercely attacked by the Protestants, and feebly defended by the Catholics. The latter are discouraged by the mixtortune of Warna.

CHAP.

have been the success of his arms and the deliverance of the Eastern church. But the same treaty which should have bound his conscience, had diminished his strength. On the proclamation of the peace, the French and German volunteers departed with indiguant murmurs: the Poles were exhausted by distant warfare, and perhans disgusted with foreign command; and their palatines accepted the first licence, and hastily retired to their provinces and castles. Hungary was divided by faction, or restrained by a laudable scruple; and the relies of the crusade that marched in the second expedition, were reduced to an inadequate force of twenty thousand A Walachian chief, who joined the royal standard with his vassals, presumed to remark that their numbers did not exceed the hunting retinue that sometimes attended the sultan; and the gift of two horses of matchless speed, might admonish Ladislaus of his secret foresight of the event. But the despot of Servia, after the restoration of his country and children, was tempted by the promise of new realms; and the inexperience of the king, the enthusiasm of the legate, and the martial presumption of Huniades himself, were persuaded that every obstacle must yield to the invincible virtue of the sword and the cross. After the passage of the Danube, two roads might lead to Constantinople and the Hellespont; the one direct, abrupt, and difficult, through the mountains of Hæmus; the other more tedious and secure, over a level country, and along the shores of the Euxine; in which their flanks, according to the Seythian discipline, might always be co- CHAP vered by a moveable fortification of waggons. The ANVII. latter was judiciously preferred: the Catholics marched through the plains of Bulgaria, burning, with wanton cruelty, the churches and villages of the Christian natives: and their last station was at Warna, near the sea-shore; on which the defeat and death of Ladislaus have bestowed a memorable name .5.

It was on this fatal spot, that, instead of finding Battle of a confederate fleet to second their operations, they Warna, were alarmed by the approach of Amurath himself, Nov 10 who had issued from his Magnesian solitude, and transported the forces of Asia to the defence of Europe. According to some writers, the Greek emperor had been awed, or seduced, to grant the passage of the Bosphorus, and an indelible stain of corruption is fixed on the Genoese, or the pope's nephew, the Catholic admiral, whose mercenary connivance betrayed the guard of the Hellespont. From Adrianople, the sultan advanced by hasty marches at the head of sixty thousand men; and when the cardinal, and Huniades, had taken a nearer survey of the numbers and order of the Turks, these ardent warriors proposed the tardy and impracticable measure of a retreat.

25 Warna, under the Greeian name of Odessus, was a colony of the Milesians, which they denominated from the hero Ukyles (Cellarius, tom i p 374 D'Anville, tom i p 312 to Arnan's Periphis of the Lacinic p. 24, 25, in the 1-i solume of Hudson's Geographers), it was situate 1740 stadia, or furlongs, from the month of the Danube, 2140 from Byzantium, and 300 to the north of a ridge or promontory of Mount Hamus, which advances into the sea king alone was resolved to conquer or die; and his resolution had almost been crowned with a glorious and salutary victory. The princes were opposite to each other in the centre; and the Beglerbegs, or generals of Anatolia and Romania, commanded on the right and left, against the adverse divisions of the despot and Huniades. The Turkish wings were broken on the first onset: but the advantage was fatal; and the rash victors, in the heat of the pursuit, were carried away far from the annovance of the enemy, or the support of their friends. When Amurath beheld the flight of his squadrons, he despaired of his fortune and that of the empire: a veteran Janizary seized his horse's bridle; and he had magnanimity to pardon and reward the soldier who dared to perceive the terror, and arrest the flight, of his sovereign. A copy of the treaty, the monument of Christian perfidy, had been displayed in the front of battle; and it is said, that the sultan in his distress, lifting his eves and his hands to heaven, implored the protection of the God of truth; and called on the prophet Jesus himself to avenge the impious mockery of his name and religion". With inferior numbers and disordered ranks, the king of Hungary rushed forwards in the confidence of victory, till his career was stopped by the impenetrable phalanx of the Janizaries. If we may credit the Ottoman annals, his horse was pierced by the javelin of CHAP Amurath "; he fell among the spears of the infantry; and a Turkish soldier proclaimed with Death of a loud voice, "Hungarians, behold the head of " your king " The death of Ladislaus was the signal of their defeat. On his return from an intemperate pursuit, Huniades deplored his error and the public loss: he strove to rescue the royal body, till he was overwhelmed by the tunultuous erowd of the victors and vanquished; and the last efforts of his courage and conduct were exerted to save the remnant of his Walachian cavalry. Ten thousand Christians were slain in the disastrous battle of Warna: the loss of the Turks, more considerable in numbers, bore a smaller proportion to their total strength; yet the philosophic sultan was not ashamed to confess, that his ruin must be the consequence of a second and similar victory. At his command a column was creeted on the spot where Ladislaus had fallen; but the modest inscription, instead of accusing the rashness, recorded the valour, and bewailed the misfortune, of the Hungarian youth .

CHAP. LXVII

²⁶ Some Christian writers affirm, that he diew from h - bosom the host or water on which the treaty had not been sworn. The Moslems suppose, with more simplicity, an appeal to God and his prophet Jesus, which is likewise insinuated by Callimachus (l in p. 516. Spondan, A. D. 1444, No. 8.).

LXVII

37. A critic will always distrust these spalsa opina, of a victorious general, so difficult for valour to obtain, so easy for flattery to invent (Cantenur, p. 60 g) Callinachus d, 60 p. 517 (more simply and probably affirms, supervenientibus Janizaris, telorum multitudine, non tam confossus est, quam obrutus 46 Besides some valuable hints from Æneas Sylvius, which are diligently collected by Spondanus, our best authorities are three Instorians of the xyth century, Philippus Calliniachus, de Rebus a Vladislao Polonorum atque Hungarorum Rege gestis, fibri in in Bel Script Rerum Hangaricarum, tom 1 p 433-518), Bonhnius (decad in 1 x p. 460-467), and Chalcondyles I vii p. 168 -179°) The two first were Italians, but they passed their lives in Poland and Hungary (Fabric, Bibliot Latin med et infimæ Ætatis, tom i p 324 Vossius, de Hist. Latin. 1 in e 8 11. CHAP. LXVII. The cardinai. Julian.

Before I lose sight of the field of Warna, I am tempted to pause on the character and story of two principal actors, the cardinal Julian and John Huniades. Julian 49 Cæsarini was born of a noble family of Rome: his studies had embraced both the Latin and Greek learning, both the sciences of divinity and law; and his versatile genius was equally adapted to the schools, the camp, and the court. No sooner had he been invested with the Roman purple, than he was sent into Germany to arm the empire against the rebels and heretics of Bohemia. The spirit of persecution is unworthy of a Christian; the military profession ill becomes a priest; but the former is excused by the times; and the latter was ennobled by the courage of Julian, who stood dauntless and alone in the disgraceful flight of the German host. As the pope's legate, he opened the council of Basil; but the president soon appeared the most strenuous champion of ecclesiastical freedom: and an opposition of seven years was conducted by his ability and zeal. After promoting the strongest measures against the authority and person of Eugenius, some secret motive of interest or conscience engaged him to desert on a sudden the popular party. The cardinal withdrew himself from Basil to Ferrara; and, in the debates of Bayle, Dictionnaire, Boxfixius . A small tract of Falix Petancius, Chancellor of Seguia (ad calcem Cuspinian de Casaribus, p. 716—722), represents the theatre of the war in the xyth century the Greeks and Latins, the two nations admired the dexterity of his arguments and the depth of . his theological erudition ". In his Hungarian embassy, we have already seen the mischievous effects of his sophistry and eloquence, of which Julian himself was the first victim. The cardinal who performed the duties of a priest and a soldier, was lost in the defeat of Warna. The circumstances of his death are variously related; but it is believed, that a weighty incumbrance of gold impeded his flight, and tempted the cruel avarice of some Christian fugitives.

²⁹ M. Lenfant has described the origin (Hist. du Concele de Bacle, tom 1-p. 247, Ac.), and Bohemian campaign op. 315, 80. of cardinal Julian. His services at Basil and Ferrara, and his unfortunate end, are occasionally related by Spondanus, and the continuator of Flerice.

From an humble, or at least a doubtful, origin, John Corthe merit of John Huniades promoted him to the maice. command of the Hungarian armies. His father was a Walachian, his mother a Greek: her unknown race might possibly ascend to the emperors of Constantinople; and the claims of the Walachians, with the surname of Corvinus, from the place of his nativity, might suggest a thin pretence for mingling his blood with the patricians of ancient Rome 4. In his youth he served in the wars of Italy, and was retained, with twelve horsemen, by the bishop of Zagrab: the valour of the white knight " was soon conspicuous; he in-Syropulus honourably praises the talents of an enemy (p.117) τοιουτα τινο είπεν ό Ιοιλίονος φετλατοσμένος αζοί και λοιίκος, και μια etistung un desirtitos l'atogians.

⁴ See Bonfanus, decad in J iv p 423. Could the Italian histonan pronounce, or the king of Hungary hear, without a blush, the absurd flattery which confounded the name of a Walachian vil-Jage with the casual, though glorious, epithet of a single branch of the Valerian family at Rome?

Philip de Comines (Memoires, 1 vi) 13%, from the traductor of the times, mentions him with high encommuna, but under the creased his fortunes by a noble and wealthy marriage; and in the defence of the Hungarian borders, he won in the same year three battles against the Turks. By his influence, Ladislaus of Poland obtained the crown of Hungary; and the important service was rewarded by the title and office of Waivod of Transylvania. The first of Julian's crusades added two Turkish laurels on his brow; and in the public distress the fatal errors of Warna were forgotten. During the absence and minority of Ladislaus of Austria, the titular king. Huniades was elected supreme captain and governor of Hungary; and if envy at first was silenced by terror, a reign of twelve years supposes the arts of policy as well as of war. Yet the idea of a consummate general is not delineated in his campaigns; the white knight fought with the hand rather than the head, as the chief of desultory Barbarians, who attack without fear and fly without shame; and his military life is composed of a romantic alternative of victories and escapes. By the Turks, who employed his name to frighten their perverse children, he was corruptly denominated Jancus Lain, or the Wicked: their hatred is the proof of their esteem; the kingdom which he guarded was inaccessible to their arms; and they felt him most daring and formidable, when they fondly believed the captain and his country irrecoverably lost. Instead of confining himself whimsteal name of the Chevalier Blane de Valaigne (Valachia) The Greek Chalcondyles, and the Turkish annals of Leunelavius, presume to accuse his fidelity or valour to a defensive war, four years after the defeat of CHAP Warna he again penctrated into the heart of Bulgaria, and in the plain of Cossova sustained, till the third day, the shock of the Ottoman army. four times more numerous than his own. As he fled alone through the woods of Walachia, the hero was surprised by two robbers; but while they disputed a gold chain that hung at his neck. he recovered his sword, slew the one, terrified the other, and, after new perils of captivity or death. consoled by his presence an afflicted kingdom. But the last and most glorious action of his life was the defence of Belgrade against the powers of Mahomet the second in person. After a His desiege of forty days, the Turks, who had already Belgrade, entered the town, were compelled to retreat; and and death, the joyful nations celebrated Huniades and Bel- July 22 -grade as the bulwarks of Christendom ". a month after this great deliverance, the champion expired; and his most splendid epitaph is the regret of the Ottoman prince, who sighed that he could no longer hope for revenge against the single antagonist who had triumphed over his arms. On the first vacancy of the throne Matthias Corvinus, a youth of eighteen years of age, was elected and crowned by the grateful His reign was prosperous and Hungarians. long: Matthias aspired to the glory of a con-13 See Bonfinius, (decad ni. 1 vm. p. 402.) and Spondanus A. D 14:0, No. 1-7.) Huniades shared the glory of the defence of Belgrade with Capi-tran, a Franciscan finir, and in their respective narratives, neither the saint nor the hero condescend to take notice of his rival's merit.

CHAP. LXVII

CHAP. LXVII.

queror and a saint; but his purest merit is the encouragement of learning; and the Latin orators and historians, who were invited from Italy by the son, have shed the lustre of their eloquence on the father's character 14.

Birth and education ofScanderbeg,prince of Albania, -1413. &c.

In the lists of heroes, John Huniades and Scanderbeg are commonly associated ": and they are both entitled to our notice, since their occupa-A.D. 1404 tion of the Ottoman arms delayed the ruin of the Greek empire. John Castriot, the father of Scanderbeg 36, was the hereditary prince of a small district of Epirus or Albania, between the mountains and the Adriatic sea. Unable to contend with the sultan's power. Castriot submitted to the hard conditions of peace and tribute: he deli-

> 34 See Bonfinius, decad in, I vin,-decad iv. I. vin The observations of Spondanus on the life and character of Matthias Corvinus are curious and critical (A D 1464, No. 1, 1475, No. 6) 1476, No 14-16 1490, No 4, 5 : Italian fame was the object of his vanity. His actions are celebrated in the Epitome Rerom Hungaricarum (p. 322-412) of Peter Ranzanus, a Sicilian - His wise and facetious sayings are registered by Galestus Martius of Narmi (528-568.) and we have a particular narrative of his wedding and coronation. These three tracts are all contained in the 1st vol. of Bel's Scriptores Rerum Hungaricarum

> 55 They are ranked by Sir William Temple, in his pleasing Essay on Heroic Virtue (Works, vol. in. p. 385.), among the seven chiefs who have de erved, without wearing, a royal crown, Belisarius, Narses, Gonsalvo of Cordova, William first prince of Orange, Alexander duke of Parma, John Hunisdes, and George Castriot, or Scanderbeg.

> 36 I could wish for some simple authentic memoirs of a friend of Scanderbeg, which would introduce me to the man, the time, and the place. In the old and national history of Marinus Barletius, a priest of Scodra (de Vita, Moribus, et Rebus gestis Georgii Castrioti, &c libri xiii. pp. 367. Argentorat. 1537, in fol.), his gaudy and cumbersome robes are stuck with many false jewels. See likewise Chalcondyles, I. vii. p. 185. I. viii. p. 229 vered his four sons as the pledges of his fidelity: and the Christian youths, after receiving the mark of circumcision, were instructed in the Mahometan religion, and trained in the arms and arts of Turkish policy ". The three elder brothers were confounded in the crowd of slaves; and the poison to which their deaths are ascribed, cannot be verified or disproved by any positive evidence. Yet the suspicion is in a great measure removed by the kind and paternal treatment of George Castriot, the fourth brother, who, from his tender youth, displayed the strength and spirit of a sol-The successive overthrow of a Tartar and two Persians, who carried a proud defiance to the Turkish court, recommended him to the favour of Amurath, and his Turkish appellation of Scanderbeg (Iskender beg), or the lord Alexander, is an indelible memorial of his glory and servitude. His father's principality was reduced into a province: but the loss was compensated by the rank and title of Sanjiak, a command of five thousand horse, and the prospect of the first dignities of the empire. He served with honour in the wars of Europe and Asia; and we may smile at the art or credulity of the historian, who supposes, that in every encounter he spared the Christians, while he fell with a thundering arm on his Musulman foes. The glory of Huniades is without reproach; he fought in the defence of his religion and country; but the enemies who applaud the patriot, , have branded his rival with the name of traitor

 $^{^{77}}$ His circumcision, education, &c. are marked by Marinus with brevity and reluctance (1 \pm 6, 7)

CHAP. LXVII. and apostate. In the eves of the Christians, the rebellion of Scanderbeg is justified by his father's wrongs, the ambiguous death of his three brothers, his own degradation, and the slavery of his country; and they adore the generous, though tardy, zeal, with which he asserted the faith and independence of his ancestors. But he had imbibed from his ninth year the doctrines of the Koran; he was ignorant of the Gospel; the religion of a soldier is determined by authority and habit; nor is it easy to conceive what new illumination at the age of forty so could be poured into his soul. His motives would be less exposed to the suspicion of interest or revenge, had he broken his chain from the moment that he was sensible of its weight; but a long oblivion had surely impaired his original right; and every year of obedience and reward had comented the mutual bond of the sultan and his subject. Scanderbeg had long harboured the belief of Christianity and the intention of revolt, a worthy mind must condemn the base dissimulation, that could serve only to betray, that could promise only to be forsworn, that could actively join in the temporal and spiritual perdition of so many thousands of his unhappy brethren. Shall we praise a secret correspondence with Huniades, while he commanded the vanguard of the Turkish army? shall we excuse the desertion of his standard, a treacherous desertion which abandoned the victory to the enemies of his benefactor? In the con- His revolt fusion of a defeat, the eye of Scanderbeg was trom the Turks. fixed on the Reis Effendi or principal secretary: AD 1442, with the dagger at his breast, he extorted a firman or patent for the government of Albania; and the murder of the guiltless scribe and his train prevented the consequences of an immediate dis-With some bold companions, to whom coverv. he had revealed his design, he escaped in the night, by rapid marches, from the field of battle to his paternal mountains. The gates of Crova were opened to the royal mandate; and no sooner did he command the fortress, than George Castriot dropt the mask of dissimulation; abjured the prophet and the sultan, and proclaimed himself the avenger of his family and country. The names of religion and liberty provoked a general revolt: the Albanians, a martial race, were unanimous to live and die with their hereditary prince; and the Ottoman garrisons were indulged in the choice of martyrdom or baptism. In the assembly of the states of Epirus, Scanderbeg was elected general of the Turkish war; and each of the allies engaged to furnish his respective proportion of men and money. From these contributions, from his patrimonial estate, and from the valuable saltpits of Selina, he drew an annual revenue of two hundred thousand ducats "; and the entire sum, exempt from the demands of luxury, was strictly appropriated to the public use. His manners were popular; but his discipline was severe; and every superfluous vice was banished from his camp: his example strengthened his command; and under his conduct, the Albanians were invincible in their own opinion and that of their ene-Havalous mics. The brayest adventurers of France and Germany were allured by his fame and retained in his service: his standing militia consisted of eight thousand horse and seven thousand foot; the horses were small, the men were active: but he viewed with a discerning eye the difficulties and resources of the mountains; and, at the blaze of the beacons, the whole nation was distributed in the strongest posts. With such unequal arms Scanderbeg resisted twenty-three years the powers of the Ottoman empire; and two conquerors, Amurath the second, and his greater son, were repeatedly baffled by a rebel, whom they pursued with seeming contempt and implacable resentment. At the head of sixty thousand horse and forty thousand Janizaries, Amurath entered Albania: he might ravage the open country, occupy the defenceless towns, convert the churches into moschs, circumcise the Christian youths, and punish with death his adult and obstinate captives; but the conquests of the sultan were confined to the petty fortress of Sfetigrade; and the garrison, invincible to his arms, was oppressed by a paltry artifice and a superstitious scruple 40.

²⁶ Since Scanderbeg died A. D. 1466, in the fxiid year of his age (Marinus, I xiii p. 370.), he was born in 1403; since he was form from his parents by the Turks, when he was novemis (Marinus, I. i. p. 1.6.), that event must have happened in 1412, nine years before the accession of Amurath II. who must have fullerited, not acquired, the Albanian slave. Spondams has remarked this inconsistency, A. D. 1431, № 31, 1443, № 14.

CHAP LXVII

[&]quot; His revenue and forces are luckily given by Marinus (l. ii p.44)

CHAP LXVII.

> *There were two Dibras, the upper and lower, the Bulgari in and Albanian , the former, 70 miles from Crova (1-1, p. 17), was conti-

Amurath retired with shame and loss from the walls of Croya, the eastle and residence of the Castriots; the march, the siege, the retreat, were harassed by a vexatious, and almost invisible, adversary"; and the disappointment might tend to embitter, perhaps to shorten, the last days of the Sultan 4. In the fulness of conquest, Mahomet the second still felt at his bosom this domestic thorn: his lieutenants were permitted to negociate a truce; and the Albanian prince may justly be praised as a firm and able champion of his national independence. The enthusiasm of chivalry and religion has ranked him with the names of Alexander and Pyrrhus; nor would they blush to acknowledge their intrepid countryman; but his narrow dominion, and slender powers, must leave him at an humble distance below the heroes of antiquity, who triumphed over the East and the Roman legions. His splendid atchievements, the bashas whom he encountered, the armies that he discomfited, and the three thousand Turks who were slain by his single hand, must be weighed in the scales of suspicious criticism. Against an illiterate enemy, and in the dark solitude of Epi-guous to the fortress of Sfetgrade, whose inhabitants refused to drink from a well into which a dead dog had traitorously been east $\theta \to p/139$, 140 Σ . We want a good map of Epiius

CHAP

⁴⁾ Compare the Turkish narrative of Cantenur (p. 92.) with the pompous and proba declamation in the 18th, wh, and with books of the Albanian priest, who has been copied by the tribe of strangers and moderns

³⁸ In honour of his hero. Barletius (1 vi p. 188-192) kill the staltan, by disease indeed, under the walls of Croya. But this audacious fiction is disproved by the Greeks and Turks, who agree in the time and manner of Amurath's death at Adrianople.

CHAP LXVII.

rus, his partial biographers may safely indulge the latitude of romance: but their fictions are exposed by the light of Italian history; and they afford a strong presumption against their own truth, by a fabulous tale of his exploits, when he passed the Adriatic with eight hundred horse to the succour of the king of Naples ". disparagement to his fame, they might have owned, that he was finally oppressed by the Ottoman powers: in his extreme danger he applied to pope Pius the second for a refuge in the ecclesiastical state; and his resources were almost exhausted, since Scanderbeg died a fugitive at Lissus, on the Venetian territory 15. His sepulchre was soon violated by the Turkish conquerors: but the Janizaries, who were his bones enchased in a bracelet, declared by this superstitious amulet their involuntary reverence for his valour. instant ruin of his country may redound to the hero's glory; yet, had he balanced the consequences of submission and resistance, a patriot perhaps would have declined the unequal con-

and death, A D 1107, Jan 17

4) See the marvels of his Calabrian expedition in the 1xth and xth books of Matinus Barletius, which may be rectified by the testimony or silence of Muratori (Annah d'Italia, toni xin, p. 291.), and his original authors (Joh.Simonetta de Rebus Francisci Sfortiae, in Muratori, Script, Reruin Ital toni xxi, p. 728, et alios). The Albanian cavality, nuder the name of Stradiots, soon became famous in the wars of Italy (Memoires de Commes, I. viii e. 5).

44 Spondanus, from the best cridence, and the most rational criticism, has reduced the giant Scanderbeg to the human size (A. D. 1461, No 20, 1463, No 9, 1465, No 12, L3, 1467, No 1.). His own letter to the Pope, and the testimony of Phranza (1 in c. 28.), a refingee in the neighbouring isle of Corfu, demonstrate his last distress which is awkwardly concealed by Marinus Barletius (1 x.)

test which must depend on the life and genius of one man. Scanderbeg might indeed be supported by the rational, though fallacious, hope, that the pope, the king of Naples, and the Venetian republic, would join in the defence of a free and Christian people, who guarded the sea-coast of the Adriatic, and the narrow passage from Greece to His infant son was saved from the national shipwreck; the Castriots" were invested with a Neapolitan dukedom, and their blood continues to flow in the noblest families of the realm. A colony of Albanian fugitives obtained a settlement in Calabria, and they preserve at this day the language and manners of their ancestors4.

In the long career of the decline and fall of Contenthe Roman empire, I have reached at length the list of the last reign of the princes of Constantinople, who found so feebly sustained the name and majesty of the 1 merers, A D 1495. On the decease of John Palæologus, Nov 1who survived about four years the Hungarian May 20 crusade", the royal family, by the death of Andronicus and the monastic profession of Isidore, was reduced to three princes, Constantine, Demetrius, and Thomas, the surviving sons of the

A D 14

CHAP LXVH

⁴⁵ See the family of the Castriots, in Ducange (Fam. Dalmaner, &c. xviii. p 348-350).

⁴⁶ This colony of Albanese is mentioned by Mr. Swinburne (Travels into the Two Sicilies, vol. i. p. 350-354)

⁴⁷ The chronology of Phianza is clear and authentic, but ingead of four years and seven months, Spondanus (A. D. 1445, 'No 7) assigns seven or eight years to the reign of the last Constantine, which he deduces from a spurious epistle of Eugenius IV to the King of Æthiopia emperor Manuel. Of these the first and the last were far distant in the Morea; but Demetrius, who possessed the domain of Selybria, was in the suburbs, at the head of a party: his ambition was not chilled by the public distress; and his conspiracy with the Turks and the schismatics had already disturbed the peace of his country. The funeral of the late emperor was accelerated with singular and even suspicious haste: the claim of Demetrius to the vacant throne was justified by a trite and flimsy sophism, that he was born in the purple, the eldest son of his father's reign. the empress-mother, the senate and soldiers, the clergy and people, were unanimous in the cause of the lawful successor; and the despot Thomas, who, ignorant of the change, accidentally returned to the capital, asserted with becoming zeal the interest of his absent brother. An ambassador, the historian Phranza, was immediately dispatched to the court of Adrianople. Amurath received him with honour and dismissed him with gifts; but the gracious approbation of the Turkish sultan announced his supremacy, and the approaching downfal of the Eastern empire. By the hands of two illustrious deputies, the Imperial crown was placed at Sparta on the head of Constantine. In the spring he sailed from the Morea, escaped the encounter of a Turkish squadron, enjoyed the acclamations of his subjects, celebrated the festival of a new reign, and exhausted by his donatives the treasure, or 'rather the indigence, of the state. The emperor immediately resigned to his brothers the possession of the Morea; and the brittle friendship of the two princes, Demetrius and Thomas, was confirmed in their mother's presence by the frail security of oaths and embraces. His next occupation was the choice of a consort. A daughter of the doge of Venice had been proposed; but the Byzantine nobles objected the distance between an hereditary monarch and an elective magistrate: and in their subsequent distress, the chief of that powerful republic was not unmindful of the affront Constantine afterwards hesitated between the royal families of Trebizond and Georgia; and the embassy of Phranza represents in his public and private life the last days of the Byzantine empire".

CHAP.

LXVII.

The protocestiare, or great chamberlain, Phran- Embassies za sailed from Constantinople as the minister of phranes, a bridegroom: and the relics of wealth and A.D 1450 luxury were applied to his pompous appearance. His numerous retinue consisted of nobles and ruards, of physicians and monks: he was attended by a band of music; and the term of his costly embassy was protracted above two years. his arrival in Georgia or Iberia, the natives from the towns and villages flocked around the strangers; and such was their simplicity, that they were delighted with the effects, without understanding the cause, of musical harmony. Among the crowd, was an old man, above an hundred. years of age, who had formerly been carried .

⁴⁰ Phranza (l. m. c. 1-6.) deserves credit and esteem away a captive by the Barbarians 40, and who amused his hearers with a tale of the wonders of India 50, from whence he had returned to Portugal by an unknown sea 51. From this hospitable land, Phranza proceeded to the court of Trebizond, where he was informed by the Greek prince of the recent decease of Amurath. Instead of rejoicing in the deliverance, the experienced statesman expressed his apprehension, that an ambitious youth would not long adhere to the sage and pacific system of his father. After the sultan's decease, his Christian wife, Maria 52, the daughter of the Servian despot, had been honourably restored to her parents: on the fame of her beauty and merit, she was recommended by the ambassador as the most worthy object of the royal ⁴⁰ Suppose him to have been captured in 1394, in Timour's first war in Georgia (Sherefeddin, I. iii. c. 50.); he might follow his Tartar master into Hindostan in 1398, and from thence sail to the spice islands.

CHAP. LXVII

50 The happy and pious Indians lived an hundred and fifty years, and enjoyed the most perfect productions of the vegetable and mineral kingdoms. The animals were on a large scale: dragons seventy cubits, ants (the formica Indica) nine inches long, sheep like elephants, elephants like sheep. Quidlibet audendi, &c.

51 He sailed in a country vessel from the spice islands to one of the ports of the exterior India; inventique navem granden lberteam, qua in Portugalliam est delatus. This passage, composed in 1477 (Phianza, l. iii. c. 30.), twenty years before the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope, is spurious or wonderful. But this new geography is sullied by the old and incompatible error which places the source of the Nile in India.

Ogli, and the Helen of the Servians, places her marriage with Amurath in the year 1424. It will not easily be believed, that in six-and-twenty years constitution, the sultan corpus ejus non totigit. After the taking of Constantinople, she fled to Mahomet II. (Phranza, l. iii. c. 22.)

LXVII

choice; and Phranza recapitulates and refutes the specious objections that might be raised against the proposal. The majesty of the purple would ennoble an unequal alliance; the bar of affinity might be removed by liberal alms and the dispensation of the church; the disgrace of Turkish nuptials had been repeatedly overlooked; and, though the fair Maria was near fifty years of age. she might yet hope to give an heir to the empire. Constantine listened to the advice, which was transmitted in the first ship that sailed from Trebizond; but the factions of the court opposed his marriage; and it was finally prevented by the pious vow of the sultana, who ended her days in the monastic profession. Reduced to the first alternative, the choice of Phranza was decided in favour of a Georgian princess; and the vanity of her father was dazzled by the glorious alliance. Instead of demanding, according to the primitive and national custom, a price for his daughter", he offered a portion of fifty-six thousand, with an annual pension of five thousand, ducats; and the services of the ambassador were repaid by an assurance, that, as his son had been adopted in baptism by the emperor, the establishment of his daughter should be the peculiar care of the empress of Constantinople. On the return of Phranza, the treaty was ratified by the Greek monarch, who with his own hand impressed three vermillion crosses on the golden bull, and assured the Georgian envoy, that in the spring his gallies ⁵³ The classical reader will recollect the offers of Agamemnon (Hiad, I. v. 144.), and the general practice of antiquity.

CHAP. LXVII.

But Constantine embraced his faithful servant. not with the cold approbation of a sovereign, but with the warm confidence of a friend, who, after a long absence, is impatient to pour his secrets into the bosom of his friend. the Byzan-tine court. " mother and of Cantacuzene, who alone advised me

State of

"Since the death of my " without interest or passion 54, I am surrounded," said the emperor, "by men whom I can neither "love, nor trust, nor esteem. You are not a stranger " to Lucas Notaras, the great admiral; obstinately " attached to his own sentiments, he declares, both " in private and public, that his sentiments are the " absolute measure of my thoughts and actions. "The rest of the courtiers are swayed by their " personal or factious views: and how can I con-" sult the monks on questions of policy and mar-"riage? I have yet much employment for your "diligence and fidelity. In the spring you shall "engage one of my brothers to solicit the suc-"cour of the Western powers; from the Morea "you shall sail to Cyprus on a particular com-" mission; and from thence proceed to Georgia " to receive and conduct the future empress." "Your commands," replied Phranza, " are ir-"resistible; but deign, great sir," he added, with a serious smile, "to consider, that if I am "thus perpetually absent from my family, my "wife may be tempted either to seek another

^{.54} Cantacuzene (I am ignorant of his relation to the emperor of that name) was great domestic, a firm asserter of the Greek creed, and a brother of the queen of Servia, whom he visited with the character of ambassador (Syropulus, p. 37, 38. 45)

" husband, or to throw herself into a monastery." After laughing at his apprehensions, the emperor more gravely consoled him by the pleasing assurance that this should be his last service abroad. and that he destined for his son a wealthy and noble heiress; for himself, the important office of great logothete, or principal minister of state. The marriage was immediately stipulated; but the office, however incompatible with his own. had been usurped by the ambition of the admiral. Some delay was requisite to negociate 'a consent and an equivalent; and the nomination of Phranza was half declared, and half suppressed, lest it might be displeasing to an insolent and powerful favourite. The winter was spent in the preparations of his embassy; and Phranza had resolved, that the youth his son should embrace this opportunity of foreign travel, and be left, on the appearance of danger, with his maternal kindred of the Morea. Such were the private and public designs, which were interrupted by a Turkish war, and finally buried in the ruins of the empire.

CHAP. LXVIII.

Reign and Character of Mahomet the Second.— Siege, Assault, and final Conquest, of Constantinople by the Turks.—Death of Constantine Palæologus.—Servitude of the Greeks.—Extinction of the Roman Empire in the East.—Consternation of Europe.—Conquests and Death of Mahomet the Second.

CHAP. LXVIII. Character of Mahomet II. THE siege of Constantinople by the Turks attracts our first attention to the person and character of the great destrover. Mahomet the second was the son of the second Amurath: and though his mother has been decorated with the titles of Christian and princess, she is more probably confounded with the numerous concubines who peopled from every climate the haram of the sultan. His first education and sentiments were those of a devout Musulman; and as often as he conversed with an infidel, he purified his hands and face by the legal rites of ablution. Age and empire appear to have relaxed this narrow bigotry: his aspiring genius disdained to acknowledge a power above his own; and in his looser hours he ¹ For the character of Mahomet II. it is dangerous to trust either the Turks or the Christians. The most inoderate picture appears to be drawn by Phasica (1 i. c. 33.), whose resentment had cooled in age and solitude; see likewise Spondanus (A.D. 1451, No. 11.), and the continuator of Fleury (tom. xxii. p. 552.), the Elogia of Paulus Jovius (1. iii. p. 164—166.), and the Dictionnaire de Bayle (tom iii. p. 272—279.).

CHAP LXVIII

presumed (it is said) to brand the prophet of Mecca as a robber and impostor. Yet the sultan persevered in a decent reverence for the doctrine and discipline of the Koran": his private indiscretion must have been sacred from the vulgar ear; and we should suspect the credulity of strangers and sectarics, so prone to believe that a mind which is hardened against truth, must be armed with superior contempt for absurdity and error. Under the tuition of the most skilful masters, Mahomet advanced with an early and rapid progress in the paths of knowledge; and besides his native tongue, it is affirmed that he spoke or understood five languages ', the Arabic, the Persian, the Chaldwan or Hebrew, the Latin, and the Greek. The Persian might indeed contribute to his amusement, and the Arabic to his edification: and such studies are familiar to the Oriental youth. In the intercourse of the Greeks and Turks, a conqueror might wish to converse with the people over whom he was ambitious to reign: his own praises in Latin poetry or

No. 22.).

Cantenur (p. 115.), and the moschs which he founded, attest his public regard for religion. Mahomet freely disputed with the patrarch Gennadius on the two religions (Spond. A. D. 1453, ³ Quinque linguas præter suam noverat; Græcam, Latinam, Chaldarcam, Persicam. The Latin translator of Phranza has dropt the Arabic, which the Koran must recommend to every Musulman.

⁴ Philelphus, by a Latin ode, requested and obtained the liberty of his wife's mother and sisters from the conqueror of Constantinople. It was delivered into the sultan's hands by the envoys of the duke of Milan. Philelphus himself was suspected of a design of retiring to Constantinople; yet the orator often sounded the trumper of holy war (see his Life by M. Lancelot, in the Memotres de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom. x p. 718.784, &c.)

prose 'might find a passage to the royal ear; but what use or merit could recommend to the statesman or the scholar the uncouth dialect of his Hebrew slaves? The history and geography of the world were familiar to his memory: the lives of the heroes of the East, perhaps of the West 6, excited his emulation: his skill in astrology is excused by the folly of the times, and supposes some rudiments of mathematical science; and a profane taste for the arts is betrayed in his liberal invitation and reward of the painters of Italy . But the influence of religion and learning were employed .without effect on his savage and licentious nature. I will not transcribe, nor do I firmly believe, the stories of his fourteen pages, whose bellies were ripped open in search of a stolen melon; or of the beauteous slave, whose head he severed from her body, to convince the Janizaries that their master was not the votary of love. sobriety is attested by the silence of the Turkish annals, which accuse three, and three only, of the ⁸ Robert Valturio published at Verona, in 1483, his xii books de Re Militari, in which he first mentions the use of bombs. By his patron Sigismond Malatesta, prince of Rimini, it had been addressed with a Latin epistle to Mahomet II.

⁶ According to Phranza, he assiduously studied the lives and actions of Alexander, Augustus, Constantine, and Theodosius. I have read somewhere, that Plutarch's Lives were translated by his orders into the Turkish language. If the sultan himself understood Greek, it must have been for the benefit of his subjects. Yet these lives are a school of freedom as well as of yalour.

⁷ The famous Gentale Bellino, whom he had invited from Venice, was dismixed with a chain and collar of gold, and a purse of 5000 ducats. With Voltaire I laugh at the foolish story of a slave purposely beheaded, to instruct the painter in the action of the muscles

Ottoman line of the vice of drunkenness. But CHAP it cannot be denied that his passions were at once LXVIII. furious and inexorable; that in the palace, as in the field, a torrent of blood was spilt on the slightest provocation; and that the noblest of the captive youth were often dishonoured by his unnatural lust. In the Albanian war, he studied the lessons, and soon surpassed the example, of his father; and the conquest of two empires. twelve kingdoms, and two hundred cities, a vain and flattering account, is ascribed to his invincible sword. He was doubtless a soldier, and possibly a general; Constantinople has sealed his glory; but if we compare the means, the obstacles, and the atchievements. Mahomet the second must blush to sustain a parallel with Alexander or Timour. Under his command, the Ottoman forces were always more numerous than their enemies; yet their progress was bounded by the Euphrates and the Adriatic; and his arms were checked by Huniades and Scanderbeg, by the Rhodian knights and by the Persian king.

In the reign of Amurath, he twice tasted of His reign. royalty, and twice descended from the throne: A.D 1451, his tender age was incapable of opposing his A D.1481, father's restoration, but never could he forgive the vizirs who had recommended that salutary His nuptials were celebrated with the ⁸ These Imperial drunkards were Soliman I. Selim II and Amurath IV. (Cantemir, p. 61.). The sophis of Persia can produce a more regular succession; and in the last age, our European travellers were the witnesses and companions of their revels.

CHAP LXVIII.

daughter of a Turkman emir: and, after a festival of two months, he departed from Adrianople with his bride, to reside in the government of Magnesia. Before the end of six weeks he was recalled by a sudden message from the divan, which announced the decease of Amurath, and the mutinous spirit of the Janizaries. His speed and vigour commanded their obedience; he passed the Hellespont with a chosen guard; and at the distance of a mile from Adrianople, the vizirs and emirs, the imams and cadhis, the soldiers and the people, fell prostrate before the new sultan. They affected to weep, they affected to rejoice; he ascended the throne at the age of twenty-one years, and removed the cause of sedition by the death, the inevitable death, of his infant brothers? The ambassadors of Europe and Asia soon appeared to congratulate his accession and solicit his friendship; and to all he spoke the language of moderation and peace. The confidence of the Greek emperor was revived by the solemn oaths and fair assurances with which he sealed the ratification of the treaty: and a rich domain on the banks of the Strymon was assigned for the annual payment of three hundred thousand aspers, the pension of an Ottoman prince, who was detained at his request in the Byzantine court. Yet the neighbours of ⁹ Calapin, one of these royal infants, was saved from his cruel brother, and baptised at Bome under the name of Callistus Othemannus. The emperor Frederic III. presented him with an estate in Austria, where he ended his life, and Cuspinian, who in his youth conversed with the aged prince at Vienna, applands his piety and wisdom (de Cæsaribus, p. 672, 673.).

Mahomet might tremble at the severity with CHAP. which a youthful monarch reformed the pomp of his LXVIII. father's household: the expences of luxury were applied to those of ambition, and an uscless train of seven thousand falconers was either dismissed from his service, or enlisted in his troops. In the first summer of his reign, he visited with an army the Asiatic provinces; but after humbling the pride, Mahomet accepted the submission, of the Caramanian, that he might not be diverted by the smallest obstacle from the execution of his great design ".

The Mahometan, and more especially the Turk- Hostile inish casuists, have pronounced that no promise can Mahomet, bind the faithful against the interest and duty of A D.1450 their religion; and that the sultan may abrogate his own treaties and those of his predecessors. The justice and magnanimity of Amurath had scorned this immoral privilege; but his son, though the proudest of men, could stoop from ambition to the basest arts of dissimulation and deceit. Peace was on his lips, while war was in his heart: he incessantly sighed for the possession of Constantinople; and the Greeks, by their own indiscretion, afforded the first pretence of the fatal rupture". Instead of labouring to be forgotten, their ambassadors pur-

10 See the accession of Mahomet II. in Ducas (c. 33.), Phranza (l. 1. c. 33 l. m. c. 2), Chalcondyles (l. vn p. 199), and Cantemir (p. 96.).

¹¹ Before I enter on the siege of Constantinople I shall observe, that except the short hosts of Cantemir and Leunclavius, I have not been able to obtain any Turkish account of this conquest : such an account as we possess of the siege of Rhodes by Soliman II. (Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom. xxvi. p. 723-709.) I must therefore depend on the Greeks, whose prejudices, in some degree, are subdued by their distress. Our standard texts are sued his cannot to demand the payment, and even the increase, of their annual stipend: the divan was importuned by their complaints, and the vizir. a secret friend of the Christians, was constrained to deliver the sense of his brothen. " Ye foolish " and miserable Romans," said Calil, "we know " your devices, and we are ignorant of your own "danger! the scrupulous Amurath is no more; " his throne is occupied by a young conqueror, " whom no laws can bind, and no obstacles can "resist: and if you escape from his hands, give " praise to the divine elemency, which yet delays " the chastisement of your sins. Why do ve seek " to affright us by vain and indirect menaces? " Release the fugitive Orchan, crown him sultan " of Romania; call the Hungarians from beyond " the Danube; arm against us the nations of the " West; and be assured, that you will only pro-"voke and precipitate your ruin." But if the fears of the ambassadors were alarmed by the stern language of the vizir, they were soothed by the courteous audience and friendly speeches of the

those of Ducas (c. 34—42). Phranza (1 m. c. 7—20). Chalcondyles (1 vm. p. 201—214). and Leonardus Chiensis (Historia C. P. a Turco expugnata) Norimberghw, 1544, in 4to, 20 leaves.). The last of these narratives is the earliest in date, since it was composed in the isle of Chios, the 10th of August 1453, only seventy-inne days after the loss of the city, and in the first confusion of ideas and passions. Some limits may be added from an epistle of caidinal Isidore (in Farragine Rerum Turcicarim, ad calcein Chalcondyl, Clauseri, Basil, 156) to pope Nicholas V. and a fixed of Theodosius Zygomala, which he addressed in the year 1581 to Martin Crusius (Turco-Gracia, l. i. p. 74—48. Basil, 1584). The Artione facts and materials are briefly, though critically, reviewed by Spondanus (AD 1443, No. 1—27). The hearsay relations of Moisticket and the distant Latins. I shall take leave to disregard.

Ottoman prince; and Mahomet assured them that on his return to Adrianople, he would redress the grievances, and consult the true interests, of the Checks. No sooner had he repassed the Hellespont, than he issued a mandate to suppress their pension, and to expel their officers from the banks of the Strymon; in this measure he betraved an hostile mind; and the second order announced, and in some degree commenced, the siege of Constantinople. In the narrow pass of the Bosphorus, an Asiatic fortress had formerly been raised by his grandfather: in the opposite situation, on the European side he resolved to creet a more formidable eastle; and a thousand masons were commanded to assemble in the spring on a spot named Asomaton, about five miles from the Greek metropolis1. Persuasion is the resource of the feeble; and the feeble can seldom persuade: the ambassadors of the emperor attempted, without success, to divert Mahomet from the execution of his design. They represented, that his grandfather had solicited the permission of Manuel to build a castle on his own territories; but that this double fortification, which would command the streight, could only tend to violate the alliance of the nations; to intercept the Latins who traded in the Black Sea, and perhaps to annihilate the subsistence of the city. " I form

¹² The situation of the fortiess, and the topography of the Bophorus, are best learned from Peter Gyllius (de Bosphoro Thiacio, I ii c. 13.), Leunclavius (Pandect, p. 44), and Tournefort (Voyage datis le Levant, form in lettre xx p. 44), 414, but I must rigget the map or plan which Tournefort sent to the French minister of the marine. The reader may turn back to vol. iii ch. 17 of this history

"no enterprise," replied the perfidious sultan, "against the city; but the empire of Constanti-" nople is measured by her walls. Have you " forgot the distress to which my father was re-"duced, when you formed a league with the " Hungarians; when they invaded our country " by land, and the Hellespont was occupied by "the French gallies? Amurath was compelled " to force the passage of the Bosphorus; and your " strength was not equal to your malevolence. " I was then a child at Adrianople; the Moslems " trembled; and for a while the, Gabours " in-" sulted our disgrace. But when my father had " triumphed in the field of Warna, he vowed to erect " a fort on the western shore, and that you it is my " duty to accomplish. Have ye the right, have ye " the power, to controll my actions on my own " ground? For that ground is my own: as far as " the shores of the Bosphorus, Asia is inhabited by " the Turks, and Europe is deserted by the Ro-" mans. Return, and inform your king, that the " present Ottoman is far different from his prede-" cessors; that his resolutions surpass their wishes; " and that he performs more than they could resolve. " Return in safety but the next who delivers a " similar message may expect to be flayed alive."

¹³ The opprobrious name which the Tuils be tow on the Infidels, is expressed Koberg by Ducas, and Graem by Leunclavius and the moderns. The former term is derived by Ducange Coloss Gree tom i p 130 s from Kobergos, in vulgar Greek, a tortoise, as denoting a retrograde motion from the faith. But, alas? Galour is no more than Gheler, which was transferred from the Person to the Turkish language, from the worshippers of fire to those of the crucitix D'Heibelot, Bibliot Orient p 375.)

After this declaration, Constanting, the first of CHM the Greeks in spirit as in rank ". Ind determined to unsheath the sword, and to resist the approach and establishment of the Turks on the Bosphorus. He was disarmed by the advice of his civil and ecclesiastical ministers, who recommended a system less generous, and even less prudent, than his own, to approve their patience and long-suffering, to brand the Ottoman with the name and guilt of an aggressor, and to depend on chance and time for their own safety, and the destruction of a fort which could not long be maintained in the neighbourhood of a great and populous city. Amidst hope and fear, the fears of the wise, and the hopes of the credulous, the winter rolled away; the proper business of each man, and each hour, was postponed; and the Greeks shut their eyes against the impending danger, till the arrival of the spring and the sultan decided the assurance of their rum.

Of a master who never forgives, the orders are the buildseldom disobeyed. On the twenty-sixth of March, on the the appointed spot of Asomaton was covered Bosphora with an active swarm of Turkish artificers; and March the materials by sea and land were diligently transported from Europe and Asia1. The lime

A 12 14 g.

¹⁴ Phranza does justice to his master's sense and comage liditatem hominis non ignorans Imperator prior arma movere co i stituit, and stigmanises the folly of the crim sacri turn prefator proceeds, which he had heard, amentes spe vana page. Ducas was not a privy-counsellor ¹⁵ Instead of this clear and consistent account, the Turkish Annals (Cantenur, p. 97 revived the foolish tab of the ov's hide, and Dido's stratagene in the foundation of Carthage. Their annala (unless we are swayed by an ann-christian prepudic), are far less valuable than the Greek historians had been burn in Cataphrygia; the timber was cut down in the woods of Heraclea and Nicomedia: and the stones were dug from the Anatolian quarries. (Each of the thousand masons was assisted by two workmen; and a measure of two cubits was marked for their daily task. The fortress" was built in a triangular form; each angle was flanked by a strong and massy tower; one on the declivity of the hill, two along the sea-shore: a thickness of twenty-two feet was assigned for the walls, thirty for the towers; and the whole building was covered with a solid platform of lead. Mahomet himself pressed and directed the work with indefatigable ardour: his three vizirs claimed the honour of finishing their respective towers; the zeal of the cadhis emulated that of the Janizaries; the meanest labour was ennobled by the service of God and the sultan; and the diligence of the multitude was quickened by the eye of a despot, whose smile was the hope of fortune, and whose frown was the messenger of death. The Greek emperor beheld with terror the irresistible progress of the work; and vainly strove, by flattery and gifts, to assuage an implacable foe, who sought, and secretly fomented, the slightest occasion of a quarrel. Such occasions must soon and inevitably be found. The ruins of stately churches, and even the marble columns which had been consecrated to Saint Michael the archangel,

LXVIII

¹⁶ In the dimensions of this fortress, the old easile of Europe, Phranza does not exactly agree with Chalcondyles, whose description has been verified on the spot by his editor Leunclavius.

were employed without scruple by the profane and rapacious Moslems; and some Christians, who presumed to oppose the removal, received from their bands the crown of partyrdom. stantine had solicited a Turkish guard to protect the fields and harvests of his subjects: the guard was fixed: but their first order was to allow free pasture to the mules and horses of the camp, and to defend their brethren if they should be molested by the natives. The retinue of an Offoman chief had left their horses to pass the night among the ripe corn: the damage was felt; the insult was resented; and several of both nations were slain in a tumultuous conflict. listened with joy to the complaint: and a detachment was commanded to exterminate the guilty village: the guilty had fled; but forty innocent and unsuspecting reapers were massacred by the soldiers. Till this provocation, Constantinople The residual through had been open to the visits of commerce and cu- in w riosity; on the first alarm the gates were shut; but the emperor, still auxious for peace, released on the third day his Turkish captives ; and espressed, in a last message, the firm resignation of a Christian and a soldier. "Since neither " oaths, nor treaty, nor submission, can secure " peace, pursue," said he to Mahomet, "your "impious warfare. My trust is in God alone: " if it should please him to molhly your heart. I "shall rejoice in the happy change; if he delivers

W. Among these were some pice of Mahoneet, o conseque he mekorable moor, that they begand to be other head as the city unless they could return before time?

CHAP

"the city into your hands, I submit without a " normur to his holy will. But until the Judge " of the earth shall pronounce between us, it is " my duty to like and die in the defence of my "people." The sultan's answer was hostile and decisive: his fortifications were completed; and before his departure for Adrianople, he stationed a vigilant Aga and four hundred Janizaries, to levy a tribute of the ships of every nation that should pass within the reach of their cannon. A Venetian vessel, refusing obedience to the new brds of the Bosphorus, was sunk with a single bullet. The master and thirty sailors escaped in the boat; but they were dragged in chains to the Porte: the chief was impaled; his companions were beheaded, and the historian Ducas" beheld, at Demotica, their bodies exposed to the wild beasts. The siege of Constantinople was deferred till the ensuing spring; but an Ottoman army marched into the Merca to divert the force of the brothers of Constantine. At this ara of calamity, one of these princes, the despot Thomas, was blessed or afflicted with the birth of a son; " the " last heir," says the plaintive Phranza, " of the " last spark of the Roman empire"."

Propriations for the single of Coastantmople,

A D 1453, Jan. 17

> The Greeks and the Turks passed an anxious and sleepless winter: the former were kept awake by their fears, the latter by their hopes; both by the preparations of defence and attack; and the CHAP two emperors, who had the most to lose or to gain, were the most deeply affected by the national AD1409, sentiment. In Mahomet, that sentiment was AD II. inflanced by the ardour of his fouth and temper: he amused his leisure with building at Adrianople ' the lofty palace of Jehan Numa (the watchtower of the world); but his serious thoughts were irrevocably bent on the conquest of the city of Casar. At the dead of night, about the second watch, he started from his bed, and commanded the instant attendance of his prime vizir. The message, the hour, the prince, and his own situation, alarmed the guilty conscience of Calil Basha; who had possessed the confidence, and advised the restoration, of Amurath. On the accession of the son, the vizir was confirmed in his office and the appearances of favour; but the veteran statesman was not insensible that he trod on a thin and slippery ice, which might break under his footsteps, and plunge him in the abyss. His friendship for the Christians, which might be innocent under the late reign, had stigmatised him with the name of Gabour Ortachi, or fosterbrother of the infidels'; and his avarice entertained a venal and treasonable correspondence, ²º Centerne, p. 07, 08. The alian was either doubtful of hi compact, or ignorant of the superior ments of Con timinople A city or a langdom may sometimes be runted by the Imperial to: tune of their sovereign.

¹⁸ Ducas, c. 35. Phrama (1 m. c. 3) who had sailed in los vessel, commemorates the Venetian pilot as a martyr.

¹⁹ Auctum est Pala ologorum genus, et Imperu successor, parvaqua Romanorum semulla hæres natus, Andreas, &c (Phranza, 1 m c.7). The strong expression was inspired by his feelings.

September,

^{20 2007. 305,} by the president Cousin, is translated perconnection. most correctly indeed from the Latin version, but in his haster by has overlooked the note by which Ismael Boilland tol Datem, (3.) acknowledges and recufics his own error.

which was detected and punished after the conclusion of the war. On receiving the royal mandate, he embraced, perhaps for the last time, his wife and children't filled a cup with pieces of gold, hastened to the balace, adored the sultan, and offered, according to the Oriental custom, the slight tribute of his duty and gratitude ... " It is "not my wish," said Mahomet, "to resume my " gifts, but rather to heap and multiply them on " thy head. In my turn I ask a present far more " valuable and important: - Constantinople." As soon as the vizir had recovered from his surprise, "The same God," said he, "who has " already given thee so large a portion of the " Roman empire, will not deny the remnant, " and the capital. His providence, and thy " power, assure thy success; and myself, with " the rest of thy faithful slaves, will sacrifice our " lives and fortunes." " Lala"," (or preceptor,) continued the sultan, " do you see this pillow? " all the night, in my agitation, I have pulled it " on one side and the other; I have risen from " my bed, again have I lain down; yet sleep has " not visited these weary eyes. Beware of the " gold and silver of the Romans: in arms we

²³ The Oriental custom of never appearing without gifts before a sore reign or a superior, is of high antiquity, and see instandingous with the idea of sacrifice, still more an exit and universal. See the examples of such Persian gifts, Æhan, Hist. Van l. 1. c. (1, 32, 33)

²³ The Lala of the Turl's (Cantomir, p. 34.), and the Tuta of the Greeks (Duca., c. 35.), are derived from the natural language of children, and it may be observed, that all such primitive words which denote their parents, are the simple repetition of our syllable, composed of a labial or a dental consonant and an open vowel des Bio. c. Mechanisme des Langues, tom. (p. 231—247.)

" are superior; and with the aid of God, and CHAP " the prayers of the prophet, we shall speedily " become masters of Constantinople." To sound the disposition of his soldiers, he often wandered through the streets alone, and in disguise; and it was fatal to discover the saltan, when he wished to escape from the vulgar eye. His hours were spent in delineating the plan of the hostile city; in debating with his generals and engineers, on what spot he should erect his batteries; on which side he should assault the walls: where he should spring his mines; to what place he should apply his scaling-ladders: and the exercises of the day repeated and proved the lucubrations of the night.

Among the implements of destruction, he Theorem studied with peculiar care the recent and tremen- Wilhout dous discovery of the Latins; and his artillery surpassed whatever had yet appeared in the world. A founder of cannon, a Dane or Hungarian, who had been almost starved in the Greek service. deserted to the Moslems, and was liberally entertained by the Turkish sultan. Mahomet was satisfied with the answer to his first question, which he eagerly pressed on the artist. "Am I able to " east a cannon capable of throwing a ball or "stone of sufficient size to batter the walls of " Constantinople? I am not ignorant of their " strength, but were they more solid than those " of Babylon, I could oppose an engine of supe-" rior power: the position and management of "that engine must be left to your engineers." On this assurance, a foundery was established at Adrianople: the metal was prepared; and at the end of three months, Urban produced a piece of brass ordnance of stupendous, and almost incredible, magnitude; a measure of twelve palms is assigned to the bore; and the stone bullet weighed above six hundred pounds 2. A vacant place before the new palace was chosen for the first experiment; but, to prevent the sudden and mischievous effects of astonishment and fear, a proclamation was issued, that the cannon would be discharged the ensuing day. The explosion was felt or heard in a circuit of an hundred furlongs: the ball, by the force of gunpowder, was driven above a mile; and on the spot where it fell, it buried itself a fathom deep in the ground. For the conveyance of this destructive engine, a frame or carriage of thirty waggons was linked together and drawn along by a team of sixty oxen; two hundred men on both sides were stationed to poise and support the rolling weight, two hundred and fifty workmen mar hed before to smooth the way and repair the bridges; and near two months were employed in a laborious journey of one hundred and fifty miles. A lively philosopher ' derides on this occasion the credulity of the Greeks, and observes, with much reason, Cha Atta talent weighted hour vixty mana, or a suduption of model see Hooper on Are in Wights, Methods, 80); but among the modern Greeks, that the characteristic is westeried to a veright of one hundred, or or via, horse and twenty-five promos Document reserve. Leoneral Colors of castrodine half or stone of the second current Lapident, que ballons modern exposes inhibitating gro.

⁵⁾ Volume Her Generale, ever p. 204, 2015. He was an own work one crail monarchy, and the pote frequency cycles to the removed style of an attransmer, a crymst, &c.

that we should always distrust the exaggerations of a vanquished people. He calculates, that a ball, even of two hundred bounds, would require a charge of one hundred and fifty pounds of powder; and that the stroke yould be feeble and impotent, since not a filteenth part of the mass could be inflamed at the same moment. A stranger as I am to the art of destruction, I can discern that the modern improvements of artillery prefer the number of pieces to the weight of metal; the quickness of the fire to the sound, or even the consequence, of a single explosion. Yet I dare not reject the positive and unanimous evidence of contemporary writers; nor can it seem improbable, that the first artists, in their rude and ambitious efforts, should have transgressed the standard of moderation. A Turkish cannon. more encraious than that of Mahomet, still guards the entrance of the Dardanelles; and if the use be inconvenient, it has been found on a late trial that the effect was for from contemptible. A stone bullet of cleven hundred younds weight we once discharged with three handred and thirty pounds of powder; at the distance of six hundred yards it shivered into three rocky fragments, traversed the streight, and, leaving the waters in a foam, again rose and bounded against the opposite hill ".

¹⁶ The Baron de Tou jom, in p. 85–80%, who fortined the Dardanelles against the Russiene, describes on a hoch, and even counce, strain his own process, and the conformation of the Turks. But that adventurous trivelles discuss possess the rate coming our confidence.

CHAP IXVIII Mahoner II forms the siege of Constantinople, Apido

While Mahomet threatened the capital of the East, the Greek emperor implored with fervent prayers the assistance of earth and heaven. But the invisible powers were deaf to his supplications; and Christendom beheld with indifference AD 1453, the fall of Constantinople, while she derived at least some promise of supply from the jealous and temporal policy of the sultan of Egypt. states were too weak, and others too remote: by some the danger was considered as imaginary, by others as inevitable: the Western princes were involved in their endless and domestic quarrels; and the Roman pontiff was exasperated by the falsehood or obstinacy of the Greeks. Instead of employing in their favour the arms and treasures of Italy, Nicholas the fifth had foretold their approaching ruin; and his honour was engaged in the accomplishment of his prophecy. Perhaps he was softened by the last extremity of their distress; but his compassion was tardy; his efforts were faint and unavailing; and Constantinople had fallen, before the squadrons of Genoa and Venice could sail from their harbours 47. Even the princes of the Morea and of the Greek islands affected a cold neutrality: the Genoese colony of Galata negociated a private treaty; and the sultan indulged them in the delusive hope, that by his clemency they might survive the ruin of the em-

⁻⁷ Non audivit, indignum duceas, says the honest Antononus, but as the Roman court was afterwards grieved and ashamed, we and the more courtly expression of Platina, in animo his c nonthing juvare Gracos, and the positive as ertion of American Salvins, etructum classem, &c (Spond A D 1453, Nº 3

A plebeian crowd, and some Byzantine CHAP nobles, basely withdrew from the danger of their country; and the avarice of the rich denied the emperor, and reserved for the Turks, the secret treasures which might have raised in their defence whole armies of mercenaries. The indigent and solitary prince prepared however to sustain his formidable adversary; but if his courage were equal to the peril, his strength was inadequate to the contest. In the beginning of the spring, the Turkish vanguard swept the towns and villages as far as the gates of Constantinople: submission was spared and protected; whatever presumed to resist was exterminated with fire and sword. The Greek places on the Black Sea, Mesembria, Acheloum, and Bizon, surrendered on the first summons; Selybria alone deserved the honours of a siege or blockade; and the bold inhabitants, while they were invested by land, launched their boats, pillaged the opposite coast of Cyzieus, and sold their captives in the public market. But on the approach of Mahomet himself all was silent and prostrate: he first halted at the distance of five miles; and from thence advancing in battle array, planted before the gate of St. Romanus the Imperial standard; and, on the sixth day of April, formed the memorable siege of Constantinople.

²³ Antonin in Proem - Epist Cardinal Ludor apus Speedanum; and Dr Johnson, in the tregedy of Irene, he happilese zed thir characteristic circumstance

The groaning foreck-dig up the colden caverns,

The accumulated wealth of hoarding age - ,

That wealth which, granted to their weeping prince,

Had rang'd embattled mation at their trees

Cli AP LXVIII Forces of the Tank.

The troops of Asia and Europe extended on the right and left from the Proportis to the harbour: the Janizaries in the front were stationed before the sultan's tent; the Ottoman line was covered by a deep intrenchment; and a subordinate army inclosed the suburb of Galata, and watched the doubtful faith of the Genoese. The inquisitive Philelphus, who resided in Greece about thirty years before the siege, is confident, that all the Turkish forces, of any name or value, could not exceed the number of sixty thousand horse and twenty thousand foot; and he upbraids the pusillanimity of the nations, who had tamely yielded to an handful of Barbarians. Such indeed might be the regular establishment of the Capiculi²⁰, the troops of the Porte, who marched with the prince, and were paid from his royal treasury. But the bashaws, in their respective governments, maintained or levied a provincial militia; many lands were held by a military tenure; many volunteers were attracted by the hope of spoil; and the sound of the holy trumpet invited a swarm of hungry and fearless fanatics, who might contribute at least to multiply the terrors, and in a first attack to blunt the swords, of the Christians. whole mass of the Turkish powers is magnified by Ducas, Chalcondyles, and Leonard of Chios, to the amount of three or four hundred thousand men; but Phranza was a less remote and more [LXVIII] accurate indge; and his precise definition of two hundred and fifty-eight thousand does not exceed the measure of experience and probability '. The navy of the besiegers was less formidable: the Propontis was overspread with three hundred and twenty sail; but of these no more than eighteen could be rated as gallies of war; and the far greater part must be degraded to the condition of storeships and transports, which poured into the camp fresh supplies of men, ammunition, and provisions: In her last decay, Constantinople was still peopled of the Greek with more than an hundred thousand inhabitants: but these numbers are found in the accounts, not of war, but of captivity; and they mostly consisted of mechanics, of priests, of women, and of men devoid of that spirit which even women have sometimes exerted for the common safety. I can suppose, I could almost excuse, the reluctance of subjects to serve on a distant frontier, at the will of a tyrant; but the man who dares not expose his life in the defence of his children and his property has lost in society the first and most active energies of nature. By the emperor's command, a particular inquiry had been made through the streets and houses, how many of the citizens, or -" The observation of Philolphus 1 approved by Cuspencia in the year 1508 (de Cæsaribus, in Epilog de Militiá Lutile i, p. 607 Marsigh proves, that the effective armies of the Turks are much less that crous than they appear. In the army that besteged Convenience, Leis order Chiefe ereckon no more than 15,000 Jan. Marie:

Of The palatine troops are styled Capiculi, the provincials, Seratical; and most of the names and institutions of the Turkish milital existed before the Caren Nameh of Soliman II, from which, and his own experience, count Marsigli has composed his infiltary state of the Ottoman empire.

even of the monks, were able and willing to bear arms for their country. The lists were entrusted to Phranzan; and, after a diligent addition, he informed his master, with grief and surprise, that the national defence was reduced to four thousand nine hundred and seventy Romans. Between Constantine and his faithful minister, this comfortless secret was preserved; and a sufficient proportion of shields, cross-bows, and muskets, was distributed from the arsenal to the city bands. They derived some accession from a body of two thousand strangers, under the command of John Justiniani. a noble Genoese: a liberal donative was advanced to these auxiliaries; and a princely recompence, the isle of Lemnos, was promised to the valour and victory of their chief. A strong chain was drawn across the mouth of the harbour: it was supported by some Greek and Itahan vessels of war and merchandise; and the ships of every Christian nation, that successively arrived from Candia and the Black Sea, were detained for the public service. Against the powers of the Ottoman empire, a city of the extent of thirteen, perhaps of sixteen, miles was defended by a scanty garrison of seven or eight thousand soldiers. Europe and Asia were open to the besiegers; but the strength and provisions of the ^{} Ego, cidem (Imp.) tabellas extribut non absque didore et moistitia, mansitque apud nos dinos aliis occultus numerus (Phranza, I. m. e. 8.). With some indulgence for national prejudices, we cannot desire a more authentic witness, not only of public facis but of private counsels.

Greeks must sustain a daily decrease; nor could CHAP they indulge the expectation of any foreign succour or supply.

The primitive Romans would have drawn their Tale swords in the resolution of death or conquest, union of the two The primitive Christians might have embraced thurches, VD 1402. each other, and awaited in patience and charity the in the stroke of martyrdom. But the Greeks of Constantinople were animated only by the spirit of religion, and that spirit was productive only of animosity and discord. Before his death, the emperor John Palæologus had renounced the unpopular measure of an union with the Latins; nor was the idea revived, till the distress of his brother Constantine imposed a last trial of flattery and dissimulation ". With the demand of temporal aid, his ambassadors were instructed to mingle the assurance of spiritual obedience: his neglect of the church was excused by the urgent cares of the state; and his orthodox wishes solicited the presence of a Roman legate. The Vatican had been too often deluded; yet the signs of repentance could not decently be overlooked, a legate was more easily granted than an army; and about six months before the final destruction. the cardinal Isidore of Russia appeared in that character with a retinue of priests and soldiers. The emperor saluted him as a friend and father; respectfully listened to his public and private sermons; and with the most obsequious of the cleary and laymen subscribed the act of union, as it had been ratified in the council of Florence. On the twelfth of December, the two nations, in the church of St. Sophia, joined in the communion of sacrifice and prayer; and the names of the two pontiffs were solemnly commemorated; the names of Nicholas the fifth, the vicar of Christ, and of the patriarch Gregory who had been driven into exale by a rebellious people.

¹² In Spondanus, the narrative of the union is not only partial, but imperfect. The bishop of Panaers died in 1042, and the histony of Ducas, which represents the e scenes or 30, 37) with such truth and spirit, was not printed till the year 1649

CHAP LXVIII

Obstinacy and fan ui-Greeks

But the dress and language of the Latin priest cismotive who officiated at the altar, were an object of scandal; and it was observed with horror, that he consecrated a cake or wafer of unleavened bread, and poured cold water into the cup of the sacrament. A national historian acknowledges with a blush, that none of his countrymen, not the emperor himself were sincere, in this oceasional conformity". Their hasty and unconditional submission was palliated by a promise of future revisal; but the best, or the worst, of their excuses was the confession of their own perjury. When they were pressed by the reproaches of their honest brethren, "Have patience," they whispered, "have patience till God shall have " delivered the city from the great dragon who " seeks to devour us. You shall then perceive " whether we are truly reconciled with the Azy-" mites." But patience is not the attribute of zeal; nor can the arts of a court be adapted to CHAP the freedom and violence of popular enthusiasm. From the dome of St. Sophia, the inhabitants of either sex, and of every degree, rushed in crowds to the cell of the monk Gennadius ', to consult the oracle of the church. The holy man was invisible; entranced, as it should seem, in deep meditation, or divine rapture: but he had exposed on the door of his cell a speaking tablet; and they successively withdrew, after reading these tremendous words: "O miscrable Romans, why will " ve abandon the truth; and why, instead of con-" fiding in God, will ye put your trust in the " Italians? In loring your faith, you will lose "your city. Have mercy on me, O Lord 1 " protest in thy presence, that I am innocent of "the crime. O miserable Romans, consider, " pause, and repent. At the same moment that " you renounce the religion of your fathers, by " embracing impiety, you submit to a foreign " servitude." According to the advice of Cennadius, the religious vingins, as pure as angels, and as proud as dæmons, rejected the act of union, and abjured all communion with the present and future associates of the Latins; and their example was applauded and imitated by the greatest part ³⁴ Hrs primitive and secular name was George Scholands who a he changed for that of Germadius, either when he become a more or a patriarch. This defence, at I forence, of the simple coal winco he so furiously attacked at Constantinople, his tempt d law Allatius, Dietrib, de Georges, in l'abric. Belio. Co ve tone a p 760-780) to deade him ento two men, but Penandor a 343-383) has restored the identity of his person and the duplication of his character.

³³ Phranza, one of the conforming Greeks, acknowledges that the measure was adopted only propter spem auxilia, he affirms with pleasure, that those who refused to perform their devotions in St Sophia, extra culpam et in pace essent (l. in. c. 20).

LXVIII

of the clergy and people. From the monastery. the devout Greeks dispersed themselves in the taverns; drank confusion to the slaves of the pope; emptied their glasses in honour of the image of the holy Virgin; and besought her to defend against Mahomet, the city which she had formerly saved from Chosroes and the Chagan. In the double intoxication of zeal and wine, they valiantly exclaimed, "What occasion have we for " succour, or union, or Latins? far from us be "the worship of the Azymites" During the winter that preceded the Turkish conquest, the nation was distracted by this epidemical frenzy; and the season of Lent, the approach of Easter, instead of breathing charity and love, served only to fortify the obstinacy and influence of the zealots. The confessors scrutinized and alarmed the conscience of their votaries, and a rigorous penance was imposed on those, who had received the communion from a priest, who had given an express or tacit consent to the union. vice at the altar propagated the infection to the mute and simple spectators of the ceremony: they forfeited, by the impure spectacle, the virtue of the sacerdotal character; nor was it lawful, even in danger of sudden death, to invoke the assistance of their prayers or absolution. No sooner had the church of St. Sophia been polluted by the Latin sacrifice, than it was described as a Jewish synagogue, or an heathen temple, by the clergy and people: and a vast and gloomy silence prevailed in that venerable dome, which had so often smoked with a cloud of incense, blazed with innumerable lights, and resounded with the voice of prayer and thanksgiving. The Latins were the most odious of heretics and infidels; and the first minister of the empire, the great duke, was heard to declare, that he had rather behold in Constantinople the turban of Mahomet, than the pope's tiara or a cardinal's hat ". A sentiment so unworthy of Christians and patriots, was familiar and fatal to the Greeks: the emperor was deprived of the affection and support of his subjects; and their native cowardice was sauctified by resignation to the divine decree, or the visionary hope of a miraculous deliverance.

1111/11

Of the triangle which composes the figure of special Constantinople, the two sides along the sea were from timemade inaccessible to an enemy; the Proportis by Manonature, and the harbour by art. Between the two AD 1153, waters, the basis of the triangle, the land side was $\frac{\text{Apol} \, 0}{\text{May 20}}$ protected by a double wall, and a deep ditch of the depth of one hundred feet. Against this line of fortification, which Phranza, an eye-witness, prolongs to the measure of six miles", the Ottomans directed their principal attack; and the emperor, after distributing the service and command of the most perilous stations, undertook the defence of the external wall. In the first days of the siege, the Greek soldiers descended into the ditch, or sallied into the field; but they soon discovered, that, in the proportion of their numbers, one Christian was of more value than twenty Turks: and, after these bold preludes, they were prudently content to maintain the rampart with their missile weapons. Nor should this prudence be accused of pusillanimity. The nation was indeed pusillanimous and base; but the last Constantine deserves the name of an hero: his noble band of volunteers was inspired with Roman virtue; and the foreign auxiliaries supported the honour of the Western chivalry. The incessant vollies of lauces and arrows were accompanied with the smoke, the sound, and the fire, of their musketry and cannon. Their small arms discharged at the same time either five, or even ten. balls of lead, of the size of a walnut: and, according to the closeness of the ranks and the force of the powder, several breast-plates and bodies were transpierced by the same shot. But the Turkish approaches were soon sunk in trenches, or covered with ruins. Each day added to the science of the Christians; but their inadequate stock of gunpowder was wasted in the operations of each day. Their ordnance was not powerful, either in size or number; and if they possessed some heavy cannon, they feared to plant them on the walls, lest the aged structure should be shaken and overthrown by the explosion of. The same destructive secret had been revealed to the Moslems; by whom it was employed with the superior energy of zeal, riches, and despotism. The great cannon of Mahomet has been separately noticed; an important and visible object in the history of the times: but that enormous engine was flanked by two fellows almost of equal magnitude : the long order of the Turkish artillery was pointed against the walls; fourteen batteries thundered at once on the most accessible places; and of one of these it is ambiguously expressed, that it was mounted with one hundred and thirty guns, or that it discharged one hundred and thirty bullets. Yet, in the power and activity of the sultan, we may discern the infancy of the new science. Under a master who counted the moments, the great cannon could be loaded and fired no more than seven times in one day". The heated metal unfortunately burst; several workmen were destroyed; and the skill of an artist was admired who bethought himself of preventing the danger and the accident, by pouring oil, after each explosion, into the mouth of the cannon.

³⁵ person, verser, a may be fairly translated a endural har The difference of the Greek and Latin habits or battered the Schum

⁴⁰ We are obliged to reduce the Greek and sate the malled measure which is preserved in the weist, of Rus in, of 547 French tions, and of 104 to a degree. The six miles of Phranza do not exceed from English mile. D'Anville, Me ures lunerare, p. 61 133, 801

³⁷ At indies doctiones nostri facti paravere contra hosies machinamenta, quae tamen avare dabantur. Pulvis erat intri modica extrua, tela modica, bombardæ, si aderant incommodifate loct primium hosies offendere macerichis alver que tectos non poterant.

.XVIII

Nam stique magnæ erant, ne murus concuteretui no-teregia -celeirat This passage of Leonardus Chicusis is cutions and mig ortaos to According to Chalcondyles and Phranza, the great counted burst, an accident which, according to Duca, was prevented by the artist's skill. It is evident that they do not socill of the some gun.

³⁹ Near an hundred years after the logg of Con that tople, the French and English fleets in the Channel were proud of tiring 300 shot at an engagement of two hours (Memones de Merined); Bellay, I. x. in the Collection Generale, total xxt/p/2/9.

CHAP LXVIII Attack and defence.

The first random shots were productive of more sound than effect; and it was by the advice of a Christian, that the engineers were taught to level their aim against the two opposite sides of the salient angles of a bastion. However imperient, the weight and repetition of the fire made some impression on the walls; and the Turks, parhing their approches to the edge of the area, retempted to fill the enormous chasm, and to build a road to the asscult 1. Innumerable fascines, and hogsheads, and trunks of trees, were heaped on each other; and such was the impetuosity of the throng, that the foremost and the weakest were pushed headlong down the precipice, and instantly buried under the accumulated mass. To fill the ditch. was the till of the besiegers; to clear away the rubbish, was the safety of the besieved; and, after a long and bloody conflict, the web that had been woven in the day was still unravelled in the night. The next resource of Alahomet was the practice of mines; but the soil was rocky; in every attempt he was stopped and undermined by the Christian engineers; nor had the art been yet invented of replenishing those subterraneous passages with gunpowder, and blowing whole towers and cities into the air 41. A circumstance that dis-

^{4.} I have elected some curious facts, without striving to cumulate due bloody and obstinate eloquence of the Abbe de Vertot, in his profix descriptions of the steges of Rhodes, Malta, &c. But that agreeable historian had a turn for romance, and as he wrote to please the order, he had adopted the same spirit of englusiasm and clavality.

 $^{^{44}}$ The first theory of mines with gunpowd rappears in 1480, in a MS of C cag. of Sienna , Fnaboschi, tom vi. P. i. p. 324 $^\circ$ tinguishes the siege of Constantinople, is the re- CHAP union of the ancient and modern artillery. cannon were intermingled with the mechanical engines for easting stones and darts; the bullet and the battering-ram were directed against the same walls; nor had the discovery of gunpowder superseded the use of the liquid and unextinguishable A wooden turret of the largest size was advanced on rollers: this portable magazine of ammunition and fascines was protected by a threefold covering of bulls hides; incessant vollies were securely discharged from the loop-holes; in the front, three doors were contrived for the alternate sally and retreat of the soldiers and workmen. ascended by a stair-case to the upper platform, and, as high as the level of that platform, a scalingladder could be raised by pullies to form a bridge, and grapple with the adverse rampart. By these various arts of annovance, some as new as they were pernicious to the Greeks, the tower of St. Romanus was at length overturned: after a severe struggle, the Turks were repulsed from the breach, and interrupted by darkness; but they trusted, that with the return of light they should renew the attack with fresh vigour and decisive success. this pause of action, this interval of hope, each moment was improved by the activity of the emperor and Justiniani, who passed the night on the spot, and urged the labours which involved the

They were first prictised at Sarzanella, to 1487, but the honouand improvement in 150% is ascribed to Peter of Navarre, who used them with success in the war, or Italy. Hist de la Ligne le Camboov, tom in p. qd-q7 .

CILAP

safety of the church and city. At the dawn of day, the impatient sultan perceived, with astonishment and grief, that his wooden turret had been reduced to ashes: the ditch was cleared and restored; and the tower of St. Romanus was again strong and entire. He deplored the failure of his design; and uttered a profane exclamation, that the word of the thirty-seven thousand prophets should not have compelled him to believe that such a work, in so short a time, could have been accomplished by the infidels.

Succour and victory of four ships The generosity of the Christian princes was cold and tardy; but in the first apprehension of a siege, Constantine had negociated, in the isles of the Archipelago, the Morea, and Sicily, the most indispensable supplies. As early as the beginning of April, five great ships, equipped for merchandise and war, would have sailed from the harbour of Chios, had not the wind blown obstinately from the North. One of these ships bore the Imperial flag; the remaining four belonged to the Genoese; and they were laden with wheat and barley, with wine, oil, and vegetables, and, above all, with soldiers and mariners, for the service of the capital. After a tedious delay, a gentle breeze,

⁴² It is singular that the Greeks should not agree in the number of these illustrious vessels: the fire of Ducas, the four of Phranza and Leonardus, and the *tin of Chalcondyles, must be extended to the smaller, or confined to larger, size. Voltaire, in giving one of these ships to Frederic III confounds the emperors of the East and West and, on the second day, a strong gale from the south, carried them through the Hellespont and the Propontis: but the city was already invested by sea and land; and the Turkish fleet, at the entrance of the Bosphorus, was stretched from shore to shore, in the form of a crescent, to intercent, or at least to repel, these bold auxiliaries. The reader who has present to his mind the geographical picture of Constantinople, will conceive and admire the greatness of the spectacle. The five Christian ships continued to advance with joyful shouts, and a full press both of sails and oars, against an hostile fleet of three hundred vessels; and the rampart, the camp, the coasts of Europe and Asia, were lined with innumerable spectators, who anxiously awaited the event of this momentous succour. At the first view that event could not appear doubtful; the superiority of the Moslems was beyond all measure or account; and, in a calm, their numbers and valour must inevitably have prevailed. But their hasty and imperfect navy had been created, not by the genius of the people, but by the will of the sultan: in the height of their prosperity, the Turks have acknowledged, that if God had given them the earth, he had left the sea to the infidels41; and a series of defeats, a rapid progress of decay, has established the truth of their modest confession. Except eighteen gallies of some force, the rest of their fleet consisted of open boats, rudely constructed and awkwardly managed, crowded with troops, and destitute of cannon; and since courage arises in a great measure from the consciousuess of strength, the bravest of the Janizaries might tremble on a new element. In the Christian squadron, five stout and lofty ships were guided by skilful pilots, and manned with the veterans of Italy and Greece, long practised in the arts and perils of the Their weight was directed to sink or scatter the weak obstacles that impeded their passage: their artillery's vept the waters: their liquid fire was poured on the heads of the adversaries, who, with the design of boarding, presumed to approach them; and the winds and waves are always on the side of the ablest pavigators. In this conflict, the Imperial vessel, which had been almost overpowered, was rescued by the Genoese: but the Turks, in a distant and a closer attack, were twice repulsed with considerable loss. Mahomet himself sat on horseback on the beach, to encourage their valour by his voice and presence, by the promise of reward, and by fear, more potent than the fear of the enemy. sions of his soul, and even the gestures of his body 1, seemed to imitate the actions of the combatants; and, as if he had been the lord of nature, he spurred his horse with a fearless and impotent effort into His loud reproaches, and the clamours of the camp, urged the Ottomans to a third attack, more fatal and bloody than the two former; and I must repeat, though I cannot credit, the evidence of Phranza, who affirms, from their own mouth, that they lost above twelve thousand men in the slaughter of the day. They fled in disorder to the shores of Europe and Asia, while the Christian squadron, triumphant and unhurt, steered along the Bosphorus, and securely anchored within the chain of the harbour. In the confidence of victory, they boasted that the whole Turkish power must have yielded to their arms; but the admiral, or captain bashaw, found some consolation for a painful wound in his eye, by representing that accident as the cause of his defeat. Baltha Ogli was a renegade of the race of the Bulgarian princes: his military character was tainted with the unpopular vice of avarice; and under the despotism of the prince or people, misfortune is a sufficient evidence of guilt. His rank and services were annihilated by the displeasure of Mahomet. In the royal presence, the captain bashaw was extended on the ground by four slaves, and received one hundred strokes with a golden rod ": his death had been pronounced; and he adored the elemency of the sultan, who was satisfied with the milder punishment of confiscation and exile. The introduction of this supply revived the hopes of the ¹⁶ According to the exaggeration or corrupt text of Duca (c. (s.)) this golden har was of the enormous and meredible weight of (00 ldrw), or pointd. Bouilland's reading of 500 drachins, or five pointds, is sufficient to exercise the arm of Mahomet, and but each lock of his adminal

³³ In bold defiance, or rather in gross ignorance, of language and geography, the president Cousin detains them at Chios with a south, and waits them to Constantinople with a north, wind.

CIIAP XVIII

⁴⁾ The perfectual decay and weakness of the Turkish mays, may be observed in Rycant (State of the Ottoman Empire, p. 372-378), Theorem (Voyages, P. 1, p. 229-242), and Tott (Memoires, tom 40), the last of whom (1) always solicitous to amuse and amage his reader

⁴⁵ I must confess, that I have before my eyes the hand picture which Thurvdides (I vfi e 71.) has drawn of the passions and gettings of the Athemans in a naval engagement in the great hurbour of S racing.

CHAP.

Greeks, and accused the supineness of their LXVIII. Western allies. Amidst the deserts of Anatolia and the rocks of Palestine, the millions of the crusades had buried themselves in a voluntary and inevitable grave; but the situation of the Imperial city was strong against her enemies, and accessible to her friends; and a rational and moderate armament of the maritime states might have saved the relics of the Roman name, and maintained a Christian fortress in the heart of the Ottoman empire. Yet this was the sole and feeble attempt for the deliverance of Constantinople: the more distant powers were insensible of its danger; and the ambassador of Hungary, or at least of Hunjades, resided in the Turkish camp, to remove the fears, and to direct the operations, of the sultan".

Mahomet tian-ports his navy over land.

It was difficult for the Greeks to penetrate the secret of the divan; yet the Greeks are persuaded, that a resistance, so obstinate and surprising, had fatigued the perseverance of Mahomet. He began to meditate a retreat, and the siege would have been speedily raised, if the ambition and jealousy of the second vizir had not opposed the perfidious advice of Calil Bashaw, who still maintained a secret correspondence with the Byzantine court. The reduction of the city appeared to be hopeless, unless a double attack could be made from the harbour as well as from the land; but the harbour was inaccessible; an impenetrable chain was now defended by eight large ships, more than twenty of a smaller size, with several gallies and sloops; and, instead of forcing this barrier, the Turks might apprehend a naval sally, and a second encounter in the open sea. In this perplexity, the genius of Mahomet conceived and executed a plan of a bold and marvellous east, of transporting by land his lighter vessels and military stores from the Bosphorus into the higher The distance is about ten part of the harbour. miles; the ground is uneven, and was overspread with thickets; and, as the road must be opened behind the suburb of Galata, their free passage or total destruction must depend on the option of the Genoese. But these selfish merchants were ambitious of the favour of being the last devoured; and the deficiency of art was supplied by the strength of obedient myriads. A level way was covered with a broad platform of strong and solid planks; and to render them more slippery and smooth, they were anointed with the fat of sheep and oxen. Fourscore light gallies and brigantines of fifty and thirty oars, were disembarked on the Bosphorus shore; arranged successively on rollers; and drawn forwards by the power of men and pullies. Two guides or pilots were stationed at the helm, and the prow, of each vessel; the sails were unfurled to the winds; and the labour was cheered by song and acclamation. In the course of a single night, this Turkish fleet painfully climbed the hill, steered over the plain, and was launched from the declivity into the shallow waters of the harbour, far above the molestation of the deeper vessels of the Greeks. The real importance of this operation was magnified by the consternation and confidence which it inspired: but the notorious, unquestionable, fact was displayed before the eyes. and is recorded by the pens of the two nations". A similar stratagem had been repeatedly practised by the ancients"; the Ottoman gallies (I must again repeat) should be considered as large boats; and, if we compare the magnitude and the distance, the obstacles and the means, the boasted miracle has perhaps been equalled by the industry of our own times". As soon as Mahomet had occupied the upper harbour with a fleet and army; he constructed, in the narrowest part, a bridge, or rather mole, of fifty cubits in breadth, and one hundred in length: it was formed of casks and hogsheads; joined with rafters, linked with iron, and covered with a solid floor. On this floating battery, he planted one of his largest cannon, while the fourscore gallies, with troops

⁴⁷ Ducas, who confesses himself ill-informed of the affairs of Hungary, assigns a motive of superstition, a tatal belief that Constantinople would be the term of the Turkish conquests. See Phranza (l. m. c. 20) and Spondanus.

⁴⁶ The manimous testimony of the four Greeks is confirmed by Cantenur (p (6)) from the Turkish annals: but I could wish to contract the distance of ten unles, and to prolong the term of one right.

³⁹ Phianza relates two examples of a similar transportation over the six miles of the Isthmus of Coimth, the one tabulous, of Augustus after the battle of Actium, the other true, of Nicetas, a Greek general in the will century. To these he might have added a bold enterprise of Hannibal, to introduce his vessels into the harbour of Tarentum (Polybius, I vin p 740 cdit Gronov.).

⁵⁰ A Greek of Candia, who had served the Venetians in a similar undertal ing (Spoud, A.D. 1438, Nº 375, might possibly be the adviser and agent of Mahomet.

⁵⁶ I particularly allude to our own embarkations on the lakes of Canadam the years 1770 and 1777, so great in the labour, so fruite s in the event.

and scaling-ladders, approached the most accessible side, which had formerly been stormed by the Latin conquerors. The indolence of the Christians has been accused for not destroying these unfinished works; but their fire, by a superior fire, was controlled and silenced: nor were they wanting in a nocturnal attempt to burn the vessels as well as the bridge of the sultan. His vigilance prevented their approach; their foremost galliots were sunk or taken; forty youths, the bravest of Italy and Greece, were inhumanly massacred at his command; nor could the emperor's grief be assuaged by the just though cruel retaliation, of exposing from the walls the heads of two hundred and sixty Musulman captives. After a siege of forty days, the fate of Constan- Distress of tinople could no longer be averted. The diminu- the engtive garrison was exhausted by a double attack: the fortifications, which had stood for ages against hostile violence, were dismantled on all sides by the Ottoman cannon: many breaches were opened; and near the gate of St. Romanus, four towers had been levelled with the ground. For the payment of his feeble and mutinous troops, Constantine was compelled to despoil the churches with the promise of a fourfold restitution; and his sacrilege offered a new reproach to the enemies of the union. A spirit of discord impaired the remnant of the Christian strength: the Genoese and Venetian auxiliaries asserted the pre-eminence of their respective service; and Justiniani and the great duke, whose ambition was not extinguished by the common danger, accused each other of treachery and cowardice.

CHAP, LXVIII Preparations of the Turks for the general a sault, May 20,

During the siege of Constantinople, the words of peace and capitulation had been sometimes pronounced; and several embassies had passed between the camp and the city". The Greek emperor was humbled by adversity; and would have yielded to any terms compatible with religion and royalty. The Turkish sultan was desirous of sparing the blood of his soldiers; still more desirous of securing for his own use the Byzantine treasures; and he accomplished a sacred duty in presenting to the Gabours, the choice of circumcision, of tribute, or of death. The avarice of Mahomet might have been satisfied with an annual sum of one hundred thousand ducats; but his ambition grasped the capital of the East: to the prince he offered a rich equivalent, to the people a free toleration, or a safe departure: .but after some fruitless treaty, he declared his resolution of finding either a throne, or a grave, under the walls of Constantinople. A sense of honour, and the fear of universal reproach, forbade Palæologus to resign the city into the hands of the Ottomans; and he determined to abide the last extremities of war. Several days were employed by the sultan in the preparations of the assault; and a respite was granted by his favourite science of astrology, which had fixed on the twenty-ninth of May, as the fortunate and fatal hour. On the evening of the twenty-seventh, he issued his final orders; assembled in his presence the military chiefs; and dispersed his heralds through the camp to CHAP proclaim the duty, and the motives, of the perilous LNAIII enterprise. Fear is the first principle of a despotic government; and his menaces were expressed in the Oriental style, that the fugitives and deserters, had they the wings of a bird ", should not escape from his inexorable justice. The greatest part of his bashaws and Janizaries were the offspring of Christian parents: but the glories of the Turkish name were perpetuated by successive adoption; and in the gradual change of individuals, the spirit of a legion, a regiment, or an oda, is kept alive by imitation and discipline. In this holy warfare, the Moslems were exhorted to purify their minds with prayer, their bodies with seven ablutions: and to abstain from food till the close of the ensuing day. A crowd of dervishes visited the tents, to instil the desire of martyrdom, and

⁵² Chalcondyles and Ducas differ in the time and circumstances of the negociation, and as it was neither glorious nor salutary, the faithful Phrana spaies his prince even the thought of a surrender.

53 These wings (Chalcondyles, 1 vin p. 208); are no more than an Oriental figure : but in the tragedy of Trene, Mahomet's passion soars above sense and reason

Should the fierce North, upon his frozen wings, Bear him aloft above the wondering clouds, And seat him in the Pleiads golden chanot-

Thence should my fury drag hun down to tortures Besides the extravagance of the rant, I must observe, 1. That the operation of the winds must be confined to the lower regions of the air. 2. That the name, etymology, and fable of the Plenals are purely Greek (Scholiast ad Homer 2 086 Eudocia in Ioni), p. 390. Apollodor, I. m. c. 10. Hevne, p. 229. Not. 682), and had no affinity with the astronomy of the East (Hyde ad Ulughia, Tabul in Syntagma Dissert tom, i p. 40, 42, Goguet, Origine des Arts, &c tom vi p. 73-78. Gebelin, Hist, du Calendrier, p. 73 1, which 'Mahomet had studied 3. The golden chariot does not exist either in science or fiction; but I much fear that Dr. Johnson has confounded the Pleiads with the great hear or wagg m, the zodine with a northern constellation

April 6 . S. op. Austre emixhtere ning

CHAP.

the assurance of spending an immortal youth amidst the rivers and gardens of paradise, and in the embraces of the black-eved virgins. Mahomet principally trusted to the efficacy of temporal and visible rewards. A double pay was promised to the victorious troops; "The city and " the buildings," said Mahomet, " are mine; but " I resign to your valuer the captives and the spoil, " the treasures of gold and beauty; be rich and be " happy. Many are the provinces of my empire: " the intrepid selller vho first ascends the walls of "Constantinuple, shall be rewarded with the " government of the fairest and most wealthy; and " my gratitude shall accumulate his honours and " fortunes above the measure of his own hopes." Such various and potent motives diffused among the Turks a searcal ardour, regardless of life and impatient for action: the camp re-echoed with the Moslem shouts of "God is God, there is but one "God, and Mahomet is the apostle of God ";" and the sea and land, from Galata to the seven towers, were illuminated by the blaze of their nocturnal fires.

Last farewell of the empetor and the Greeks

Far different was the state of the Christians; who, with loud and impotent complaints, deplored the guilt, or the punishment, of their sins. The celestial image of the Virgin had been exposed in solemn procession; but their divine patroness was deaf to their intreaties; they accused the obstinacy of the emperor for refusing a timely surrender; anticipated the horrors of their fate; and sighed for the repose and security of Turkish servitude. The noblest of the Greeks. and the bravest of the allies, were summoned to the palace, to prepare them, on the evening of the twenty-eighth, for the duties and dangers of the general assault. The last speech of Palæologus was the funeral oration of the Roman empire ": he promised, he conjured, and he vainly attempted to infuse the hope which was extinguished in his own mind. In this world all was comfortless and gloomy; and neither the gospel nor the church have proposed any conspicuous recompence to the heroes who fall in the service of their country. But the example of their prince, and the confinement of a siege, had armed these warriors with the courage of despair, and the pathetic scene is described by the feelings of the historian Phranza, who was himself present at this mournful assembly. They wept, they embraced; regardless of their families and fortunes, they devoted their lives; and each commander, departing to his station, maintained all night a vigilant and anxious watch on the rampart. The emperor, and some faithful companions, entered the dome of St. Sophia, which in a few hours was to be converted into a mosch; and devoutly received, with tears and prayers, the sacrament of the holy communion. He reposed some moments in the palace,

⁵⁴ Phranza quarrel, with these Moslem acclamations, not for the name of God, but for that of the prophet—the pious zeal of Voltane is excessive, and even indiculous.

VOL. XII.

⁵⁵ I am afraid that this discourse was composed by Phranza himself, and it smells so grossly of the aermon and the convent, that I almost doubt whether it was pronounced by Constantine. Lacenardus assigns him another speech, in which he addresses himself more respectfully to the Latin auxiliaries.

which resounded with cries and lamentations; solicited the pardon of all whom he might have injured 36; and mounted on horseback to visit the guards, and explore the motions of the enemy. The distress and fall of the last Constantine are more glorious than the long prosperity of the Byzantine Cæsars.

The general assault, May 29.

In the confusion of darkness an assailant may sometimes succeed; but in this great and general attack, the military judgment and astrological knowledge of Mahomet advised him to expect the morning, the memorable twenty-ninth of May, in the fourteen hundred and fifty-third year of the Christian æra. The preceding night had been strenuously employed: the troops, the cannon, and the fascines, were advanced to the edge of the ditch, which in many parts presented a smooth and level passage to the breach; and his fourscore gallies almost touched, with the prows and their scaling ladders, the less defensible walls of the harbour. Under pain of death, silence was enjoined: but the physical laws of motion and sound are not obedient to discipline or fear; each individual might suppress his voice and measure his footsteps; but the march and labour of thousands must inevitably produce a strange confusion of dissonant clamours, which reached the ears of the watchmen of the towers. At day-break, without the customary signal of the morning gun, the Turks assaulted the city by sea and land; and the similitude of a twined or twisted CHAP. thread has been applied to the closeness and continuity of their line of attack 57. The foremost ranks consisted of the refuse of the host, a voluntary crowd who fought without order or command: of the feebleness of age or childhood, of peasants and vagrants, and of all who had joined the camp in the blind hope of plunder and martyrdom. The common impulse drove them onwards to the wall: the most audacious to climb were instantly precipitated; and not a dart, not a bullet, of the Christians, was idly wasted on the accumulated throng. strength and ammunition were exhausted in this laborious defence: the ditch was filled with the bodies of the slain: they supported the footsteps of their companions; and of this devoted vanguard, the death was more serviceable than the life. Under their respective bashaws and sanjaks, the troops of Anatolia and Romania were successively led to the charge: their progress was various and doubtful: but, after a conflict of two hours, the Greeks still maintained, and improved, their advantage; and the voice of the emperor was heard, encouraging his soldiers to atchieve, by a last effort, the deliverance of their country. In that fatal moment, the Janizaries arose, fresh, vigorous, and invincible. The sultan himself on horseback, with an iron mace in his hand, was the spectator and judge of their valour: he was surrounded by ten thousand of his domestic ^{* 7} Bealdes the 10,000 guards, and the sailors and the marines, Ducas numbers in this general assault 250,000 Turks, both horse and not.

⁵⁰ This abasement, which devotion has sometimes extorted from dying princes, is an improvement of the gospel doctrine of the forgiveness of injuries: it is more easy to forgive 490 times, that once to ask pardon of an inferior.

CHAP LXVIII

troops, whom he reserved for the decisive occasions; and the tide of battle was directed and impelled by his voice and eve. His numerous ministers of justice were posted behind the line, to urge, to restrain, and to punish; and if danger was in the front, shame and inevitable death were in the rear, of the fugitives. The cries of fear and of pain were drowned in the martial music of drums, trumpets, and attaballs; and experience has proved, that the mechanical operation of sounds, by quickening the circulation of the blood and spirits, will act on the human machine more forcibly than the eloquence of reason and honour. From the lines, the gallies. and the bridge, the Ottoman artillery thundered on all sides; and the camp and city, the Greeks and the Turks, were involved in a cloud of smoke. which could only be dispelled by the final deliverance or destruction of the Roman empire. The single combats of the heroes of history or fable, amuse our fancy and engage our affections : the skilful evolutions of war may inform the mind, and improve a necessary, though pernicious, science. But in the uniform and odious pictures of a general assault, all is blood, and horror, and confusion; nor shall I strive, at the distance of three centuries and a thousand miles, to delineate a scene of which there could be no spectators, and of which the actors themselves were incapable of forming any just or adequate idea. \^

The immediate loss of Constantinople may be ascribed to the bullet, or arrow, which pierced the gauntlet of John Justiniani. The sight of his blood, and the exquisite pain, appalled the cou- CHAP. rage of the chief, whose arms and counsels were the firmest rampart of the city. As he withdrew from his station in quest of a surgeon, his flight was perceived and stopped by the indefatigable "Your wound," exclaimed Palæologus, "is slight; the danger is pressing; your "presence is necessary; and whither will you "retire?" "I will retire," said the trembling Genoese, "by the same road which God has "opened to the Turks;" and at these words he hastily passed through one of the breaches of the inner wall. By this pusillanimous act, he stained the honours of a military life; and the few days which he survived in Galata, or the isle of Chios, were embittered by his own and the public reproach 5. His example was imitated by the greatest part of the Latin auxiliaries, and the defence began to slacken when the attack was pressed with redoubled vigour. The number of the Ottomans was fifty, perhaps an hundred, times superior to that of the Christians; the double walls were reduced by the cannon to an heap of ruins: in a circuit of several miles, some places must be found more easy of access, or more feebly guarded; and if the besiegers could penetrate in a single point, the whole city was irrecoverably lost. The first who deserved the 58 In the severe censure of the flight of Justiniani, Phranza expresses his own feelings and those of the public. For some , private reasons, he is treated with more lently and respect by Ducas; but the words of Leonardus Chiensis express his strong and recent indignation, glorize salutis surque oblitus. In the whole ceries of their Eastern policy, his countrymen, the Genoese, were always suspected, and often guilty.

sultan's reward was Hassan the Janizary, of gigantic stature and strength. With his scymetar in one hand and his buckler in the other, he ascended the outward fortification: of the thirty Janizaries, who were emulous of his valour, eighteen perished in the bold adventure. Hassan and his twelve companions had reached the summit; the giant was precipitated from the rampart; he rose on one knee, and was again oppressed by a shower of darts and stones. But his success had proved that the atchievement was possible: the walls and towers were instantly covered with a swarm of Turks: and the Greeks, now driven from the vantage ground, were overwhelmed by increasing multitudes. Amidst these multitudes, the emperor", who accomplished all the duties of a general and a soldier, was long seen, and finally The nobles, who fought round his person, sustained, till their last breath, the honourable names of Palæologus and Cantacuzene: his mournful exclamation was heard, "Cannot there be found "a Christian to cut off my head "?" and his last fear was that of falling alive into the hands of ⁵⁹ Ducas I ills him with two blows of Taikish soldiers. Chalcondyles wounds him in the shoulder, and then tramples him in the pair. The graef of Phranza, carrying him among the enemy, e-capes from the piecise image of his death; but we may, without flattery, apply these noble lines of Dayden:

As to Schastian, let them search the field; And where they find a mountain of the slain, Send one to climb, and looking down beneath, There they will find him at his manly length, With his face up to heaven, in that red monument Which his good sword had digged.

65 Spondanus (A. D. 1453, No 10.1, who has hopes of his salvation, wishes to absolve this demand from the guilt of suicide.

the infidels in. The prudent despair of Constantine cast away the purple: amidst the tumult he fell by an unknown hand, and his body was buried under a mountain of the slain. After his death, Death of resistance and order were no more; the Greeks fled the comperer to contowards the city; and many were pressed and stanting stifled in the narrow pass of the gate of St. Roma- au-The victorious Turks rushed through the breaches of the inner wall; and as they advanced into the streets, they were soon joined by their brethren, who had forced the gate Phenar on the side of the harbour". In the first heat of the pursuit, about two thousand Christians were put to the sword; but avarice soon prevailed over cruelty; and the victors acknowledged, that they should immediately have given quarter if the valour of the emperor and his chosen bands had not prepared them for a similar opposition in every part of the capital. It was thus, after a siege of fifty-three to control days, that Constantinople, which had defied the copie power of Chosroes, the Chagan, and the caliphs, was irretrievably subdued by the arms of Mahomet the second. Her empire only had been subverted by the Latins: her religion was trampled in the dust by the Moslem conquerors ".

61 Leonardus Chiensis very properly observes, that the Turks, had they known the emperor, would have laboured to save and secure a captive so acceptable to the sultan

62 Cantemir, p 96. The Christian ships in the mouth of the harbour, had flanked and retarded this naval attack

63 Chalcondyles most absurdly supposes, that Constantinople was sacked by the Asiatics in resenge for the ancient calamities of ' Troy; and the grammarians of the xith century are happy to melt down the uncouth appellation of Turks, into the more classic name of Tenera.

CHAP. LXVIII. The Turks enter and pillage Constantis nople. The tidings of misfortune fly with a rapid wing; vet such was the extent of Constantinople, that the more distant quarters might prolong, some moments, the happy ignorance of their ruin 64. But in the general consternation, in the feelings of selfish or social auxiety, in the tumult and thunder of the assault, a sleepless night and morning must have elapsed: nor can I believe that many Grecian ladies were awakened by the Janizaries from a sound and tranquil slumber. On the assurance of the public calamity, the houses and convents were instantly deserted; and the trembling inhabitants flocked together in the streets, like au herd of timid animals: as if accumulated weakness could be productive of strength, or in the vain hope, that amid the crowd each individual might be safe and invisible. From every part of the capital, they flowed into the church of St. Sophia: in the space of an hour, the sanctuary, the choir, the nave, the upper and lower galleries, were filled with the multitudes of fathers and husbands, of women and children, of priests, monks, and religious virgins: the doors were barred on the inside. and they sought protection from the sacred dome, which they had so lately abhorred as a profane and polluted edifice. Their confidence was founded on the prophecy of an enthusiast or impostor; that one day the Turks would enter Con-

⁶³ When Cyrus surprised Babylon during the celebration of a festival, so vast was the city, and so careless were the inhabitants, that much time elapsed before the distant quarters knew that they were captives (Herodotus, I. i. c. 191.), and Usher (Annal. p. 78 , who has quoted from the prophet Jeremuch a passage of skir...er import.

stantinople, and pursue the Romans as far as the column of Constantine in the square before St. Sophia: but that this would be the term of their calamities: that an angel would descend from beaven, with a sword in his hand, and would deliver the empire, with that celestial weapon, to a poor man seated at the foot of the column. " Take this sword," would be say, "and avenge " the people of the Lord." At these animating words, the Turks would instantly fly, and the victorious Romans would drive them from the West, and from all Anatolia, as far as the frontiers of Persia. It is on this occasion, that Ducas. with some fancy and much truth, upbraids the discord and obstinacy of the Greeks. " Had that " angel appeared," exclaims the historian, " had "he offered to exterminate your foes if you "would consent to the union of the church. " even then, in that fatal moment, you would " have rejected your safety, or have deceived " vour God"."

While they expected the descent of the tardy $C_{0at,m}$. angel, the doors were broken with axes; and as there the Turks encountered no resistance, their bloodless hands were employed in selecting and securing the multitude of their prisoners. Youth, beauty, and the appearance of wealth, attracted their choice; and the right of property was de-

⁶³ This lively description is extracted from Ducas is 30 (who two years afterwards was sent ambassador from the prince or Leshos to the sultan (c. 44). Till Leshos was subdued in 140; (Phranza, I. ni. c. 27), that island must have been full of the fugitives of Constantinople, who delighted to repeat, perhaps to adorn. i's de of their misers cided among themselves by a prior seizure, by personal strength, and by the authority of command. In the space of an hour, the male captives were bound with cords, the females with their The senators were linked with veils and girdles. their slaves; the prelates, with the porters, of the church; and young men of a plebeian class, with noble maids, whose faces had been invisible to the sun and their nearest kindred. In this common captivity, the ranks of society were confounded; the ties of nature, were cut asunder; and the inexorable soldier was earcless of the father's groans, the tears of the mother, and the lamentations of the children. The loudest in their wailings were the nuns, who were torn from the altar with naked bosoms, outstretched hands, and dishevelled hair: and we should piously believe that few could be tempted to prefer the vigils of the haram to those of the monastery. Of these unfortunate Greeks, of these domestic animals, whole strings were rudely driven through the streets; and as the conquerors were eager to return for more prey, their trembling pace was ouickened with menaces and blows. At the same hour, a similar rapine was exercised in all the churches and monasteries, in all the palaces and babitations of the capital; nor could any palace, however sacred or sequestered, protect the persons or the property of the Greeks. Above sixty thousand of this devoted people were transported from the city to the camp and fleet; exchanged or sold according to the caprice or interest of their masters, and dispersed in remote servitude through the provinces of the Ottoman empire. Among these we may notice some remarkable The historian Phranza, first chamcharacters. berlain and principal secretary, was involved with his family in the common lot. After suffering four months the hardships of slavery, he recovered his freedom: in the ensuing winter he ventured to Adrianople, and ransomed his wife from the mir bushi or master of the horse; but his two children, in the flower of youth and beauty, had been seized for the use of Mahomet himself. The daughter of Phranza died in the seraglio, perhaps a virgin; his son, in the fifteenth year of his age, preferred death to infamy, and was stabbed by the hand of the royal lover66. A deed thus inhuman, cannot surely be expiated by the taste and liberality with which he released a Greeian matron and her two daughters, on receiving a Latin ode from Philelphus, who had chosen a wife in that noble family". The pride or crucky of Mahomet would have been most sensibly gratified by the capture of a Roman legate; but the dexterity of cardinal Isidore eluded the search, and he escaped from Galata in a plebeian habit.

CHAP.

to See Phranza, I. in a 20, 21. The expressions are posture: Ameras sud manu jugulavit ..., colebat cann eo impiter at nefane abuti. Me miscrum et infelicim. Yet he could only learn from report, the bloody or impure scenes that were acted in the dark recesses of the serazho.

to See Triabo (hi (tomevi, P. i. p. 290) and Lancelot (Meie, de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom, x. p. 718. — I should be currous to-learn how he could praise the public enemy, whom he so often reviles as the most corrupt and inhuman of trants.

on The Commentaries of Prus II, suppose that he craftily placed his cardinal's hat on the head of a corpse which was out oil and es-

The chain and entrance of the outward harbour was still occupied by the Italian ships of merchandise and war. They had signalised their valour in the siege; they embraced the moment of retreat, while the Turkish mariners were dissipated in the pillage of the city. When they hoisted sail, the beach was covered with a suppliant and lamentable crowd: but the means of transportation were scanty: the Venetians and Genoese selected their countrymen; and notwithstanding the fairest promises of the sultan, the inhabitants of Galata evacuated their houses, and embarked with their most precious effects.

Amount of the spoil. In the fall and the sack of great cities, an historian is condemned to repeat the tale of uniform calamity: the same effects must be produced by the same passions; and when those passions may be indulged without controul, small, alas! is the difference between civilized and savage man. Amidst the vague exclamations of bigotry and hatred, the Turks are not accused of a wanton or immoderate effusion of Christian blood: but according to their maxims (the maxims of antiquity), the lives of the vanquished were forfeited; and the legitimate reward of the conqueror was derived from the service, the sale, or the ransom, of his captives of both sexes. The posed in triumph, while the legate himself was bought and dehiered as a captive of no value. The great Belgic Chronicle adorns his escape with new adventures, which he suppressed (says Spondanus, A. D. 1453, No 1.5.) in his own letters, lest he should lose the merit and reward of suffering for Christ.

(b) Bushequius' expatiates with pleasure and applause on the rights of war, and the use of slavery, among the ancients and the Turks (de Legat, Turcies, epist. iii, p. 161.).

wealth of Constantinople had been granted by the sultan to his victorious troops; and the rapine of an hour is more productive than the industry of years. But as no regular division was attempted of the spoil, the respective shares were not determined by merit; and the rewards of valour were stolen away by the followers of the camp, who had declined the toil and danger of the battle. The narrative of their depredations could not afford either amusement or instruction: the total amount, in the last poverty of the empire, has been valued at four millions of ducats 70: and of this sum a small part was the property of the Venetians, the Genoese, the Florentines, and the merchants of Ancona. Of these foreigners, the stock was improved in quick and perpetual circulation: but the riches of the Greeks were displayed in the idle ostentation of palaces and wardrobes, or deeply buried in treasures of ingots and old coin, lest it should be demanded at their hands for the defence of their country. The profanation and plunder of the monasteries and churches, excited the most tragic complaints. The dome of St. Sophia itself, the earthly heaven, the second firmament, the vehicle of the cherubim, the throne of the glory of God 71, was despoiled of the oblations of ages; and the gold and silver, the ⁷⁰ This sum is specified in a marginal note of Leunclavius (Chalcondyles, I viii p. 211.), but in the distribution to Venice, Genoa, Florence, and Ancona, of 50, 20, 20, and 15,000 ducats. I suspect that a figure has been dropt. Even with the restitution, the forciga property would scarcely exceed one-fourth.

²¹ See the enthusiastic praises and laniontations of Phranza el ai pearls and jewels, the vases and sacerdotal ornaments, were most wickedly converted to the service of mankind. After the divine images had been stripped of all that could be valuable to a profane eye, the canvas, or the wood, was torn, or broken, or burnt, or trod under foot, or applied, in the stables or the kitchen, to the vilest uses. example of sacrilege was imitated, however. from the Latin conquerors of Constantinople; and the treatment which Christ, the Virgin, and the saints, had sustained from the guilty Catholic, might be inflicted by the zealous Musulman on the monuments of idolatry. Perhaps, instead of joining the public clamour, a philosopher will observe. that in the decline of the arts, the workmanship could not be more valuable than the work, and that a fresh supply of visions and miracles would speedily be renewed by the craft of the priest and the credulity of the people. He will more scriously deplore the loss of the Byzantine libraries, which were destroyed or scattered in the general confusion: one hundred and twenty thousand manuscripts are said to have disappeared 72: ten volumes might be purchased for a single ducat: and the same ignominious price, too high perhaps for a shelf of theology, included the whole works of Aristotle and Homer, the noblest productions of the science and literature of ancient Greece. We may reflect with pleasure, that an inestimable portion of our classic treasures was safely deposited in Italy; and that the mechanics of a German town had invented an art which derides the havor of time and barbarism.

CHAP LXVIII.

^{}See Ducas (c. 43.) and an epistle, July 15th, 1453, from Latin-Quirinus to pope Nicholas V. (Hody de Græcis, p. 192 from 5 MS in the Cotton library).

to palmer,

From the first hour 73 of the memorable twenty- Melanut ninth of May, disorder and rapine prevailed in the cot, Constantinople, till the eighth hour of the same Strophic day; when the sultan himself passed in triumph & through the gate of St. Romanus. He was attended by his vizirs, bashaws, and guards, each of whom (says a Byzantine historian) was robust as Hercules, dexterous as Apollo, and equal in battle to any ten of the race of ordinary mortals. The conqueror " gazed with satisfaction and wonder on the strange through splendid appearance of the domes and palaces, so dissimilar from the style of Oriental architecture. In the hippodrome, or atmeidan, his eve was attracted by the twisted column of the three serpents; and, as a trial of his strength, he shattered with his iron mace or battle-axe the under jaw of one of these monsters 75, which in the eyes of the Turks were the idols or talismans of the city. At the principal door of St. Sophia, he alighted from his horse. and entered the dome; and such was his jealous regard for that monument of his glory, that on ⁷³ The Julian Calendar, which reckons the days and hours from midnight, was used at Constantinople. But Ducas seems to understand the natural hours from sun-rise

⁷⁴ See the Turkish Annals, p. 329 and the Pandects of Levis-Clavms, 9, 448

¹⁵ I have had occasion (vol. in. p. 22), to mention tin even ... relic of Greenan arrigants observing a zealous Musulman in the act of breaking the marble pavement, he admonished him with his seymetar, that, if the spoil and captives were granted to the soldiers, the public and private buildings had been reserved for the prince. By his command the metropolis of the Eastern church was transformed into a mosch; the rich and portable instruments of superstition had been removed; the crosses were thrown down; and the walls, which were covered with images and mosaics, were washed and purified, and restored to a state of naked simplicity. On the same day, or on the ensuing Friday, the muezin, or crier, ascended the most lofty turret, and proclaimed the czan, or public invitation in the name of God and his prophet; the imam preached; and Mahomet the second performed the numaz of prayer and thanksgiving on the great altar, where the Christian mysteries had so lately been celebrated before the last of the Cæsars 76. From St. Sophia he proceeded to the august, but desolate, mansion of an hundred successors of the great Constantine, but which in a few hours had been stripped of the pomp of royalty. A melancholy reflection on the vicissitudes of human greatness. forced itself on his mind; and he repeated an & gant distich of Persian poetry: "The spider l. " wove his web in the Imperial palace; and the ⁷⁵ We are obliged to Cantemir (p. 102.) for the Turkish account of the conversion of St. Sophis, so bitterly deplored by Phranza and Duce. It is amusing enough to observe, in what opposite lights the convergence appears to a Musulman and a Christian eye.

" owl hath sung her watch-song on the towers " of Afrasiab "."

CHAP LXVIII

the Greeks

Yet his mind was not satisfied, nor did the His behavictory seem complete, till he was informed of the fate of Constantine, whether he had escaped, or been made prisoner, or had fallen in the battle. Two Janizaries claimed the honour and reward of his death: the body, under an heap of slain. was discovered by the golden eagles embroidered on his shoes; the Greeks acknowledged with tears the head of their late emperor; and, after exposing the bloody trophy', Mahomet bestowed on his rival the honours of a decent funeral. After his decease, Lucas Notaras, great duke", and first minister of the empire, was the most important prisoner. When he offered his person and his treasures at the foot of the throne, "And "why," said the indignant sultan, "did you not " employ these treasures in the defence of your " prince and country?" "They were yours," answered the slave; "God had reserved them for "your hands." "If he reserved them for me." replied the despot, "how have you presumed to ⁷⁷ This distich, which Cantenur gives in the original, decay s new beauties from the application. It was thus that Scipio repeated another sack of Carthage, the famous prophecy of Homer. The same gener ous feeling carried the mind of the conqueror to the past or the future 701 cannot believe with Ducas(see Spondam) , Δ D $\pm 0.78 \pm 0.08$

that Maliomet sent round Persia, Arabia, &c. the head of the Gir. k emperor hely ould surely content himself with a trophy less inhuman ⁷⁹ Phranz e was the personal enemy of the great duly conformald time, or death, or his own retical to a mona bry, coton a feeling of sympathy or forgiveness. Ducas is inclined to praise and pit, the martyr. Chalcondyles is neuter, but we are indebted to him for the hint of the Greek conspiracy.

CHAP

" with-hold them so long by a fruitless and LXVIII "fatal resistance?" The great duke alleged the obstinacy of the strangers, and some secret encouragement from the Turkish vizir; and from this perilous interview, he was at length dismissed with the assurance of pardon and protection. homet condescended to visit his wife, a venerable princess oppressed with sickness and grief; and his consolation for her misfortunes was in the most tender strain of humanity and filial reverence. A similar elemency was extended to the principal officers of state, of whom several were ransomed at his expence; and during some days he declared himself the friend and father of the vanquished people. But the scene was soon changed; and before his departure, the hippodrome streamed with the blood of his noblest captives. fidious cruelty is execrated by the Christians: they adorn with the colours of heroic martyrdom the execution of the great duke and his two sons; and his death is ascribed to the generous refusal of delivering his children to the tyrant's lust. Yet a Byzantine historian has dropt an unguarded word of conspiracy, deliverance, and Italian succour: such treason may be glorious; but the rebel who bravely ventures, has justly forfeited, his life; nor should we blame a conqueror for destroying the enemies whom he can no longer trust. On the eighteenth of June, the victorious sultan returned to Adrianople; and smiled at the base and hollow embassies of the Christian princes, who viewed their approaching ruin in the fall of the Eastern empire.

CHAP LXVIII

ples and

Constantinople had been left naked and deso- Fe re-peolate, without a prince or a people. But she could not be despoiled of the incomparable situation which Contantmarks her for the metropolis of a great empire; and the genius of the place will ever triumph over the accidents of time and fortune. Boursa and Adrianople, the ancient seats of the Ottomans, sunk into provincial towns; and Mahomet the second established his own residence, and that of his successors, on the same commanding spot which had been chosen by Constantine ". The fortifications of Galata, which might afford a shelter to the Latins, were prudently destroyed; but the damage of the Turkish cannon was soon repaired; and before the month of August, great quantities of lime had been burnt for the restoration of the walls of the capital. As the entire property of the soil and buildings, whether public or private, or profane or sacred, was now transferred to the conqueror, he first separated a space of eight furlongs from the point of the triangle for the establishment of his seraglio or palace. It is here, in the bosom of luxury, that the Grand Signor (as he has been emphatically named by the ⁸⁰ For the restitution of Constantinople and the Tuil ish foundar' tions, see Cantenur op 102-109.), Ducas (c. 42.), with Therenot, Tournefort, and the jest of our modern travellers. From a gigantic picture of the greatness, population, &c of Constantinople and the Ottoman empire (Abrégé de l'Histoire Ottomane, tom 1 p. 10-21), we may learn, that in the year 1580, the Mo-lenis were less numerous in the capital than the Christians, or even the Jew-Italians) appears to reign over Europe and Asia; but his person on the shores of the Bosphorus may not always be secure from the insults of an hostile navy. In the new character of a mosch, the cathedral of St. Sophia was endowed with an ample revenue, crowned with lofty minarets, and surrounded with groves and fountains, for the devotion and refreshment of the Moslems. The same model was imitated in the jumi or royal mosels: and the first of these was built, by Mahomet himself, on the ruins of the church of the holy apostles, and the tombs of the Greek emperors. On the third day after the conquest, the grave of Abu Ayub or Job, who had fallen in the first siege of the Arabs, was revealed in a vision: and it is before the sepulchre of the martyr, that the new sultans are girded with the sword of empire ". Constantinople no longer appertains to the Roman historian; nor shall I enumerate the civil and religious edifices that were profaned or erected by its Turkish masters: the population was speedily renewed; and before the end of September, five thousand families of Anatolia and Romania had obeyed the royal mandate, which enjoined them, under pain of death, to occupy their new habitations in the capital. The throne of Mahomet was guarded by the numbers and fidelity of his Moslem subjects: but his rational policy aspired to collect the remnant of the Greeks; and they returned in crowds, as soon as they were assured of their lives. their liberties, and the free exercise of their reli-In the election and investiture of a patriarch, the ceremonial of the Byzantine court was revived and imitated. With a mixture of satisfaction and horror, they beheld the sultan on his throne; who delivered into the hands of Gennadius the crosier or pastoral staff, the symbol of his ecclesiastical office; who conducted the patriarch to the gate of the scraglio, presented him with an horse richly caparisoned, and directed the vizirs and bashaws to lead him to the palace which had been allotted for his residence. The churches of Constantinople were shared between the two religions: their limits were marked; and, till it was infringed by Selim, the grandson of Mahomet, the Greeks" enjoyed above sixty years the benefit of this equal partition. Encouraged by the ministers of the divan, who wished to clude the fanaticism of the sultan, the Christian advocates presumed nople, inserted in the Turco-Gracia of Crusius (I v. p. 100-184.) But the most patient reader will not believe that Mahoinet adopted the Catholic form, "Sancta Trinitas quæ nithi donavit to allege that this division had been an act, not of generosity, but of justice; not a concession, but a

⁶⁾ The Turk', or sepulchral monument of Abu Ayub, is described and engraved in the Tablean General de l'Empire Ottoman (Paris, 1787, in large folio), a work of less use, perhaps, than magnificence (toin, 1-p-305, 306).

82 Phranza (1 m. c. 19) relates the ceremony, which has possibly been adorned in the Greek reports to each other, and to the Latin-The fact is continued by Emanuel Malaxus, who wrote, in vulgar Greek, the History of the Patriarchs after the taking of Constanti-[&]quot;imperium te in patriarcham novæ Romæ deligit".

6: From the Turco-Græcia of Crusius, &c. Spondanus (A. D. 1453, No. 21-1458, No. 16.) describes the slavery and domestic quartels of the Greek church. The patriarch who succeeded Gennadius, threw himself in despair into a well.

compact: and that if one half of the city had been taken by storm, the other moiety had surrendered on the faith of a sacred capitulation. The original grant had indeed been consumed by fire; but the loss was supplied by the testimony of three aged Janizaries who remembered the transaction: and their venal oaths are of more weight in the opinion of Cantemir, than the positive and unanimous consent of the history of the times.

E ametion of the Imperial families of Connemis and Palavologu The remaining fragments of the Greek kingdom in Europe and Asia I shall abandon to the Turkish arms; but the final extinction of the two last dynastics which have reigned in Constantinople, should terminate the decline and fall of the Roman Empire in the East. The despots of the Morea, Demetrius and Thomas to the two surviving brothers of the name of Paleologus, ⁶³ Cantemir (p. 101—105.) missts on the unanimous consent of the Turkish historians, ancient as well as modern, and argues, that they would not have violated the frith to diminish their national glory, since it is estecuted more honourable to take a city by force than by composition. But, 1. I doubt this consent, since he quotes no particular historian, and the Turkish Annals of Leunchavius albrin, without exception, that Mahomet took Constantinople pre vine (p. 329.). ⁶² The same argument may be turned in favour of the Greeks of the times, who would not have forgotten this honourable and salutary treaty. Veltaire, as usual, prefers the Turks to the Christians.

65 For the genealogy and fall of the Comnent of Trebizond, see Ducange (Fam. Byzant p. 105), for the last Paleologi, the same accurate antiquarian (p. 244, 247, 248.). The Paleologi of Montferrat were not extinct till the next century; but they had forgotten their Greek origin and kindred.

to In the worthless story of the disputes and misfortunes of the two brothers, Phranza (l. m. c. 21—30) is too partial on the side of Thomas, Ducas (c. 44, 45.) is too brief, and Chalcondyle-(l. vm, ix, x.) too diffuse and digressive.

were astonished by the death of the emperor Constantine, and the ruin of the monarchy. Hopeless of defence, they prepared, with the noble Greeks who adhered to their fortune, to seek a refuge in Italy, beyond the reach of the Ottoman Their first apprehensions were dispelled by the victorious sultan, who contented himself with a tribute of twelve thousand ducats: and while his ambition explored the continent and the islands in search of prey, he indulged the Morea in a respite of seven years. But this respite was a · period of grief, discord, and misery. The hewamilion, the rampart of the Isthmus, so often raised and so often subverted, could not long be defended by three hundred Italian archers: the keys of Corinth were seized by the Turks: they returned from their summer excursions with a train of captives and spoil; and the complaints of the injured Greeks were heard with indifference and disdain. The Albanians, a vagrant tribe of shepherds and robbers, filled the peninsula with rapine and murder: the two despots implored the dangerous and humiliating aid of a neighbouring bashaw; and when he had quelled the revolt, his lessons inculcated the rule of their future conduct. Neither the ties of blood, nor the oaths which they repeatedly pledged in the communion and before the altar, nor the stronger pressure of necessity, could reconcile or suspend their domestic They ravaged each other's patrimony . with fire and sword: the alms and succours of the West were consumed in civil hostility; and their power was only exerted in savage and arbitrary.

CHAP. LXVIII.

The distress and revenge of the executions. weaker rival invoked their supreme lord; and, in Loss of the the season of maturity and revenge, Mahomet de-A.D 1400. clared himself the friend of Demetrius, and marched into the Morea with an irresistible force. When he had taken possession of Sparta, "You are too " weak," said the sultan, " to control this turbu-"lent province: I will take your daughter to my " bed; and you shall pass the remainder of your "life in security and honour." Demetrius sighed and obeyed; surrendered his daughter and his castles; followed to Adrianople his sovereign and . son: and received for his own maintenance, and that of his followers, a city in Thrace, and the adiacent isles of Imbros, Lemnos, and Samothrace. He was joined the next year by a companion of misfortune, the last of the COMNENIAN race, who, after the taking of Constantinople by the Latins, had founded a new empire on the coast of the Black Sea 14. In the progress of his Anatolian conquests, Mahomet invested with a fleet and army the capital of David, who presumed to style himself emperor of Trebizond"; and the negociation was comprized in a short and peremptory question, "Will you secure your life as Though Tournefort (tom, m. lettre xvn. p. 179) spraks of Trebizond as mal peuplée, Peyssonel, the latest and most accurate observer, can find 100,000 inhabitants (Commerce de la Mer None, toni. ii. p. 72. and for the province, p. 53-400). Its properity and trade are perpetually disturbed by the factious quariely of two odas of Janizaries, in one of which 30,000 Lazi are commonly enrolled (Memoires de Tott, tom. iii. p. 16, 17.).

⁵⁷ See the loss or conquest of Trebizond in Chalcondyles (1) ix. p. 303---260.), Ducas (c. 45), Phranza d in. c 27.), and Cantenur (p. 107.).

" and treasures by resigning your kingdom? or " had you rather forfeit your kingdom, your "treasures, and your life?" The feeble Comnenus was subdued by his own fears, and the example of a Musulman neighbour, the prince of Sinope", who, on a similar summons, had vielded a fortified city with four hundred cannon and ten or twelve thousand soldiers. The capi- of Trebitulation of Trebizond was faithfully performed; AD 1401. and the emperor, with his family, was transported to a castle in Romania; but on a slight suspicion of corresponding with the Persian king, David, and the whole Comnenian race, were sacrificed to the jealousy or avarice of the conqueror. Nor could the name of father long protect the unfortunate Demetrius from exile and confiscation; his abject submission moved the pity and contempt of the sultan; his followers were transplanted to Constantinople; and his poverty was alleviated by a pension of fifty thousand aspers, till a monastic habit and a tardy death released Palæologus from an earthly master. It is not easy to pronounce whether the servitude of Demetrius, or the exile of his brother Thomas ", be the most inglorious. On the conquest of the Morea, the despot escaped to 89 Ismael Beg, Prince of Smope or Smople, was possessed (chiefly from his copper nimes) of a revenue of 200,000 ducats (Chalcond 1 ix p. 258, 259.). Peyssonnel Commerce de la Mer Noire, tom, it p. 100.) ascribes to the modern city 60,000 inhabitants. This account seems enormous, yet it is by trading with a people that we become acquainted with their wealth and numbers 20 Spondarus (from Gobelin Comment, Pu H. L. v.) relates the arrival and reception of the despot Thomas at Rome (A D 1401. Nº. 3)

CHAP LXVIII,

Corfu, and from thence to Italy, with some naked adherents: his name, his sufferings, and the head of the apostle St. Andrew, entitled him to the hospitality of the Vatican; and his misery was prolonged by a pension of six thousand dueats from the pope and cardinals. His two sons, Andrew and Manuel, were educated in Italy; but the eldest, contemptible to his enemies and burthensome to his friends, was degraded by the baseness of his life and marriage. A title was his sole inheritance; and that inheritance he successively sold to the kings of France and Arragon 91. During this transient prosperity, Charles the eighth was ambitious of joining the empire of the East with the kingdom of Naples: in a public festival, he assumed the appellation and the purple of Augustus: the Greeks rejoiced, and the Ottoman already trembled, at the approach of the French chivalry 9-. Manuel Palaeologus, the second son, was tempted to revisit his native country: his return might be grateful, and could not be dangerous, to the

9) By an act dated A. D. 1404. Sept 6, and lately transmitted from the archives of the Capitol to the royal library of Paris, the despot Andrew Palæologus, reserving the Morea, and stipulating some private advantages, conveys to Charles VIII. King of France, the empires of Constantinople and Trebizond (Spondanus, A. D. 1405, N 22). M. de Foncemagne (Mem. de PAcademie des Inscriptions, tom. Syn. p. 539—578.) has bestowed a dissertation on this national title, of which he had obtained a copy from Rome.

⁹² See Philippe de Comines (l. vii. c. 14), who reckons with pleasure the number of Greeks who were prepared to rise, 6p nules of an easy navigation, eighteen days journey from Valona to Constantinople, &c. On this occasion the Turkish empire was saved by the policy of Venice

Porte: he was maintained at Constantinople CHAP. in safety and case; and an honourable train of LXVIII Christians and Moslems attended him to the grave. If there be some animals of so generous a nature that they refuse to propagate in a domestic state, the last of the Imperial race must be ascribed to an inferior kind: he accepted from the sultan's liberality two beautiful females; and his surviving son was lost in the habit and religion of a Turkish slave.

The importance of Constantinople was felt and Guef and magnified in its loss: the pontificate of Nicholas Larope, the fifth, however peaceful and prosperous, was dishonoured by the fall of the Eastern empire; and the grief and terror of the Latins revived, or seemed to revive, the old enthusiasm of the crusades. In one of the most distant countries of the West, Philip duke of Burgundy entertained, at Lisle in Flanders, an assembly of his nobles; and the pompous pageants of the feast were skilfully adapted to their fancy and feelings". In the midst of the banquet, a gigantic Saracen entered the hall, leading a fictitious elephant, with a castle on his back: a matron in a mourning robe, the symbol of religion, was seen to issue from the castle; she deplored her oppression, and accused the slowness of her champions: the principal herald of the golden fleece advanced, bearing on his fist a live pheasant, which, according to the rites of chivalry, he presented to the duke. At this extraordinary summons, Philip, a wise and aged prince, engaged his person and powers in the holy war against the Turks: his example was imitated by the barons and knights of the assembly; they swore to God, the Virgin, the ladies, and the pheasant; and their particular vows were not less extravagant than the general sanction of their oath. But the performance was made to depend on some future and foreign contingency; and during twelve years, till the last hour of his life, the duke of Burgundy might be scrupulously, and perhaps sincerely, on the eye of his departure. Had every breast glowed with the same ardour; had the union of the Christians corresponded with their bravery; had every country, from Sweden" to Naples, supplied a just proportion of cavalry and infantry, of men and money, it is indeed probable that Constantinople would have been delivered, and that the Turks might have been chased beyond the Hellespont or the Euphrates. But the secretary of the emperor, who composed every epistle, and attended every meeting, Eneas Sylvius 9, a statesman and orator, describes from his own experience the CHAP repugnant state and spirit of Christendom. " It LAVIII "is a body," says he, "without an head; a re-" public without laws or magistrates. The pope " and the emperor may shine as lofty titles, as " splendid images; but they are unable to com-" mand, and none are willing to obey: every "state has a separate prince, and every prince " has a separate interest. What eloquence could " unite so many discordant and hostile powers " under the same standard? Could they be as-" sembled in arms, who would dare to assume " the office of general? What order could be " maintained?—what military discipline? " would undertake to feed such an enormous " multitude? Who would understand their " various languages, or direct their stranger and " incompatible manners? What mortal could re-" concile the English with the French, Genoa with " Arragon, the Germans with the natives of Hun-" gary and Bohemia? If a small number collisted " in the holy war, they must be overthrown by " the infidels; if many, by their own weight and " confusion." Yet the same Æneas, when he was raised to the papal throne, under the name of Pius the second, devoted his life to the prosecution of the Turkish war. In the council of Mantua he excited some sparks of a false or feeble enthusiasm; but when the pontiff appeared at Ancona, to embark in person with the troops, engagements vanished in excuses; a precise day was adjourned to an indefinite term; and his effective army consisted of some German pilgrims, whom he was obliged to disband with indulgences and alms. Regard-LXVIII. less of futurity, his successors and the powers of Italy were involved in the schemes of present and domestic ambition; and the distance or proximity of each object determined, in their eyes, its apparent magnitude. A more enlarged view of their interest would have taught them to maintain a defensive and naval war against the common enemy; and the support of Scanderbeg and his brave Albanians might have prevented the subsequent invasion of the kingdom of Naples. The siege and sack of Otranto by the Turks diffused a general consternation; and pope Sixtus was preparing to fly beyond the Alps, when the storm was instantly dispelled by the death of Mahomet the second, in the fifty-first year of his age.". His lofty genius aspired to the conquest of Italy: he was possessed of a strong city and a capacious harbour; and the same reign might have been decorated

 Λ D 11 + 3

⁹⁾ See the original feast in Olivier de la Marche (Memoires, P) c. 20, '30%, with the abstract and observations of M. de St. Palaye (Memorres sur la Chevalerie, tom a. P nr p 182-185.) The peacock and the pheasant were distinguished as royal birds

⁹³ It was round by an actual enumeration, that Sweden, Goth-land, and Finland, contained 1,800,000 lighting men, and consequently were far more populous than at present.

⁹⁵ In the year 1454, Spondanus has given from Æneas Sylvius, a view of the state of Europe, enriched with his own observations. That valuable annalist, and the Italian Muratori, will continue the series of events from the year 1453 to 1481, the end of Mahomer's life, and of this chapter.

CHAP

Death of Mahomet П A D 1481, May 3 or July 2

> 96 Besides the two annalists, the reader may consult Grannone (Istoria Civile, tom in. p. 449-455) for the Turkish invasion of the kingdom of Naples. For the reign and conquests of Mahomet 11. I have occasionally used the Memorie Istoriche de Monarchi Ottomanni di Giovanni Sagredo (Venezia, 1677, in 4to) peace and war, the Turks have ever engaged the attention of the republic of Venice. All her dispatches and archives were open to a procurator of St Mark, and Sagredo is not contemptible either in sense or style. Yet he too bitterly hates the infidels, he is ignorant of their language and manners; and his narrative, which allows only seventy pages to Mahomet II. (p (i)=140), becomes more copious and authentic cas he approaches the years 1640 and 1644, the term of the historic labour- of John Sagredo.

with the trophies of the NEW and the ANCIENT ROME 5.

CHAP LXVIII.

[95] A. I are now tal are an everlasting facewell of the Greek empire, I hall briefly mention the great collection of Bs a arge writer, whose name and termionics have been successively repeated in this work. The Greek piese of Aldus and the Italians were confined to the classes of a better age, and the first indeceditions of Procopia , Asorhia , Cedvenus, Zonatas, xe, were published by the learned dilig to of the Germans. The whole By antine series AXXVI Volume in Joho) has gradually issued A.D. 1048, &c. i from the royd pressor the Lorene, with some collateral and from Rome and Lepsic, but the Venetian edition (A.D. 1720), though cheaper and more copious, is not less interior in corrective silian in magnificence to that of Pairs. The ments of the Fiench editors are varion), but the value of Anna Common), Cumamis, Villehadonin, Ac is enhanced by the historical notes of Chailes du Freshe du Cange - His supplemental worls, the Greek Glo sary, the Constantinopolis Christiana, the Familiae Byzantinae, diffuse a steady light over the darkness of the Lower I input

CHAP. LXIX.

State of Rome from the Twelfth Century.— Temporal Dominion of the Popes.—Seditions of the City.—Political Heresy of Arnold of Brescia.
Restoration of the Republic.—The Senators.—
Pride of the Romans.—Their Wars.—They are deprived of the Election and Presence of the Popes, who retire to Avignon.—The Jubilee.—
Noble Families of Rome.—Feud of the Colonna and Ursini.

State and revolutions of Rome, A D 1100

In the first ages of the decline and fall of the Roman empire, our eye is invariably fixed on the royal city, which had given laws to the fairest portion of the globe. We contemplate her fortunes, at first with admiration, at length with pity, always with attention; and when that attention is diverted from the capital to the provinces. they are considered as so many branches which have been successively severed from the Imperial trunk. The foundation of a second Rome on the shores of the Bosphorus, has compelled the historian to follow the successors of Constantine; and our curiosity has been tempted to visit the most remote countries of Europe and Asia, to explore the causes and the authors of the long decay of the Byzantine monarchy. By the conquest of Justinian, we have been recalled to the banks of the Tyber, to the deliverance of the ancient metropolis; but that deliverance was a change, or perhaps an aggravation, of servitude. Rome had been already stripped of her trophies, her gods, CHAP and her Cæsars: nor was the Gothic dominion. more inglorious and oppressive than the tyranny of the Greeks. In the eighth century of the Christian æra, a religious quarrel, the worship of images, provoked the Romans to assert their independence: their bishop became the temporal, as well as the spiritual, father of a free people; and of the Western empire, which was restored by Charlemagne, the title and image still decorate the singular constitution of modern Germany. The name of Rome must yet command our involuntary respect: the climate (whatsoever may be its influence) was no longer the same ': the purity of blood had been contaminated through a thousand channels; but the venerable aspect of her ruins, and the memory of past greatness, rekindled a spark of the national character. The darkness of the middle ages exhibits some scenes not unworthy of our notice. Nor shall I dismiss the present work till I have reviewed the state and revolutions of the ROMAN CITY, which acquiesced under the absolute dominion of the popes, about the same time that Constantinople was enslaved by the Turkish arms.

VOL. XII.

^{.1} The albé Dubos, who, with less genius than his successor Montesquier, has a cried and magnified the influence of climate, objects to limited the degeneracy of the Romans and Batavians To the first of these examples he replies, 1. That the change is less teal than apparent, and that the modern Romans producitly contend in themselves the virtues of their ancestory. 2 That the air, the soil, and the climate of Rome-have suffered a great and visible alteration (Reflexions sur la Poesic et sur la Peinture, part in sect. 16.).

The French and German cusperots of Rome, A. D. 800 – 1100.

In the beginning of the twelfth century, the æra of the first crusade, Rome was revered by the Latins, as the metropolis of the world, as the throne of the pope and the emperor, who, from the eternal city, derived their title, their honours, and the right or exercise of temporal dominion. After so long an interruption, it may not be useless to repeat that the successors of Charlemague and the Othos were chosen beyond the Rhine in a national diet; but that these princes were content with the humble names of kings of Germany and Italy, till they had passed the Alps and the Apennine, to seek their Imperial crown on the banks of the Tyber : At some distance from the city, their approach was saluted by a long procession of the clergy and people with palms and crosses; and the terrific emblems of wolves and lions, of dragons and eagles, that floated in the military banners, represented the departed legions and cohorts of the republic. The royal oath to maintain the liberties of Rome was thrice reiterated, at the bridge, the gate, and on the stairs of the Vatican; and the distribution of a customary donative feebly imitated the magnificence of the first Casars. In the church of St. Peter, the coronation was

The reader has been so long absent from Rome, that I would advise him to recollect or review the xlixth chapter, in the exth volume of this History

The coronation of the German emperors at Rome, more especially in the 81th century, is best represented from the original monuments by Minatori (Antiquitat Italiæ medii Луг, tom r dissertat it p 00 %c i, and Cenni (Monument Domin Pontif tom it dissert p 201), the latter of whom I only know from the copromestract of Schmidt, Hist des Allemands, tom, it p 255—200) performed by his successor: the voice of God was confounded with that of the people; and the publie consent was declared in the acclamations of, " Long life and victory to our lord the pope! long " life and victory to our lord the emperor! long life " and victory to the Roman and Teutonic armies " The names of Casar and Augustus, the laws of Constantine and Justinian, the example of Charlemagne and Otho, established the supreme domimon of the emperors; their title and image was engraved on the papal coins ; and their jurisdiction was marked by the sword of justice, which they delivered to the præfect of the city. But every Roman prejudice was awakened by the name, the language, and the manners, of a Barbarian lord. The Casars of Saxony or Franconia were the chiefs of a feudal aristocracy; nor could they exercise the discipline of civil and military power, which alone secures the obediene of a distant people, impatient of servitude, though perhaps incapable of freedom. Once, and once only, in his life, each emperor, with an army of Teutonic vassals, descended from the Alps. have described the peaceful order of his entry and coronation; but that order was commonly dis-

^{*} Exercital Romano et Tentonico! The latter was both seen and left, but the former was no more than magni nomine umbre Muratori has given the series of the papal come. Antiquitation it dis xixin p 548—554.) He find only two more cally than the year, 800. Into are still extant from Leo III to Teo IX with addition of the regning emperor, none remain of Gregory VII or Urban II, but in those of Paschal II, he seems to have renounced this badge of dependence.

CHAP XIXI turbed by the clamour and sedition of the Romans. who encountered their sovereign as a foreign invader: his departure was always speedy, and often shameful: and, in the absence of a long reign, his authority was insulted, and his name was forgotten. The progress of independence in Germany and Italy undermined the foundations of the Imperial sovereignty, and the triumph of the popes was the deliverance of Rome.

Amhoray of the popes in Rome,

from at-

fection .

Of her two sovereigns, the emperor had precariously reigned by the right of conquest; but the authority of the pope was founded on the soft. though more solid, basis of opinion and habit. The removal of a foreign influence restored and endeared the shepherd to his flock. Instead of the arbitrary or venal nomination of a German court, the vicar of Christ was freely chosen by the college of cardinals, most of whom were either natives or inhabitants of the city. The applause of the magistrates and people confirmed his election; and the ecclesiastical power that was obeyed in Sweden and Britain, had been ultimately derived from the suffrage of the Romans. same suffrage gave a prince, as well as a pontiff, to the capital. It was universally believed, that Constantine had invested the popes with the temporal dominion of Rome; and the boldest civilians, the most profane sceptics, were satisfied with disputing the right of the emperor and the validity of his gift. The truth of the fact, the authenticity of his donation, was deeply rooted in the ignorance and tradition of four centuries: and the fabulous origin was lost in the real and permanent effects.

The name of Dominus or Lord was inscribed on the coin of the bishops: their title was acknowledged by acclamations and oaths of allegiance, right, and with the free, or reluctant, consent of the German Casars, they had long exercised a supreme or subordinate jurisdiction over the city and patrimony of St. Peter. The reign of the popes, which gratified the prejudices, was not incompatible with the liberties, of Rome; and a more critical inquiry would have revealed a still nobler source of their power; the gratitude of a nation, whom they had rescued from the heresy and oppression of the Greek tyrant. In an age of superstition, it should seem that the union of the royal and sacerdotal characters would mutually fortify each other; and that the keys of Paradise would be the surest pledge of earthly obedience. The sanctity of the office might indeed be degraded by the personal vices of the man. But the scandals of the tenth century were obliterated by the austere and more dangerous virtues of Gregory the seventh and his successors; and in the ambitious contests which they maintained for the rights of the church, their sufferings or their success must equally tend to increase the popular They sometimes wandered in poveneration. verty and exile, the victims of persecution; and the apostolic zeal with which they offered themselves to martyrdom, must engage the favour and sympathy of every Catholic breast. . sometimes, thundering from the Vatican, they created, judged, and deposed the kings of the world: nor could the proudest Roman be disgraced by submitting to a priest, whose feet were kissed, and whose stirrup was held, by the successors of Charlemagne". Even the temporal interest of the city should have protected in peace and honour the residence of the popes; from whence a vain and lazy people derived the greatest part of their subsistence and riches. The fixed revenue of the popes was probably impaired: many of the old patrimonial estates, both in Italy and the provinces, had been invaded by sacrilegious hands; nor could the loss be compensated by the claim, rather than the possession, of the more ample gifts of Pepin and his descendants. But the Vatican and Capitol were nourished by the incessant and increasing swarms of pilgrims and suppliants: the pale of Christianity was enlarged, and the pope and cardinals were overwhelmed by the judgment of ecclesiastical and secular causes. A new jurisprudence had established in the Latin church the right and practice of appeals; and from the North and West, the bishops and abbots were invited or summoned to solicit, to complain, to accuse, or to justify, before the threshold of benetits

CHAP.

⁶ Sec Ducange, Gloss mediae et infimæ Lamitat tom vi, p. 364, 365 STAFFA. This homoge was paid by lames to archbishops, and by vissals to their loids. Schmidt, tom, in p. 262 s, and it was the meest policy of Rome, to confound the marks of fillal and of fendal subjection.

⁷ The appeals from all the churches to the Roman pontifi, are deplored by the zeal of St. Bernard (de Consideratione, I in from it p. 431—442 edit Mabillon, Venet. 17:0) and the judzment of Fleury (Discours sur PHist Ecclesist que, iv & vii. But the saint, who believed in the falst decretals, condemns only the abuse of these appeals), the more enlightened historian investigates the origin, and rejects the principles, of this new jurisprudence the apostles. A rare prodigy is once recorded. that two horses, belonging to the archbishops of Mentz and Cologne, repassed the Alps, yet laden with gold and silver": but it was soon understood, that the success, both of the pilgrims and clients, depended much less on the instice of their cause than on the value of their offering. The wealth and piety of these strangers were ostentationsly displayed; and their expences, sacred or profane, circulated in various channels for the emolument of the Romans.

CHAP

LMIX

uper in-

Such powerful motives should have firmly attached the voluntary and pious obedience of the tancy of Roman people to their spiritual and temporal ton fother. But the operation of prejudice and interest is often disturbed by the sallies of ungovernable passion. The Indian who fells the tree, that he may gather the fruit", and the Arab who plunders the caravans of commerce, are actuated by the same impulse of savage nature, which overlooks the future in the present, and relinquishes for momentary rapine the long and secure possession of the most important blessings. And it was thus, that the shrine of St. Peter was profaned by the thoughtless Romans; who pillaged the ⁸ Germanier . . . summarn non levatis sarenn omisti mbilominus repatitant inviti. Nova res 1 quando hacterius aurum Roma refudit. Et nunc Romanorum consilio id usurpatum non credimus (Bernard de Consideratione, 1 m e 3 p 437 words of the passage are obscure, and probably corrupt.

¹⁹ Quand les sauvages de la Louisiane veulent avon du fruit, ils coupent l'arbie au pied et cueillent le fruit. Voila le gouvernement desponque (Esprit des Loix, l. v. c. 13.) I and passion and ignorance are aiways despotie offerings, and wounded the pilgrims, without computing the number and value of similar visits, which they prevented by their inhospitable sacri-Even the influence of superstition is fluctuating and precarious; and the slave, whose reason is subdued, will often be delivered by his avarice or pride. A credulous devotion for the fables and oracles of the priesthood, most powerfully acts on the mind of a Barbarian: yet such a mind is the least capable of preferring imagination to sense, of sacrificing to a distant motive, to an invisible. perhaps an ideal, object, the appetites and interests of the present world. In the vigour of health and vouth, his practice will perpetually contradict his belief: till the pressure of age, or sickness, or calamity, awakens his terrors, and compels him to satisfy the double debt of piety and remorse. have already observed, that the modern times of religious indifference are the most favourable to the peace and security of the clergy. Under the reign of superstition, they had much to hope from the ignorance, and much to fear from the violence, of mankind. The wealth, whose constant increase must have rendered them the sole proprietors of the earth, was alternately bestowed by the repentant father and plundered by the rapacious son: their persons were adored or violated; and the same idol, by the hands of the same votaries, was placed on the altar, or trampled in the dust. In the feudal system of Europe, arms were the title of distinction and the measure of allegiance; and amidst their tumult, the still voice of law and reason was seldom heard or obeyed. The turbulent Romans disdained the voke, and insulted the impotence, of their bishop'; nor would his education or character allow him to exercise, with deceney or effect, the power of the sword. The motives of his election and the frailties of his life were exposed to their familiar observation; and proximity must diminish the reverence, which his name and his decrees impressed on a barbarous world. difference has not escaped the notice of our philosophic historian: "Though the name and au-" thority of the court of Rome were so terrible " in the remote countries of Europe, which were "sunk in profound ignorance, and were entirely "unacquainted with its character and conduct, " the pope was so little revered at home, that " his inveterate enemies surrounded the gates of " Rome itself, and even controlled his govern-" ment in that city; and the ambassadors, who, " from a distant extremity of Europe, carried to " him the humble, or rather abject, submissions " of the greatest potentate of the age, found the " utmost difficulty to make their way to him, and " to throw themselves at his feet"."

CHAP. LXIX

Seditions of Rome against the popes.

÷

ZIZ

¹⁰ In a free conversation with he county man Adman IV. John of Salisbury accuses the avarice of the pope and clergy. Provinciarum deripinit spoha, ac si thesauros Criesi studiant reparare. Sed recte coin eis agit Altissimus, quomam et ipsi aliis et sapic vilissimus hominibus dari sunt in direptionem ide Nugis Curialium, I vi c. 24. p. 387. In the next page, he blames the rashness and infidelity of the Romans, whom their bishops vanily strove to conciliate by 20ts, instead of virtues. It is pity that this miscellaneous writer has not given us less morality and crudition, and more pictures of himself and the times.

¹⁴ Hume's History of England, vol. (p. 440). The same writer has given us, from Fitz-Stephen, a singular act of cruelty perpetrated

CHAP LXIX Succe of of Gre on VII VD 1030 -130 c

Since the primitive times, the wealth of the popes was exposed to envy, their power to opposition, and their persons to violence. But the long hostility of the mitre and the crown increased the numbers, and inflamed the passions, of their enemies. The deadly factions of the Guelphs and Chibelines, so fatal to Italy, could never be embraced with truth or constancy by the Romans, the subjects and adversaries both of the bishop and emperor; but their support was solicited by both parties; and they alternately displayed in their banners the keys of St. Peter and the German eagle. Gregory the seventh, who may be adored or detested as the founder of the papal monarchy, was driven from Rome, and died in exile at Salerno. Six-and-thirty of his successors1, till their retreat to Avignon, maintained an unequal contest with the Romans: their age and dignity were often violated; and the churches, in the solemn rites of religion, were polluted with sedition and murder. A repetition of such capricious brutality, without connection or design, on the clergy by Geoffrey, the father of Herny H — "When he was "master of Normandy, the chapter of Seez presumed, without his "consent, to proceed to the election of a bishop—upon which he "ordered all of them, with the bishop elect, to be eastrated, and "made all their testicles be brought him in a platter". Of the pain and danger they might justly complain, yet, since they had vowed chastity, he deprived them of a superfluous treasure.

Prom Leo IX, and Gregory VII, an authentic and contemporary series of the lives of the popes by the cardinal of Arragon, Pandulphus Pisanus, Bernard Guido, &c is inserted in the Italian Historians of Muratori (tom in P. r. p. 277—1885.), and has been always before my eyes.

O The date of years in the margin, may throughout this chapter be understood as tacit references to the Annals of Muratori, my ordi-would be tedious and disgusting; and I shall content myself with some events of the twelfth ceutury, which represent the state of the popes and the city. On Holy Thursday, while Paschal of-Probabil ficiated before the altar, he was interrupted by the $\frac{1118}{21118}$ clamours of the multitude, who imperiously demanded the confirmation of a favourite magistrate. His silence exasperated their fury: his pious refusal to mingle the affairs of earth and heaven was encountered with menaces and oaths, that he should be the cause and the witness of the public ruin. During the festival of Easter, while the bishop and the clergy, barefoot and in procession, visited the tombs of the martyrs, they were twice assaulted, at the Bridge of St. Angelo, and before the Capitol, with vollies of stones and darts. The houses of his adherents were levelled with the ground: Paschal escaped with difficulty and danger: he levied an army in the patrimony of St. Peter; and his last days were embittered by suffering and inflicting the calamities of civil war. The scenes that followed the election of his suc- Galam II cessor Gelasius the second were still more scandalous to the church and city. Cencio Frangi-nary and excellent ginde. He uses, and indeed quotes, with the freedom of a mister, his great Collection of the Italian Historians, in xxviii volumes, and as that tien-ure is in my library, I have thought it an amusement, if not a duty, to consult the original.

pani", a potent and factious baron, burst into the assembly furious and in arms: the cardinals

14 I cannot retrain from transcribing the high-coloured words of Pandulphus Pisanus (p. 384). Hoc andrens manurus pacis atque furbator jam fatus Centius Frajapane, more dracoms mananissimi sibilaris, et ab imis pectoribus trahens longo suspiria, accinetus retro were stripped, beaten, and trampled under foot; and he seized, without pity or respect, the vicar of Christ by the throat. Gelasius was dragged by his hair along the ground, buffeted with blows, wounded with spurs, and bound with an iron chain in the house of his brutal tyrant. An insurrection of the people delivered their bishop: the rival families opposed the violence of the Frangipani; and Cencio, who sued for pardon, repented of the failure, rather than of the guilt, of his enterprise. Not many days had clapsed, when the pope was again assaulted at the altar. While his friends and enemies were engaged in a bloody contest, he escaped in his sacerdotal garments. In this unworthy flight, which excited the compassion of the Roman matrons. his attendants were scattered or unhorsed; and, in the fields behind the church of St. Peter, his successor was found alone and half-dead with fear Shaking the dust from his feet, and fatigue. the apostle withdrew from a city in which his dignity was insulted and his person was endangered; and the vanity of sacerdotal ambition is revealed in the involuntary confession, that one emperor was more tolerable than twenty". These examples might suffice; but I cannot forget the gladio sine more cucurit, valvas ac fores confregit ribundus introit, inde custode remoto papam per gulam accepit, distraxit, pugnis calcibusque percuissit, et tanquam britum animal intra limen ecclesic acriter calcaribus cruentavit et latio tantum dominum per capillos et brachia. Jesó bono intermi dormente, detraxit, ad domini usque deduxit, inilio catenavit et inclusit sufferings of two pontiffs of the same age, the CHAP second and third of the name of Lucius. The former, as he ascended in battle-array to assault Lucus II the Capitol, was struck on the temple by a stone, 1111, and expired in a few days. The latter was se- Lacus III verely wounded in the persons of his servants. -1180 In a civil commotion, several of his priests had been made prisoners; and the inhuman Romans. reserving one as a guide for his brethren, put out their eyes, crowned them with ludierous mitres, mounted them on asses with their faces to the tail. and extorted an oath, that, in this wretched condition, they should offer themselves as a lesson to the head of the church. Hope or fear, lassitude or remorse, the characters of the men, and the circumstances of the times, might sometimes obtain an interval of peace and obedience; and the pope was restored with joyful acclamations to the Lateran or Vatican, from whence he had been driven with threats and violence. But the root of mischief was deep and perennial; and a momentary calm was preceded and followed by such tempests as had almost sunk the bark of St. Peter. Rome continually presented the aspect of war and discord: the churches and palaces were fortified and assaulted by the factions and families; and, after giving peace to Europe, Calistus the second alone had resolution California. and power to prohibit the use of private arms in the $\frac{\Delta D}{-1124}$ metropolis. Among the nations who revered the Innocent apostolic throne, the tunults of Rome provoked AD 11:0 a general indignation; and, in a letter to his disciple Eugenius the third, St. Bernard, with the sharpness of his wit and zeal, has stigmatised the vices of the rebellious people.". "Who is ig-"norant," says the monk of Clairvaux, "of the " vanity and arrogance of the Romans? a nation "nursed in sedition, cruel, untractable, and " scorning to obey, unless they are too feeble to " resist. When they promise to serve, they aspire " to reign; if they swear allegiance, they watch " the opportunity of revolt; yet they yent their " discontent in loud clamours if your doors, or " your counsels, are shut against them. Dextrous " in mischief, they have never learnt the science of " doing good. Odious to earth and heaven, im-" pious to God, seditious among themselves, jea-" lous of their neighbours, inhuman to strangers, " they love no one, by no one are they beloved; " and while they wish to inspire fear, they live in "base and continual apprehension. They will " not submit; they know not how to govern; faith-" less to their superiors, intolerable to their equals, "ungrateful to their benefactors, and alike im-"pudent in their demands and their refusals. " Lofty in promise, poor in execution: adulation " and calumny, perfidy and treason, are the fami-" liar arts of their policy." Surely this dark portrait is not coloured by the pencil of Christian charity "; yet the features, however harsh and ugly, express a lively resemblance of the Romans of the twelfth century ".

¹⁵ Ego coram Deo et Ecclesiá dico, si unquam possibile esset, mallem unum imperatorem quam not domino. (Vit. Gelas. 41 p. 398.)

CHAP INIX Character of the Romans by St. Bernard

¹⁶ Quid tam notum seculi quam protervia et cervicositas Romanorum? Gens insueta paci, tumultur assueta, gens immutis et intractabilis usque adhue, subdi nescia, insi cum non valet resistere (de Considerat 1 iv c. 2 p. 441.). The saint takes breath, and then begins again. Hi, invisi terrae et ca lo, utrique injecere major, &c. (p. 443.)

¹⁷ As a Roman entzen, Petraich takes leave to observe, that Bernard, though a laint, was a man, that he might be provoked by

The Jews had rejected the Christ when he ap- Polincal peared among them in a plebeian character; and the Romans might plead their ignorance of his Bigen, vicar when he assumed the pomp and pride of a temporal sovereign. In the busy age of the crusades, some sparks of curiosity and reason were rekindled in the Western world: the heresy of Bulgaria, the Paulician sect, was successfully transplanted into the soil of Italy and France; the Gnostic visions were mingled with the simplicity of the gospel; and the enemies of the clergy reconciled their passions with their conscience, the desire of freedom with the profession of piety 11. The trumpet of Roman liberty was first sounded by Arnold of Brescia ", whose promotion in the church was confined to the lowest rank, and who wore the monastic habit rather as a garb of poverty

CHAP LXIX. here y of Amold of Λ D 1140

resentment, and possibly report of his hastespassion, &c. Memone -ur la Vac de Petrarque, tom a p. 350

 Baromus, in his index to the auth volume of his A real Area found a fur and casy even e. He males two heads, of Romani Cutholics, and Schronusco to the former le applies all the good, to the latter all the evil, that is told of the city

19 The heresics of the xiith century may be found in Mosheum (Institut Hist Eccles p 419-427), who entertains a tayourable opinion of Arnold of Bre-cia. In the xth volume, I have described the sect of the Paulicians, and followed their migration from Armenia to Thrace and Bulgaro, Italy and France

20 The original pictures of Arnold of Brescu, are diawn by Otho, bishop of Frisingen (Chron I via e 31 de Ge us Fiederici I I i e, 27, I, ii, c, 21.), and in the ind book of the La, armus, a poem of Gunther, who flourished A D 12co, or the more stery of Paris near Basil (Fabric, Bibliot Latin med et infima: Etatis, tom af p. 174, 175.). The long passage that relates to Arnold, is produced by Guilliman (de Rebus Helveticis, 1 m c > p 108) than as an uniform of obedience. His adversaries could not deny the wit and eloquence which they severely felt: they confess with reluctance the specious purity of his morals; and his errors were recommended to the public by a mixture of important and beneficial truths. In his theological studies, he had been the disciple of the famous and unfortunate Abelard a, who was likewise involved in the suspicion of heresy: but the lover of Eloisa was of a soft and flexible nature; and his ecclesiastic judges were edified and disarmed by the humility of his repentance. From this master, Arnold most probably imbibed some metaphysical definitions of the Trinity, repugnant to the taste of the times: his ideas of baptism and the cucharist are loosely censured; but a political heresy was the source of his fame and misfortunes. He presumed to quote the declaration of Christ, that his kingdom is not of this world: he boldly maintained, that the sword and the sceptre were entrusted to the civil magistrate; that temporal honours and possessions were lawfully vested in secular persons; that the abbots, the bishops, and the pope himself, must renounce either their state or their salvation; and that after the loss of their revenues, the voluntary tithes and oblations of the faithful would suffice, not indeed for luxury and avarice, but for a frugal life in the exercise of spiritual labours. During a short time, the preacher was revered as a patriot; and the discontent, or revolt, of Brescia against her bishop, was the first fruits of his dangerous lessons. the favour of the people is less permanent than the resentment of the priest; and after the heresy of Arnold had been condemned by Innocent the serond in the general council of the Lateran, the magistrates themselves were urged by prejudice and fear to execute the sentence of the church. Italy could no longer afford a refuge; and the disciple of Abelard escaped beyond the Alps, till he found a safe and hospitable shelter in Zurich, now the first of the Swiss cantons. From a Roman station21, a roval villa, a chapter of noble virgins, Zurich had gradually increased to a free and flourishing city; where the appeals of the Milanese were semetimes tried by the Imperial commissaries ... In an age less ripe for reformation, the præcursor of Zuinglius was heard with

~ √ CH /b

²⁾ The wicked wit of Bayle was amused in composing, with much levity and learning, the articles of Abeland, Foul Ques. Her other, in his Dictionnaire Critique. The dispute of Abeland and St. Bernard, of cholastic and politice divinity, is well understood by Mosheim (In titut. Hist, Eccles. p. 412—415).

—— Damuatus ab illo
Præsule, qui numeros ventum contingere nostros
Nomen ab muocui ducit laudabile vui.

We may applaud the dexterity and correctness of Liguinius, who turns the unpoetical name of Innocent II, into a compliment

23 A Roman inscription of Statio Turicensis. has been found at Zurich (D'Anville, Notice de l'accienne Gaule, p. 642—644.); but it is without sufficient warrant, that the city and canton have usurped, and even monopolised, the names of Tigurum and Pagus Tigurnus.

24 Guilliman (de Rebus Helveticis, l. in c.o., p. 106.) recapitulatethe donation (A. D. 833.) of the emperor Lewis the Pious to his daughter the abbess. Hildegardis. Cuttun nostram Turegum in ducató. Alamannize in pago Durgaugens, with villages, woods, neadows, waters, slaves, churches, &c. a noble gift. Charles the Bald gave the jus monetze, the city was walled under Otho I. and the line of the bishop of Frisingen.

Nobile Turegum multarum copia rerum, is re readed with the second second with the second seco

CEAP.

CHAP. LXIX applause: a brave and simple people imbibed, and long retained, the colour of his opinions; and his art, or merit, seduced the bishop of Constance, and even the pope's legate, who forgot, for his sake, the interest of their master and their order. Their tardy zeal was quickened by the fierce exhortations of St. Bernard : and the enemy of the church was driven by persecution to the desperate measure of erecting his standard in Rome itself, in the face of the successor of St. Peter.

He exhous the Romans to republic, -1101

Yet the courage of Arnold was not devoid of discretion: he was protected, and had perhaps restore the been invited, by the nobles and people; and in A.D 1144 the service of freedom, his eloquence thundered over the seven hills. Blending in the same discourse the texts of Livy and St. Paul, uniting the motives of gospel, and of classic, enthusiasm, he admonished the Romans, how strangely their patience and the vices of the clergy had degenerated from the primitive times of the church and the city. He exhorted them to assert the inalienable rights of men- and Christians; to restore the laws and magistrates of the republic; to respect the name of the emperor; but to confine their shepherd to the spiritual government of his flock.

> 25 Bernard, epistol. exev, exevi. tom. i. p. 187-170. Amidst his invectives he drops a precious acknowledgment, qui, utinam quam sanæ esset doctrinæ quam districtæ est vitæ. He owns 'that Arnold would be a valuable acquisition for the ghurch.

26 He advised the Romans,

Consiliis armisque sua moderamina summa Arbitrio tractare suo: nil juris in hac re Pontifici summo, modicum concedere regi Suadebat populo Sie læså stulius utraque Majestate, reum geminæ se fecerat aulæ. .

Nor could his spiritual government escape the censure and control of the reformer; and the inferior clergy were taught by his lessons to resist the cardinals, who had usurped a despotic command over the twenty-eight regions or parishes of Rome 4. The revolution was not accomplished without rapine and violence, the effusion of blood and the demolition of houses: the victorious faction was enriched with the spoils of the clergy and the adverse nobles. Arnold of Brescia enjoyed, or deplored, the effects of his mission: his reign continued above ten years, while two popes, Innocent the second and Anastasius the fourth. either trembled in the Vatican, or wandered as exiles in the adjacent cities. They were succeeded by a more vigorous and fortunate pontiff, Adrian the fourth a, the only Englishman who has ascended the throne of St. Peter; and whose merit emerged from the mean condition of a monk, and almost a beggar, in the monastery of St. Albans. On the first provocation, of a cardinal killed or wounded in the streets, he cast an interdict on the guilty people; and, from Christmas to Easter, Rome was deprived of the real or imaginary comforts of religious worship. mans had despised their temporal prince: they submitted with grief and terror to the censures of their spiritual father: their guilt was expiated

²⁷ See Baronus (A.D. 1148, No. 38, 39.) from the Vatican MSS. He loudly condemns Arnold (A.D. 1141, No. 3), as the father of the political heretics, whose influence then burt him in France.

²⁸ The English reader may consult the Biographia Britannica, ADRIAN IV., but our own writers have added nothing to the fame by penance, and the banishment of the seditious preacher was the price of their absolution. the revenge of Adrian was yet unsatisfied, and the approaching coronation of Frederic Barbarossa was fatal to the hold reformer, who had offended, though not in an equal degree, the heads of the church and state. In their interview at Viterbo, the pope represented to the emperor the furious ungovernable spirit of the Romans; the insults, the injuries, the fears, to which his person and his clergy were continually exposed; and the pernicious tendency of the heresy of Arnold, which must subvert the principles of civil, as well as ceclesiastical, subordination. Frederic was convinced by these arguments, or tempted by the desire of the Imperial crown; in the balance of ambition, the innocence or life of an individual is of small account; and their common enemy was sacrificed to a moment of political concord. After his retreat from Rome, Arnold had been proteeted by the viscounts of Campania, from whom he was extorted by the power of Cæsar: the præfect of the city pronounced his sentence; the martyr of freedom was burnt alive in the AD 1115. presence of a careless and ungrateful people; and his ashes were cast into the Tyber, lest the heretics should collect and worship the relics of their master 29. The clergy triumphed in his death: with his ashes, his sect was dispersed; his memory still lived in the minds of the Romans. From his school they had probably derived a new article of faith, that the metropolis of the Catholic church is exempt from the penalties of excommunication and interdict. Their bishops might argue, that the supreme jurisdiction, which they exercised over kings and nations, more especially embraced the city and diocese of the prince of the apostles. But they preached to the winds, and the same principle that weakened the effect, must temper the abuse, of the thunders of the Vatican.

> 29 Besides the historian and poet already quoted, the last adventures of Arnold are related by the Biographer of Adrian IV. (Mu-

CHAP LXIX

The love of ancient freedom has encouraged a Restorted belief, that as early as the tenth century, in their ton of the Senate, first struggles against the Saxon Othos, the com- AD 1144 monwealth was vindicated and restored by the senate and people of Rome; that two consuls were annually elected among the nobles, and that ten or twelve plebeian magistrates revived the name and office of the tribunes of the commons". this venerable structure disappears before the light of criticism. In the darkness of the middle ages, the appellations of senators, of consuls, of the sons of consuls, may sometimes be discovered".

30 Ducange (Gloss, Latinitatis mediæ et infimæ Ætatis, DLC AR-CHONES, tom. ii. p. 726.) gives me a quotation from Blondus (decad. ii. l. ii.): Duo consules ex nobilitate quotannis fiebant, qui ad vetustum consulum exemplar summæ rerum præessent, And in Sigonius (de Regno Italiæ, l. vi. Opp. tom. ii. p 400) I read of the consuls and tribunes of the xth century. Both Blondus, and even Sigonius, too freely copied the classic method of supplying from reason or fancy the deficiency of records.

31 In the panegyric of Berengarius (Muratori, Script. Rer Ital. tom. ii. P. i. p. 408. a Roman is mentioned as consulis natus in the beginning of the ath century. Muratori (dissert. v) discovers in the years 952 and 956, Gratianus in Dei nomine consul et dux, Georgius consul et dux; and in 1015, Romanus, brother of Gregory VIII., proudly, but vaguely, styles himself consul et dux et omnium Romanorum senator.

They were bestowed by the emperors, or assumed by the most powerful citizens, to denote their rank. their honours 32, and perhaps the claim of a pure and patrician descent; but they float on the surface, without a series or a substance, the titles of men. not the orders of government³⁹; and it is only from the year of Christ one thousand one hundred and forty-four, that the establishment of the senate is dated, as a glorious æra, in the acts of the city. A new constitution was hastily framed by private ambition or popular enthusiasm; nor could Rome, in the twelfth century, produce an antiquary to explain, or a legislator to restore, the harmony and proportions of the ancient model. The assembly of a free, of an armed, people, will ever speak in loud and weighty acclamations. But the regular distribution of the thirty-five tribes, the nice balance of the wealth and numbers of the centuries, the debates of the adverse orators, and the slow operation of votes and ballots, could not easily be ³² As late as the xth century, the Greek emperors conferred on the dukes of Venice, Naples, Analphi, &c the title of ὑπατος or consuls (see Chron. Sagomini, passim), and the successors of Charlemagne would not abdicate any of their prerogative. But in general, the names of consul and senator, which may be found among the French and Germans, signify no more than count and lord (Signem, Ducange, Glossar.). The monkish writers are often ambitions of fine classic words.

33 The most constitutional form, is a diploma of Otho III (A.D. 998), Consulibus senatus populique Romani; but the act is probably spurious. At the coronation of Henry I. A. D. 1014, the historian Dithmar (apud Muratori, dissert exiii.) describes him, a senatoribus duodecim vallatum, quorum sex rasi barba, alii prolixa, mystice incedebant cum baculis. The senate is mentioned in the panegyric of Berengarius (p. 406.).

LMX

adapted by a blind multitude, ignorant of the arts, and insensible of the benefits, of legal government. It was proposed by Arnold to revive and discriminate the equestrian order; but what could be the motive or measure of such distinction"? The pecuniary qualification of the knights must have been reduced to the poverty of the times: those times no longer required their civil functions of judges and farmers of the revenue; and their primitive duty, their military service on horseback; was more nobly supplied by feudal tenures and the spirit of chivalry. The jurisprudence of the republic was useless and unknown: the nations and families of Italy who lived under the Roman and Barbaric laws were insensibly mingled in a common mass; and some faint tradition, some imperfect fragments, preserved the memory of the Code and Pandects of Justinian. With their liberty the Romans might doubtless, have restored the appellation and office of consuls; had they not disdained a title so promiscuously adopted in the Italian cities, that it has finally settled on the humble station of the agents of commerce in a foreign land. But the rights of the tribunes, the formidable word that arrested the public counsels, suppose or must produce a legitimate democracy. The old patricians were the subjects, the modern barons the tyrants, of the ³⁴ In ancient Rome, the equestrian order was not ranked with the senate and people as a third branch of the republic till the consulship of Circro, who assumes the ment of the establishment (Plin, Hist. Natur. axxiii. 3. Beaufort, Republique Romaine, toin i p. 144—155).

CHAP. LXIX.

The Capitol. state; nor would the enemies of peace and order, who insulted the vicar of Christ, have long respected the unarmed sanctity of a plebeian magistrate.

In the revolution of the twelfth century, which gave a new existence and æra to Rome, we may observe the real and important events that marked or confirmed her political independence. I. The Capitoline hill, one of her seven eminences ", is about four hundred yards in length, and two hundred in breadth. A flight of an hundred steps led to the summit of the Tarpeian rock; and far steeper was the ascent before the declivities had been smoothed and the precipices filled by the ruins of fallen edifices. From the earliest ages, the Capitol had been used as a temple in peace, a fortress in war: after the loss of the city, it maintained a siege, against the victorious Gauls, and the sanctuary of empire was occu-.pied, assaulted, and burnt, in the civil wars of Vitellius and Vespasian ". The temples of Ju-

33 The republican plan of Arnold of Brescia is thus stated by Gunther:

Quin criain titulos urbis renovare verustos; Nomine plebeio secernere nomen equestre, Jura tribunorum, sanctum reparare senatum, Et senio fessas mutasque reponere legos. Lapsa rumosis, et adhue pendentia muris Reddere primævo Capitolia prisca nitori.

But of these reformations, some were no more than ideas, other no more than words.

36 After many disputes among the antiquaries of Rome, it seems determined, that the summit of the Capitoline hill next the river is strictly the Mons Tarpeius, the Arx Fand that on the other summit, the church and convent of Araceli, the barefoot fruers of St. Francis occupy the temple of Jupiter (Nardini, Roma Antica, Lv. c. 11—16.)

"Tacit. Hist. m. 69, 70. 13:

piter and his kindred deities had crumbled into CHAP dust; their place was supplied by monasteries and .LXIX. houses; and the solid walls, the long and shelving porticoes, were decayed or ruined by the lanse of time. It was the first act of the Romans, an act of freedom, to restore the strength, though not the beauty, of the Capitol; to fortify the seat of their arms and counsels; and as often as they ascended the hill, the coldest minds must have glowed with the remembrance of their ancestors. II. The first Casars had been invested with the The coun exclusive coinage of the gold and silver; to the senate they abandoned the baser metal of bronze or copper ": the emblems and legends were inscribed on a more ample field by the genius of flattery; and the prince was relieved from the care of celebrating his own virtues. The successsors of Diocletian despised even the flattery of the senate: their royal officers at Rome, and in the provinces, assumed the sole direction of the mint: and the same prerogative was inherited by the Gothic kings of Italy, and the long series of the Greek, the French, and the German dynastics. After an abdication of eight hundred years, the Roman senate asserted this honourable and lucrative privilege; which was tacitly renounced by the popes, from Paschal the second to the establishment of their residence beyond the Alps.

38 This partition of the noble and baser metals between the emperor and senate, must however be adopted, not as a positive fact, · but as the probable opinion of the best antiquaries (see the Science des Medailles of the Pere Joubert, tom. ii. p. 208-211. in the unproved and scarce edition of the Baron de la Bastie.).

CHAP. LXIX.

Some of these republican coins of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries are shewn in the cabinets of the curious. On one of these, a gold medal, Christ is depictured holding in his left hand a book with this inscription: "THE VOW " OF THE ROMAN SENATE AND PEOPLE : ROME "THE CAPITAL OF THE WORLD:" on the reverse St. Peter delivering a banner to a kneeling senator in his cap and gown, with the name and arms of his family impressed on a shield ". III. With the empire, the præfect of the city had declined to a municipal officer; yet he still exercised in the last appeal the civil and criminal jurisdiction; and a drawn sword, which he received from the successors of Otho, was the mode of his investiture and the emblem of his functions 40. dignity was confined to the noble families of Rome: the choice of the people was ratified by the pope; but a triple oath of fidelity must have often embarrassed the præfect in the conflict of adverse duties ". A servant, in whom they possessed but a third share, was dismissed by the independent Romans: in his place they elected a patrician; but this title, which Charlemagne had not disdained, was too lofty for a citizen or a subject; and, after the first fervour of rebellion, they consented without reluctance to the restoration of the præfect. About fifty AD 1108 years after this event. Innocent the third, the most ambitious, or at least the most fortunate, of the pontiffs, delivered the Romans and himself from this badge of foreign dominion: he invested the præfect with a banner instead of a sword, and absolved him from all dependence of oaths or service to the German emperors ". In his place an ecclesiastic, a present or future cardinal, was named by the pope to the civil government of Rome; but his jurisdiction has been reduced to a narrow compass; and in the days of freedom, the right or exercise was derived from the senate and people. IV. After the revival of the senate ", Number and choice the conscript fathers (if I may use the express of the sesion) were invested with the legislative and exe-

The prafect of the city.

³⁹ In his xxviith dissertation on the Antiquities of Italy (tom. ii. p. 7559—560.), Muratori exhibits a series of the senatorian coins, which hore the obscure names of Affortiati, Infoitati, Provini, Paparini. During this period all the popes, without excepting Boniface VIII abstained from the right of coining, which was resumed by his successor Benedict XI. and regularly exercised in the court of Avignon.

^{} A German historian, Gerard of Reicherspeg (in Baluz Miscell tom. v. p. 64. apud Schmidt, Hist. des Allemands, tom. in. p. 265.), thus describes the constitution of Romain the aith century: Grandiora urbis et orbis negotis spectant ad Romanum pontificem itemque ad Romanum Imperatorem, sive illius vidarium urbis præfectum, qui de sua dignitate respleit utrumque, videlicet dominum papam cui facit hominium, et dominum imperatorem a quo accepit sua potestatis insigne; schicet.gladium evertum.

CHAP LXIX

41 The words of a contemporary writer (Pandulph. Pisan. in Vit. Paschal. II. p. 357, 358.) describe the election and oath of the præfect in 1118, inconsultis patribus . . . loca præfectoria . . . Laudes præfectoriæ.... comittorum applausum.... juraturum populo in ambonem sublevant....confirmari eum in urbe præfectum petunt.

42 Urbis præfectum ad ligiam fidelitatem recepit, et per mantum quod illi donavn de præfectura eum publice investivit, qui usque ad id tempus juramento fidelitatis imperatori fuit obligatus et ab eo præfecturæ tenust honorem (Gesta Innocent III. in Muraton, tom. in P. i. p. 487.).

43 See Otho Frising, Chron. vii. 31. de Gest. Frederic. I. l. 1 c. 27

cutive power; but their views seldom reached beyond the present day; and that day was most frequently disturbed by violence and tumult. In its utmost plenitude, the order or assembly consisted of fifty-six senators 4, the most eminent of whom were distinguished by the title of counsellors; they were nominated, perhaps annually, by the people; and a previous choice of their electors, ten persons in each region, or parish, might afford a basis for a free and permanent constitu-The popes, who in this tempest submitted rather to bend than to break, confirmed by treaty the establishment and privileges of the senate. and expected from time, peace, and religion, the restoration of their government. The motives of public and private interest might sometimes draw from the Romans an occasional and temporary sacrifice of their claims; and they renewed their oath of allegiance to the successor of St. Peter and Constantine, the lawful head of the church and the republic 45.

⁴⁴ Our countryman, Roger Hoveden, speaks of the single senators, of the Capuzzi family, &c. quorum temporibus melius regebatur Roma quam nunc (A.D. 1194.) est temporibus lvi. senatorum (Ducange, Gloss. tom. vi. p. 191. SENATORES).

⁴⁵ Muratori dissert. xhi. tom. iii. p. 785—788.) has published an original treaty. Concordia inter D. nostrum papam Clementern III. et senatores populi Romani super regulibus et aliis dignitatibus urbis, &c. anno 44° senatūs. The senate speaks, and speaks with authority: Reddimus ad præsens. ... habebimus ... dabutus presbyteria jurabimus pacem et fidelitatem; &c. A chartula de Tenementis Tusculani, dated in the 47th year of the same æra, and confirmed decreto amplissimi ordinis, senatūs, acclamatione P. R. publice Capitolio consistentis. It is there we find the difference of senatores consiliarii and simple senators (Muratori, dissert, xlii. tom. iii. p. 787—789).

The union and vigour of a public council was CHAP dissolved in a lawless city; and the Romans soon adopted a more strong and simple mode of ad- The office They condensed the name and auministration. thority of the senate in a single magistrate, or two colleagues; and as they were changed at the end of a year, or of six months, the greatness of the trust was compensated by the shortness of the term. But in this transient reign, the senators of Rome indulged their avarice and ambition: their justice was perverted by the interest of their family and faction; and as they punished only their enemies, they were obeyed only by their adherents. Anarchy, no longer tempered by the pastoral care of their bishop, admonished the Romans that they were incapable of governing themselves; and they sought abroad those blessings which they were hopeless of finding at home. In the same age, and from the same motives, most of the Italian republics were prompted to embrace a measure, which, however strange it may seem, was adapted to their situation, and productive of the most salutary effects ". They chose, in some foreign but friendly city, an impartial magistrate of noble birth and unblemished character, a soldier and a statesman, recommended by the voice of fame and his country, to whom they delegated for a time the supreme administration of peace and war. The compact between the governor and the governed was ⁴⁶ Muratori (dissert, xlv. tom. iv. p. 64-92) has fully explained this mode of government, and the Occulus Pastoralis, which he has given at the end, is a treatise or sermon on the duties of these foreign magistrates.

CHAP. LXIX.

scaled with oaths and subscriptions; and the duration of his power, the measure of his stipend, the nature of their mutual obligations, were defined with scrupulous precision. They swore to obey him as their lawful superior; he pledged his faith to unite the indifference of a stranger with the zeal of a patriot. At his choice, four or six knights and civilians, his assessors in arms and justice, attended the Podesta ", who maintained at his own expence a decent retinue of servants and horses: his wife, his son, his brother, who might bias the affections of the judge, were left behind; during the exercise of his office he was not permitted to purchase land, to contract an alliance, or even to accept an invitation in the house of a citizen; nor could he honourably depart till he had satisfied the complaints that might be urged against his government.

Branealeone, A D 1252 -- 1258

It was thus, about the middle of the thirteenth century, that the Romans called from Bologna the senator Brancaleone *, whose fame and merit have been rescued from oblivion by the pen of an English historian. A just anxiety for his reputation, a clear foresight of the difficulties of the task, had engaged him to refuse 17 In the Latin writers, at least of the silver age, the title of Potestas was transferred from the office to the magistrate.

..... Hujus qui trahitur prætextam sumere mavis; . An Fidenarum Gabiorumque esse Potestas.

(Juvenal, Satir. x. 99) 48 See the life and death of Boncalcone, in the Historia Major of Matthew Paris, p. 741. 757. 792. 797. 799. 810. 823. 833. 830. 840. The multitude of pilgrims and suitors connected Rome and St. Alban's, and the resentment of the English clergy prompted them to rejoice whenever the popes were humbled and oppressed.

the honour of their choice: the statutes of Rome were suspended, and his office prolonged to the term of three years. By the guilty and licentious he was accused as cruel; by the clergy he was suspected as partial; but the friends of peace and order applauded the firm and upright magistrate by whom those blessings were restored. No criminals were so powerful as to brave, so obscure as to clude, the justice of the senator. By his sentence two nobles of the Annibaldi family were exccuted on a gibbet; and he inexorably demolished, in the city and neighbourhood, one hundred and forty towers, the strong shelters of rapine and mischief. The bishop, as a simple bishop, was compelled to reside in his diocese; and the standard of Brancaleone was displayed in the field with terror and effect. His services were repaid by the ingratitude of a people unworthy of the happiness which they enjoyed. By the public robbers, whom he had provoked for their sake, the Romans were excited to depose and imprison their benefactor; nor would his life have been spared, if Bologna had not possessed a pledge for his safety. Before his departure, the prudent senator had required the exchange of thirty hostages of the noblest families of Rome: on the news of his danger, and at the prayer of his wife, they were more strictly guarded; and Bologna, in the cause of honour, sustained the thunders of a papal in-This generous resistance allowed the Romans to compare the present with the past; and Brancalcone was conducted from the prison to the Capitol amidst the acclamations of a re-

LX1X LX1X 288

CHAP. LXIX. pentant people. The remainder of his government was firm and fortunate; and as soon as envy was appeased by death, his head, enclosed in a precious vase, was deposited on a lofty column of marble.

Charles of Aujou, A D 1265 —1278.

The impotence of reason and virtue recommended in Italy a more effectual choice: instead of a private citizen, to whom they yielded a voluntary and precarious obedience, the Romans clected for their senator some prince of independent power, who could defend them from their enemies and themselves. Charles of Anjou and Provence, the most ambitious and warlike monarch of the age, accepted at the same time the kingdom of Naples from the pope, and the office of senator from the Roman people5. As he passed through the city, in his road to victory, he received their oath of allegiance, lodged in the Lateran palace, and smoothed in a short visit the harsh features of his despotic character. Yet even Charles was exposed to the inconstancy of the people, who saluted with the same acclamations ²⁰ Matthew Paris thus ends his account: Caput vero ipsius Brancaleonis in vase pretioso super marmoreant columnam collocatum, in signum sui valoris et probitatis, quasi reliquias, superstitiose nums et pompose sustuletunt. Fuerat enim superborum potentum et malefactorum urbis malleus et exstirpator, et populi protector et defensir, vertatis et justitue imitator et amator (p. 840). A biographer of Innocent IV. (Mutatori, Script, toni in P. 1. p. 591, 1921) draws a less favourable portrait of this Ghibeline senator.

50 The election of Charles of Anjou to the office of cerpetual senator of Rome, is mentioned by the historians in the vinth volume of the Collection of Muratori, by Nicholas de Jamsilla (p. 502.), the monk of Padua (p. 724.), Sabas Malaspina (l. n. c. 9 'p. 808.), and Ricordano Malespini (c. 177. p. 999.)

the passage of his rival, the unfortunate Conradin; and a powerful avenger, who reigned in the Capitol, alarmed the fears and jealousy of the popes. The absolute term of his life was superseded by a renewal every third year; and the enmity of Nicholas the third obliged the Sicilian king to abdicate the government of Rome. In his bull, a perpetual law, the imperious pontiff asserts the truth, validity, and use, of the donation of Constantine, not less essential to the peace of the city than to the independence of the church; establishes the annual election of the senator; and formally disqualifies all emperors, kings, princes, and persons of an eminent and conspicuous rank . This prohibitory clause was Pope Martin IV repealed in his own behalf by Martin the fourth, AD to 1 who humbly solicited the suffrage of the Romans. In the presence, and by the authority, of the people, two electors conferred, not on the pope, but on the noble and faithful Martin, the dignity of senator, and the supreme administration of the republie ", to hold during his natural life, and to exercise at pleasure by himself or his deputies. About fifty years afterwards, the same title was Theym granted to the emperor Lewis of Bayaria; and lone the liberty of Rome was acknowledged by her of B year,

LXIX

The high-counding bull of Nicholas III which found, by temporal sovereignty on the donation of Constituting, t extent, and a it has been inserted by Boniface VIII in the Sector of the Decretels, it must be received by the Cutholics, or at least by the Papists, a a sacred and perpetual law.

Lam indebted to Heury Hist Earles tom xvin p. 306 pp. an extra coethis Roman act, which he has fallen from the Le ? Stastical Annals of O bostic Raybaldur, A.D. 1281 No.14, 45

CHAP.
LNIX

A 1 b or R such to the curpes a two sovereigns, who accepted a municipal office in the government of their own metropolis.

In the first moments of rebellion, when Arnold of Brescia had inflamed their minds against the church, the Romans artfully laboured to conciliate the favour of the empire, and to recommend their merit and services in the cause of Cæsar. The style of their ambassadors to Conrad the third and Frederic the first, is a mixture of flattery and pride, the tradition and the ignorance of their own history 31. After some complaint of his silence and neglect, they exhort the former of these princes to pass the Alps, and assume from their bands the Imperial crown. "We beseech "your majesty, not to disdain the humility of " your sons and vassals, not to listen to the accu-" sations of our common enemies; who calum-" niate the senate as hostile to your throne, who " sow the seeds of discord, that they may reap " the harvest of destruction. The pope and the " Sicilian are united in an impious league to op-" pose our liberty and your coronation. With " the blessing of God, our zeal and courage has "hitherto defeated their attempts. Of their " powerful and factious adherents, more especi-" ally the Frangipani, we have taken by assault "the houses and turrets: some of these are to These letter and speeche are preserved by Otherbridge of Fusing restabling Bibliot Lat med extrebing tomatop 180, 187, perhaps the noblest of Instortius. In was son of Ecopold marques of Austria. Institution, Venna, was dated into the emption Pres. IV and he was fina brother as functioned to Const. URL and Fred mark the brest type extensional and Const. Const. URL and Fred mark Geometry, the Const. The last of who are insert at a described in an Martine Const.

ConsdIII AD 1144

CHAP. LMA

" occupied by our troops, and some are levelled "with the ground. The Milvian bridge, which " they had broken, is restored and fortified for "your safe passage; and your army may enter " the city without being annoved from the castle " of St. Angelo. All that we have done, and all " that we design, is for your honour and service, " in the loyal hope, that you will speedily appear " in person, to vindicate those rights which have " been invaded by the clergy, to revive the dig-" nity of the empire, and to surpass the same and " glory of your predecessors. May you fix your " residence in Rome, the capital of the world; " give laws to Italy, and the Teutonic kingdom; " and imitate the example of Constantine and "Justinian', who, by the vigour of the senate " and people, obtained the sceptre of the earth"." But these splendid and fallacious wishes were not charished by Conrad the Franconian, whose eyes were fixed on the Holy Land, and who died without visiting Rome soon after his return from the Holy Land.

His nephew and successor, Frederic Barbarossa, Toole was more ambitious of the Imperial crown, nor had any of the successors of Otho acquired such absolute sway over the kingdom of Italy. rounded by his ceclesiastical and secular princes, he gave audience in his camp at Sutri to the ambassadors of Rome, who thus addressed him in a free and florid oration: "Incline your car to the " queen of cities; approach with a peaceful and " friendly mind the precincts of Rome, which " has cast away the yoke of the clergy, and is " impatient to crown her legitimate emperor. " Under your auspicious influence, may the pri-" mitive times be restored. Assert the prero-"gatives of the eternal city, and reduce under "her monarchy, the insolence of the world. " You are not ignorant, that, in former ages, " by the wisdom of the senate, by the valour and " discipline of the equestrian order, she extended "her victorious arms to the East and West, " beyond the Alus, and over the islands of the ocean. By our sins, in the absence of our " princes, the noble institution of the senate has " sunk in oblivion: and with our prudence, our " strength has likewise decreased. We have re-" vived the senate, and the equestrian order; " the counsels of the one, the arms of the other, " will be devoted to your person and the service " of the empire. Do you not hear the language of "the Roman matron? You were a guest, I have " adopted you as a citizen; a Transalpine stran-" ger, I have elected you for my sovereign"; and " given you myself, and all that is mine. Your " first and most sacred duty, is to swear and " subscribe, that you will shed your blood for " the republic; that you will maintain in peace " and justice, the laws of the city and the charters " of your predecessors; and that you will reward ⁵⁶ Hospes eras, eivem feet. Advena fuisti ex Tiansalpinis pittibus, principem constitui.

⁵⁾ We do n — said the tenorant Roman ≥ to re tore the empire Pricam (Congress of the manner Congress and I have a supplementally and the mean approximation of the congress tot sububigues are en en en en el Rice et el en remanion Other Land de Control Convert Land Land of the Land.

CHAP. LXIX

" with five thousand pounds of silver the faithful " senators who shall proclaim your titles in the " Capitol. With the name, assume the character, " of Augustus." The flowers of Latin rhetoric were not yet exhausted; but Frederic, impatient of their vanity, interrupted the orators in the high tone of royalty and conquest. " Famous indeed " have been the fortitude and wisdom of the an-" cient Romans: but your speech is not seasoned "with wisdom, and I could wish that fortitude " were conspicuous in your actions. Like all sub-" lunary things, Rome has felt the vicissitudes of "time and fortune. Your noblest families were " translated to the East, to the royal city of Con-"stantine; and the remains of your strength and " freedom have long since been exhausted by the " Greeks and Franks. Are you desirous of be-" holding the ancient glory of Rome, the gravity " of the senate, the spirit of the knights, the dis-" cipline of the camp, the valour of the legions? " you will find them in the German republic. It " is not empire, naked and alone, the ornaments " and virtues of empire have likewise migrated be-" youd the Alps to a more deserving people 7: "they will be employed in your defence, but they " claim your obedience. You pretend that my-" self or my predecessors have been invited by "the Romans: you mistake the word, they were " not invited; they were implored. From its fo-

⁷ Noh ce sa noba- nudum properum, virtate sua anactum venit, commenta sua cenan traxit. Peres nos sunt consules mi, Se. C ceró or Lavy would not have rejected these mages, the eloquence of a Barbarian born and educated in the Hereyman forest.

" reign and domestic tyrants, the city was rescued " by Charlemague and Otho, whose aslies repose in "our country: and their dominion was the price " of your deliverance. Under that dominion your " ancestors lived and died. I claim by the right " of inheritance and possession, and who shall dare " to extort you from my hands? Is the hand of the " Franks " and Germans enfeebled by age? Am 1 " vanquished? Am I a captive? Am I not en-" compassed with the banners of a potent and in-" vincible army? You impose conditions on your " master; you require oaths: if the conditions are "just, an oath is superfluous; if unjust, it is cri-" minal. Can you doubt my equity? It is ex-" tended to the meanest of my subjects. Will not " my sword be unsheathed in the defence of the " Capitol? By that sword the northern kingdom of "Denmark has been restored to the Roman em-" pire. You prescribe the measure and the objects " of my bounty, which flows in a copious but a vo-" luntary stream. All will be given to patient " merit: all will be denied to rude importunity "." Neither the emperor nor the senate could maintain these lofty pretensions of dominion and liberty. United with the pope, and suspicious of the Romans. Frederic continued his warch to the Vatican: his coronation was disturbed by a sally from the ⁵⁾ Other of Frisngern, who surely understood the language of the court and diet of Germany, speaks of the Franks in the winth century as the regimne mation (Processe Franci, equites Francis), menus Francounty—he add, however, the epithet of Telliente 2) Other France de Gestis Frederica I. I. it is 22, p. 720 - 75.

The congred and authentic a to I have translated and alimbed with feedom, yet with folding.

Capitol; and if the numbers and valour of the Germans prevailed in the bloody conflict, he could not safely encamp in the presence of a city of which he styled himself the sovereign. About twelve years afterwards, he besieged Rome, to seat an autipope in the chair of St. Peter; and twelve Pisan gallies were introduced into the Tyber: but the senate and people were saved by the arts of negociation and the progress of disease; nor did Frederic or his successors reiterate the hostile attempt. Their laborious reigns were exercised by the popes, the crusades, and the independence of Lombardy and Germany; they courted the alliance of the Romans; and Frederic the second offered in the Capitol the great standard, the Caroccoo of Milan". After the extinction of the house of Swabia, they were banished beyond the Alps; and their last coronations betrayed the impotence and poverty of the Teutonic Casans ...

LXIX CHAP

6) From the Chromide of Ricoled load J. France, Pipus, Minaton, discrete ever tomen, p. 302, his transcated laboration, i.e., with the dought see earth accompanied the lift.

Ave decus orbit, ave fovere infrate amor, ave!
Currus ab Augusto Frederico Ceraneju to Vac Mediolamina fopia scotis speciere vanura
Imperiovire, proprias tibi folico vare
Lago triminphorum infrepotes incinor escopiciona
Ono fibi unitefant ograpulodha generota

No si decentro ne Ennow use the Indean Dissertation, our rep 444 che nell'armo 17/7, una coparde lo Croccio in un timo di mari nono a scopia, nel Campidoglio, presoalle curcic di quel lucio, dece Scri V. Pasca faito unchingler. Soci colo quel opia quatro colonia di marino fino coli, equente tre casione, so no the anne propo case the old in cription.

Oak be declared a the Empered constand authority in Italy (a) lated with a quality becomes in the Annals of Alamon (2000); Wars of the Romons again the neighbouring cites.

Under the reign of Adrian, when the empire extended from the Euphrates to the ocean, from Mount Atlas to the Grampian hills, a fanciful historian " amused the Romans with the picture of their infant wars. "There was a time," says Flo-" when Tibur and Præneste, our summer " retreats, were the objects of hostile vows in the " Capitol, when we dreaded the shades of the "Arician groves, when we could triumph with-" out a blush over the nameless villages of the Sa-" bines and Latins, and even Corioli could afford " a title not unworthy of a victorious general." The pride of his contemporaries was gratified by the contrast of the past and the present: they would have been humbled by the prospect of futurity; by the prediction, that after a thousand years, Rome, despoiled of empire and contracted to her primæval limits, would renew the same hostilities, on the same ground which was then decorated with her villas and gardens. The adjacent territory on either side of the Tyber was always claimed, and sometimes possessed, as the patrimony of St. Peter; but the barons assumed a lawless independence, and the cities too faithfully copied the revolt and discord of the metropolis. In the twelfth and thirteenth cen-xi, xii); and the reader may compare his narrative with the Histoire des Allemands (tom in, w) by Schmidt, who has deserved the esteem of his countrymen.

⁰² Tibur nune suburbanum, et æstiva: Præneste delicia:, nuneupatis in Capitolio votis petebantur. The whole passage of Florus (d. 1. c. 11) may be read with pleasure, and has deserved the proise of a man of genius (Œuvres de Montesquieu, tom. in. p. 634, 635, quarto edition.)

LXIX.

turies, the Romans incessantly laboured to reduce or destroy the contumacious vassals of the church and senate: and if their headstrong and selfish ambition was moderated by the pope, he often encouraged their zeal by the alliance of his spiritual arms. Their warfare was that of the first consuls and dictators, who were taken from the plough. They assembled in arms at the foot of the Capitol: sallied from the gates, plundered or burnt the harvests of their neighbours, engaged in tumultuary conflict, and returned home after an expedition of fifteen or twenty days. Their sieges were tedious and unskilful; in the use of victory, they indulged the meaner passions of icalousy and revenge; and instead of adopting the valour, they trampled on the misfortunes, of their adversaries. The captives, in their shirts, with a rope round their necks, solicited their pardon: the fortifications, and even the buildings, of the rival cities were demolished, and the inhabitants were scattered in the adjacent villages. It was thus that the seats of the cardinal bishops, Porto, Ostia, Albamum, Tusculum, Pracneste, and Tibur or Tivoli, were successively overthrown by the ferocions hostility of the Romans⁶³. Of these⁶⁴, Porto and Ostia, the two keys of the Tyber, are still vacant and desolate. the marshy and unwholesome banks are peopled with herds of buffalos, and the river is lost to every purpose of navigation and trade. hills, which afford a shady retirement from the autumnal licats, have again smalled with the blessings of peace; Frescati has arisen near the ruins of Tusculum; Tibur or Tivoli has resumed the honour of a city; and the meacr towns of Albano and Palestrina are decorated with the villas of the cardinals and princes of Rome. the work of destruction, the ambition of the Romans was often checked and repulsed by the neighbouring cities and their allies; in the first siege of Tibur, they were driven from their catap: and the battles of Tusculum" and Viterbo's might be compared in their relative state to the memorable fields of Thrasymene and Cannæ. In the first of these petty wars, thirty thousand Romans were overthrown by a thousand German horse, whom Frederic Barbarossa had detached to the relief of Tusculum: and if we number the slain at three, the prisoners at two, thousand, we shall embrace the most authentic and moderate Sixty-eight years afterwards account.

⁶⁾ Ne a feritate Rommorum, acai tue, on Ho tien e., Porme n. s.; Tusculanen es, Albanenses, Labreen es, et major Tilonte n. b. iru erentur (Matthew Pars, p. 7-77). These events are manescar the Annals and Index. the events volumes of Mutaion.

⁹⁴ For the state of runc of these inburban cure, the books of the Tyber, See see the hydrypeting of the P Labat (Voy) Level 1. See acted in Italies, who had not long resided in the neighbourhood of Rome and the more are made description of which P. Eschmard [Roces, 17, 18, noticen less a books.] See the exposition map of Cingolian.

Buth of Taxalom, AD 1107

(6) Labat ston in p. 2.3 a mentions a recent decree of the Rosman government, which has a yearly mortified the paids and poverts of Tivolic presented Tabutina non-vivitur errores.

O'll depart from to, at all method, of quoting oil. By the date, the Annals of Morat 1, 53 consideration of the critical kalance in which he has weened nine contemporary writer, who mention the terth of Tusculam, tone 2, p. 42—44.

So other Paus, p. 545. The hishorot Winche territor Peter to the regard who occupied the centure-two year. A D (2005) 1258 V and is de cyclicd, by the English historian, a a coldier on 3 statesman (4) 475 (00).

marched against Viterbo in the eeclesiastical state with the whole force of the city; by a rare coalition the Tentonic cagle was blended, in the Bade of adverse banners, with the keys of St. Peter; and VD 1934. the pope's auxiliaries were commanded by a count of Thoulouse and a bishop of Winchester. The Romans were discomfited with shame and slaughter; but the English prelate must have indulged the vanity of a pilgrim, if he multiplied their numbers to one handred, and their loss in the field to thirty, thousand men. Had the policy of the senate and the discipline of the legions been restored with the Capitol, the divided condition of Italy would have offered the fairest opportunity of a second conquest. But in arras, the modern Romans were not above, and in arts, they were far below, the common level of the neighbouring republies. Nor was their warlike spirit of any long continuance; after some irregular sallies they subsided in the national apathy, in the neglect of military institutions, and in the disgraceful and dangerous use of foreign mercenaries.

Ambition is a weed of quick and early vegeta- The class tion in the vineyard of Christ. Under the first from the Christian prince, the chair of St. Peter was disputed by the votes, the venality, the violence, of a popular election: the sanctuaries of Rome were polluted with blood; and, from the third to the twelfth century, the church was distracted by the mischief of frequent schisms. As long as the final appeal was determined by the civil magistrate, these mischiefs were transient and local: the merits were tried by equity or favour; nor could

CHAP.

CHAP.

the unsuccessful competitor long disturb the triumph of his rival. But after the emperors had been divested of their prerogatives, after a maxim had been established, that the vicar of Christ is amenable to no carthly tribunal, each vacancy of the holy see might involve Christendom in controversy and war. The claims of the cardinals and inferior clergy, of the nobles and people, were vague and litigious: the freedom of choice was overruled by the tumults of a city that no longer owned or obeyed a superior. On the decease of a pope, two factions proceeded in different churches to a double election: the number and weight of votes, the priority of time, the merit of the candidates, might balance each other: the most respectable of the clergy were divided; and the distant princes, who bowed before the spiritual throne, could not distinguish the spurious, from the legitimate, idol. The emperors were often the authors of the schism, from the political motive of opposing a friendly to an hostile pontiff; and each of the competitors was reduced to suffer the insults of his enemies, who were not awed by conscience; and to purchase the support of his adherents, who were instigated by avarice or ambition. A peaceful and perpetual succession was ascertained by Alexander the third 68, who finally abolished the tumultuary votes of the clergy and to See Mosheim, Institut, Histor, Ecclesiast p. 401–401. Alexander hums if had nearly been the victim of a contested election, and the doubtful merits of Immoent had only preponderated by the weight of general darring which St. Bernard (a) mito the sc. b (see his his and writings).

Right of the eardinals established by Alexander III.

people, and defined the right of election in the sole college of cardinals". The three orders of bishops, priests, and deacons, were assimilated to each other by this important privilege; the parochial clergy of Rome obtained the first rank in the hierarchy; they were indifferently chosen among the nations of Christendom; and the possession of the richest benefices, of the most important bishoprics, was not incompatible with their title and office. The senators of the Catholic church, the coadjutors and legates of the supreme pontiff, were robed in purple, the symbol of martyidom or royalty; they claimed a proud equality with kings; and their dignity was enhanced by the smallness of their number, which, till the reign of Leo the tenth, seldom exceeded twenty or twenty-five per-By this wise regulation, all doubt and scandal were removed, and the root of schism was so effectually destroyed, that in a period of six hundred years a double choice has only once divided the unity of the sacred college. But as the concurrence of two thirds of the votes had been made necessary, the election was often delayed by the private interest and passions of the cardinals; and while they prolonged their independent reign, the Christian world was left destitute of an head. A vacancy of almost three years had preceded the formaelevation of Gregory the tenth, who resolved to conclude prevent the future abuse; and his bull, after some

CHAP. LXIX.

by Grego-A Data74

10 The origin, titles, importance, dress, precedency, Sc. of the Rim mecanduals, are very ably discuted by Thomassin. Discipling de PEaline, tour any 1262-1287 is but their purple a new tauch taded). The college was rused to the definite number of sevent storo, to represent to decline colar, the disciplinate body opposition, has been consecrated in the code of the canon law?". Nine days are allowed for the obsequies of the deceased pope, and the arrival of the absent cardinals: on the tenth, they are imprisoned, each with one domestic, in a common apartment or conclave, without any separation of walls or curtains: a small window is reserved for the introduction of necessaries; but the door is locked on both sides, and guarded by the magistrates of the city, to seelude them from all correspondence with the world. If the election be not consummated in three days, the luxury of their tables is contracted to a single dish at dinner and supper; and after the eighth day, they are reduced to a scanty allowance of bread, water, and During the vacancy of the holy sec, the cardinals are prohibited from touching the revenues, or assuming, unless in some rare emergeney, the government of the church; all agreements and promises among the electors are formally annulled; and their integrity is fortified by their solemn oath and the prayers of the Catholies. Some articles of inconvenient or superfluous rigour have been gradually relaxed, but the principle of confinement is vigorous and entire; they are still urged by the personal motives of health and freedom, to accelerate the moment of their deliverance; and the improvement of ballot or secret votes has wrapt the struggles of the con-

CHAP.

⁷ So the ball of Greeney Nogopal and the considering the Solet of the Canon Law (1) in the consequency of the Description, which Bountae VIII propad for 3 to R and 19 Lipse and 3 h. Thorsell the mass, and (1) theory.

elaye71 in the silky veil of charity and politeness?. By these institutions, the Romans were excluded from the election of their prince and bishon; and in the fever of wild and precarious liberty, they seemed insensible of the loss of this inestimable privilege. The emperor Lewis of ADIAS Bayaria revived the example of the great Otho. After some negociation with the magistrates, the Roman people was assembled⁷¹ in the square before St. Peter's; the pope of Avignon, John the twenty-second, was deposed; the choice of his successor was ratified by their consent and anplause. They freely voted for a new law, that their bishop should never be absent more than three months in the year, and two days journey

5). The genus of contrast & R is hold to here point a conclusrof 1955, in which he was a protator sed-anaster Memories, tom iv p. 15-7 i but lamata lo to appreciat the Inowledge or authority of an aranymous Italian, who can for Conclaveds Pontifici Romani, in the 1907, he because almost me the secon of Alexander VII. The residental form of the work from he co lesson, though not an antidote, to ambition. I rone a laboritate or intribute, we emerge to the adoration of the new fully adulate

73 The expressions of cardinal de Rect in principle of perfuresque. On y vegu tomonis ensemble a colomono recognition meme civility unit Pon observe dans by obtain the comment of the contract of meme politesse qu'on avoit dan. Le core de Her it !!! familiante que l'on voit dans les college : avec l'encir, en et et enc qui le remarque dans les noviciate, et les ellemente charactés mons enappointed, qui pontron ette care ocere a patin meat but the next page op revenilla to need

71 Recline in per bando Says John Villan - 1 (1) isla Regis, a 52 del pagedo, et espitant del 2 e e con obrare 10,2 et 15 biron bulomest, recept rose. Our baselos emanager of forgramonths, bus as from become process a respect to the medically a collegenesses. Yourstook allowed by a arabada tana loo ke as from the city; and that if he neglected to return on the third summons, the public servant should be degraded and dismissed. But Lewis forgot his own debility and the prejudices of the times: beyond the precincts of a German camp, his useless phantom was rejected; the Romans despised their own workmanship; the antipope implored the mercy of his lawful sovereign; and the exclusive right of the cardinals was more firmly established by this unseasonable attack.

LXIX

Absence of the popes from Rome

Had the election been always held in the Vatican, the rights of the senate and people would not have been violated with impunity. But the Romans forget, and were forgotten, in the absence of the successors of Gregory the seventh, who did not keep as a divine precept their ordinary residence in the city and diocese. The care of that diocese was less important than the government of the universal church; nor could the popes delight in a city in which their authority was always opposed, and their person was often endangered. From the persecution of the emperors, and the wars of Italy, they escaped beyond the Alps into the hospitable bosom of France; from the tumults of Rome they prudently withdrew to live and die in the more tranquil stations of Anagni, ⁷⁴ Villant d.s. c. 68—71 in Muratori, Script, tom, xin p. 641—645 relates this law, and the whole transaction, with much less abhorience than the prudent Muratori. Any one conversant with the darker ages must have observed how much the sense (I. mean the nonsense) of superstation is fluctuating and meanisticht.

⁷⁹ In the first volume of the Popes of Avignon, see the second original Life of John XXII p. 142—145., the cocression of the autipope, p. 145—132 and the laborous notes of Balure, p. 714, 713.

Perugia, Viterbo, and the adjacent cities. When the flock was offended or impoverished by the absence of the shepherd, they were recalled by a stern admonition, that St. Peter had fixed his chair, not in an obscure village, but in the capital of the world; by a ferocious menace that the Romans would march in arms to destroy the place and people that should dare to afford them a retreat. They returned with timorous obedience: and were saluted with the account of an heavy debt, of all the losses which their desertion had occasioned, the hire of lodgings, the sale of provisions, and the various expences of servants and strangers who attended the court ?". After a short interval of peace, and perhaps of authority, they were again banished by new tumults, and again summoned by the imperious or respectful invitation of the senate. occasional retreats, the exiles and fugitives of the Vatican were seldom long, or far, distant from the metropolis; but in the beginning of the fourteenth century the apostolic throne was transported, as it might seem for ever, from the Tyber to the Rhône; and the cause of the transmigration may be deduced from the furious 76 Romant autem non valentes ner volentes ultra main celari cupiditatent gravissimain contra papam movere en perunt questionem, exigentes ab eo urgentissime omina que subierant per ejus absentiam damna et jacturas, videlicet in hospitus locandis, in incremionis, in usuris, in reddiubus, in provisionibus, et in alus modis uniumerabilibus. Quod cum audisset papa, præcodraliter ingennut, et se comperiens viso pulatum, Ne. Matt. Paris, p. 737. For the ordinary lustory of the popes, their thin and death, their residence and absence, it is caough to refer to the ecclesiastical aunitists, Spendamis and Fluiry.

VOL. XII.

CHAP. LXIX. Boniface VIII. A D 1294 --1303.

contest between Boniface the eighth and the king of France 77. The spiritual arms of excommunication and interdict were repulsed by the union of the three estates, and the privileges of the Gallican church; but the pope was not prepared against the carnal weapons which Philip the Fair had courage to employ. As the pope resided at Anagni, without the suspicion of danger, his palace and person were assaulted by three hundred horse, who had been secretly levied by William of Nogaret, a French minister, and Sciarra Colonna, of a noble but hos-The cardinals fled; the intile family of Rome. habitants of Anagni were seduced from their allegiance and gratitude; but the dauntless Boniface, unarmed and alone, seated himself in his chair, and awaited, like the conscript fathers of old, the swords of the Gauls. Nogaret, a foreign adversary, was content to execute the orders of his master: by the domestic enmity of Colonna, he was insulted with words and blows; and during a confinement of three days his life was threatened by the hardships which they inflicted on the obstinacy which they provoked. Their strange delay gave time and courage to the adherents of the church, who rescued him from sacrilegious violence; but his imperious soul was wounded in a vital part; and Boniface expired at Rome in a frenzy of rage and revenge. His memory is stained with the glaring vices of avarice and pride; nor has the courage of a martyr promoted this ecclesiastical champion to the honours of a saint; a magnanimous sinner (say the chronicles of the times), who entered like a fox, reigned like a lion, and died like a dog. He was succeeded by Benedict the eleventh, the mildest of mankind. Yet he excommunicated the impious emissaries of Philip, and devoted the city and people of Anagni by a tremendous curse, whose effects are still visible to the eyes of superstition 70.

⁷⁷ Besides the generel historians of the church of Italy and of France, we possess a valuable treatise composed by a learned fruind of Thuanus, which his last and best editors have published in the appendix (Histoire particuliere du grand Differend entre Bomtace VIII et Philippe le Bel, par Pietre du Puts, tour, Vir P xi p 61–32.)

LXIX.

After his decease, the tedious and equal sus- Translapense of the conclave was fixed by the dexterity holy see to of the French faction. A specious offer was Arignon, made and accepted, that, in the term of forty days, they would elect one of the three caudidates who should be named by their opponents. The archbishop of Bourdeaux, a furious enemy of his king and country, was the first on the list; but his ambition was known; and his conscience obeyed the calls of fortune and the commands of a benefactor, who had been informed by a swift messenger that the choice of a pope was now in his hands. The terms were regulated in a private interview; and with such speed and secreey was the business transacted, that the unanimous conclave applauded the elevation of Clement the fifth 79. The cardinals of both parties were soon

A D 1300.

⁷⁸ It is difficult to know whether Labat (tom iv p 53-57) be in jest or in earnest, when he supposes that Anagm still feels the weight of this curse, and that the corn-fields, or vineyards, or olive-. trees, are annually blasted by nature, the obsequious handmand of the popes.

⁷⁹ Sec in the Chronicle of Giovanni Villani (1 vin. c. 63, 64-80. in Muratori, tom, xim) the imprisonment of Bomface VIII and astonished by a summons to attend him beyond the Alps; from whence, as they soon discovered, they must never hope to return. He was engaged, by promise and affection, to prefer the residence of France; and, after dragging his court through Poitou and Gascogny, and devouring, by his expence, the cities and convents on the road, he finally reposed at Avignon so, which flourished above seventy years in the seat of the Roman pontiff and the metropolis of Christendom. By land, by sea, by the Rhône, the position of Avignon was on all sides accessible; the southern provinces of France do not yield to Italy itself; new palaces arose for the accommodation of the pope and cardinals; and the arts of luxury were soon attracted by the treasures of the church. They were already possessed of the adjacent territory, the Venaissin county", a the election of Clement V, the last of which, like most aneedotes, is embarrassed with some difficulties

⁶⁰ The original lives of the eight popes of Avignon, Clement V. John XXII Benedict XII Clement VI. Innocent VI. Urban V. Gregory XI and Clement VII. are published by Stephen Bahaze (Vite Paparum Avenionensum; Paris, 1093, 2 vols. in 4to) with copions and elaborate notes, and a second volume of acts and documents. With the true zeal of an editor and a patriot, he devoutly justifies or excuses the characters of his countrymen.

13 The exile of Avignon is compared by the Itahans with Babylon, and the Babylonish captivity. Such furious metaphors, more smable to the ardour of Petrarch than to the judgment of Muratori, are gravely refinted in Baluze's preface. The Abbé de Sade is distracted between the love of Petrarch and of his country. Yet he modestly pleads that many of the local inconveniences of Avignon are now removed; and many of the vices against which the poet declaims, had been imported with the Roman court by the strangers of Italy (tom 1 p. 23—28)

32 The contat Venassin was ceded to the popes in 1273 by Philip III king of France, after he had inherited the dominion of the count of Thoulouse. Forty years before, the heresy of Count Raymond populous and fertile spot; and the sovereignty of Avignon was afterwards purchased from the youth and distress of Jane, the first queen of Naples and countess of Provence, for the inadequate price of fourscore thousand florins". Under the shadow of the French monarchy, amidst an obedient people, the popes enjoyed an honourable and tranquil state, to which they had long been strangers; but Italy deplored their absence; and Rome, in solitude and poverty, might repent of the ungovernable freedom which had driven from the Vatican the successor of St. Peter. Her repentance was tardy and fruitless: after the death of the old members, the sacred college was filled with French cardinals14, who beheld Rome and Italy with ab-· horrence and contempt, and perpetuated a series of national, and even provincial, popes, attached by the most indissoluble ties to their native country.

CHAP

had given them a pretence of scizure, and they derived some observe claim from the xith century to some lands entra Rhodamun (Vale-u Norma Galharum, p. 495–610. Longuerue, Description de la France, tom. (p. 376—381).

6) If a possession of four centuries were not itself a tale, such objections might annul the bargain; but the purchase-money must be refunded, for indeed it was paid. Critation Avenuous in emit.... per ginsmodi senditionem pecunal redundants, see (mas Vita Clement, VI, in Baluz, tom. i. p. 272. Musaton, Script tom in P. ii, p. 565.). The only temptation for Jane and her second husband was ready money, and without it they could not have returned to the throne of Noples.

ni Clement V innaediately promoted ten cardinals, once I iouch and one English (Vita ivis, p. 63) et Baluz (p. 625, &c.). In 1331, the pope refused two cardidates recommended by the king of France, quod xx Cardinales, de quibus xxii de regno. France originality is noscinitin in memorato collegio existant (Thomassin, Discipline de l'Eglice, toni, i. p. 1281.).

CHAP, LXIX. Institution of the jubilice or holy year, A D 1,000.

The progress of industry had produced and enriched the Italian republies: the æra of their liberty is the most flourishing period of population and agriculture, of manufactures and commerce; and their mechanic labours were gradually refined into the arts of elegance and genius. But the position of Rome was less favourable, the territory less fruitful; the character of the inhabitants was debased by indolence and elated by pride; and they fondly conceived that the tribute of subjects must for ever nourish the metropolis of the church and empire. This prejudice was encouraged in some degree by the resort of pilgrims to the shrines of the apostles; and the last legacy of the popes, the institution of the HOLY YEAR 15, was not less beneficial to the people than to the clergy. Since the loss of Palestine, the gift of plenary indulgences, which had been applied to the crusades, remained without an object; and the most valuable treasure of the church was sequestered above eight years from public circulation. A new channel was opened by the diligence of Boniface the eighth, who reconciled the vices of ambition and avarice; and the pope had sufficient learning to recollect and revive the secular games, which were celebrated in Rome at the conclusion of every century. To sound without danger the depth of popular credulity, a sermon was seasonably proto Our primitive account is from cardinal James Chiefan (Maxima Bibliot, Patrum, tom axv); and I am at a loss to determine whether the nephew of Bontface VIII, be a fool or a knave, the uncle (a a much clearer character.

CHAP

nounced, a report was artfully scattered, some aged witnesses were produced; and on the first of January of the year thirteen hundred, the church of St. Peter was crowded with the faithful, who demanded the customary indulgence of the holy time. pontiff, who watched and irritated their devout impatience, was soon persuaded by ancient testimony of the justice of their claim; and he proclaimed a plenary absolution to all Catholics who, in the course of that year, and at every similar period, should respectfully visit the apostolic churches of St. Peter and St. Paul. The welcome sound was propagated through Christendom; and at first from the nearest provinces of Italy, and at length from the remote kingdoms of Hungary and Britain, the highways were thronged with a swarm of pilgrims who sought to expiate their sins in a journey, however costly or laborious, which was exempt from the perils of military service. exceptions of rank or sex, of age or infirmity, were forgotten in the common transport; and in the streets and churches many persons were trampled to death by the eagerness of devotion. The calculation of their numbers could not be easy nor accurate; and they have probably been magnified by a dextrous clergy, well apprised of the contagion of example: yet we are assured by a judicious historian, who assisted at the ceremony, that Rome was never replenished with less than two hundred thousand strangers; and another spectator has fixed at two millions the total concourse of the year. triffing oblation from each individual would acCHAP. LXIX.

cumulate a royal treasure; and two priests stood night and day, with rakes in their hands, to collect, without counting, the heaps of gold and silver that were poured on the altar of St. Paul 10. It was fortunately a season of peace and plenty; and if forage was scarce, if inns and lodgings were extravagantly dear, an inexhaustible supply of bread and wine, of meat and fish, was provided by the poliev of Boniface and the venal hospitality of the From a city without trade or industry, Romans. all easual riches will speedily evaporate: but the avarice and envy of the next generation solicited Clement the sixth 17 to anticipate the distant period of the century. The gracious pontiff complied with their wishes; afforded Rome this peor consolation for his loss; and justified the change by the name and practice of the Mosaic Jubilee]. His summons was obeyed; and the number, zeal, and liberality, of the pilgrims did not yield to the primitive festival. But they encountered the triple scourge of war, pestilence, and famine: many wives and virgins were violated in the castles of

The second jubility, A D.13-0.

@ See John Villam (I. vun.c. 36.) in the xnth, and the Chrome or Astense, in the xith volume (p. 191, 192.) of Muratori's Collection. Papa innumerabilem pecuniam ab eisdem accepu, nam duo clerici, cum rastris, &c.

⁸⁷ The two bulls of Boniface VIII, and Clement VI, are inserted in the Corpus Juris Canonici (Extravagant, Commun. I. v. tit 1x. c. 1, 2.).

³⁰ The sabbatic years and jubilees of the Mosaic law (Car Sigonde Republica Hebiccount, Opp tom, iv. l. m. c. 14, 15, p. 154, 152; the suspension of all care and labour, the periodical release of lands, debts, servitude, &c. may seem a noble idea, but the excutour would be impracticable in a profame republic, and I should be glad to learn that this ruinous festival was observed by the Jewish people.

Italy: and many strangers were pillaged or murdered by the savage Romans, no longer moderated by the presence of their bishop.". To the impatience of the popes we may ascribe the successive reduction to fifty, thirty-three, and twenty-five years; although the second of these terms is commensurate with the life of Christ. The profusion of indulgences, the revolt of the protestants, and the decline of superstition, have much diminished the value of the jubilee: yet even the nineteenth and last festival was a year of pleasure and profit to the Romans; and a philosophic smile will not disturb the triumph of the priest or the happiness of the people ".

In the beginning of the eleventh century, Italy The nobles was exposed to the feudal tyranny, alike op- of harons pressive to the sovereign and the people. rights of human nature were vindicated by her numerous republics, who soon extended their liberty and dominion from the city to the adjacent country. The sword of the nobles was broken; their slaves were enfranchised; their castles were demolished; they assumed the habits of society and obedience; their ambition was confined to municipal honours, and in the proudest aristocracy of Venice or Genoa, each patrician was subject to the laws 91. But the feeble and disorderly government of Rome was unequal to the task of curbing her rebellious sons, who scorned the authority of the magistrate within and without the walls. It was no longer a civil contention between the nobles and plebeians for the government of the state: the barons asserted in arms their personal independence; their palaces and eastles were fortified against a siege; and their private quarrels were maintained by the numbers of their vassals and retainers. origin and affection, they were aliens to their country": and a genuine Roman, could such have been produced, might have renounced there haughty strangers, who disdained the appellation of citizens, and proudly styled themselves the princes, of Rome ". After a dark series of revolutions, all records of pedigree were lost; the distinction of surnames were abolished: the blood of the nations was mingled in a thousand channels; and the Goths and Lombards, the Greeks and Franks, the Germans and Normans, had obtained the fairest possessions by royal bounty, or the prerogative of valour. These examples might be readily presumed: but the elevation of an Hebrew race to the rank of senators and consuls, is an event without a parallel in the long captivity of these miserable exiles". time of Leo the ninth, a wealthy and learned Jew was converted to Christianity; and honoured at his baptism with the name of his godfather, the reigning pope. The zeal and courage of Fundy of Peter the son of Leo were signalised in the cause of Gregory the seventh, who entrusted his faithful adherent with the government of Adrian's mole, the tower of Crescentius, or, as it is now called, the eastle of St. Angelo. Both the father and the son were the parents of a numerous progeny: their riches, the fruits of usury, were shared with the noblest families of the city; and so extensive was their alliance, that the grandson of the proselyte was exalted by the weight of his kindred to the throne of St. Peter. A majority of the elergy and people supported his cause: he reigned several years in the Vatican, and it is only the eloquence of St. Bernard, and the final triumph of Innocent the second, that has branded Anacletus with the epithet of antipope. After his defeat and death, the posterity of Leo is no longer conspicuous; and none 94 The origin and adventures of this Tewish family are noticed by Page Critica, tom av. p. 435 A D. 1124, No 3, 4), who draws his information from the Chronographus Mauriginacen to, and Armil-, plus Sagrensis de Schismate in Muratori, Sempt. Ital tom 1 a P. 1 p 423—432.) The fact must assume degree betrue, ver I could wish flacin had been coolly related, before it was turned into a terrach against die impope.

100 See the Chronicle of Matteo Villani (1 1, c. 56.) in the xivili volume of Muratori, and the Memoires sur la Vie de Petraique, tom in. p 75-89

90 The subject is exhausted by M. Chais, a French minister at the Hague, in his Lettres Historiques et Dogmatiques, sur les Jubiles et les Indulgences; la Haye, 1751, à vols in 12mo, an elaborate and pleasing work, had not the author preferred the character of a polemic to that of a philosopher.

⁹⁾ Muraton (Dissert, Men.) alleges the Annals of Florence, Padua, Genoa, See, the analogy of the rest, the evidence of Otho of France of (de Coest, Fred. I. I. u. 6, 13.), and the submission of the marquis of Este.

⁹² As early as the year 824, the emperor Lothaire I, found it expedient to interrogate the Roman people, to learn from each individual, by what national law lie choic to be governed (Muraton, Discourage).

⁹⁵ Petrarch attacks these foreigners, the tyrants of Rome, in a declimation or epistle, full of bold truths and absurd pedantry in which he applies the maxims, and even propulities, of the old republic to the state of the lawth century (Memories, form in p. 157—160).

CHAP.

CHAP, LXIX

will be found of the modern nobles ambitious of descending from a Jewish stock. It is not my design to enumerate the Roman families, which have failed at different periods, or those which are continued in different degrees of splendour to the present time"5. The old consular line of the Fran-Finani discover their name in the generous act of breaking or dividing bread in a time of famine: and such benevolence is more truly glorious than to have enclosed, with their allies the Corsi, a spacious quarter of the city in the chains of their fortifications: the Savelli, as it should seem a Sabine race, have maintained their original dignity: the obsolete surname of the Capizuechi is inscribed on the coins of the first senators: the Conti preserve the honour, without the estate, of the counts of Signia; and the Annibaldi must have been very ignorant, or very modest, if they had not descended from the Carthaginian hero 96.

The Co-Jonna. . But among, perhaps above, the peers and princes of the city, I distinguish the rival houses 65 Muratori has given two dissertations (xli, and xlii) to the names, surnames, and families of Italy. Some nobles, who glory in their doing the Italies, may be offended with his firm and temperate crinersm, yet surely some ounces of pure gold are of more value, than many pounds of base metal.

49 The cardinal of St. George, in his poetical, or rather metrical, littory of the election and coronation of Bomface VIII. (Minatori, Script, Ital tom in P i p. 641, &c.), describes the state and families at Rome at the coronation of Boniface VIII. (A. D. 1295.).

Interea titulis redimiti sanguine et armis Illustresque viri Romana a stupe trahentes Nomen in emeritos tante virtutis honores Intulciant se medios festinique colebant, Aurata fulgentes toga sociante catervá. of COLONNA and URSINI, whose private story is an essential part of the annals of modern Rome. I. The name and arms of Colonna thave been the theme of much doubtful etymology; nor have the drators and antiquarians overlooked either Trajan's billar, or the columns of Hercules, or the pillar of Christ's flagellation, or the luminous column that guided the Israelites in the desert. Their first historical appearance in the year eleven hundred and four, attests the power and antiquity, while it explains the simple meaning, of the name. By the usurpation of Cavæ, the Colonna provoked the arms of Paschal the second; but they lawfully held in the Campagna of Rome, the hereditary fiefs of Zagarola and Colonna; and the latter of these towns was probably adorned with some lofty pillar, the relie of a villa or temple". They likewise possessed one moiety of the neighbouring city of Tusculum; a strong presumption of their de-

CHAP. LXIX.

F: psis devota domus præstantis ab Usai Ecclesiæ, vultumque gerens demissins altum Fe ta Columna joets, necnon Salellia mitis; Stephanides semor, Comites, Ambalica profes, Præfectusque urbis magnum sine viribus nomen (l.n. c. 5, 100 p. 647, 648).

The ancient statutes of Rome (L. in. c. 59 p. 174, 175 i distinguish eleven families of barons, who are obliged to swear in concilio communi, before the senator, that they would not harbour or protect any malefactors, outlaws, &c—a leeble security!

97 It is pity that the Colonna themselves have not favoured the world with a complete and critical history of their illustrious house. I adhere to Muraton (Dissert, xlii, tour 10, p. 647, 648.)

98 Parthulph, Pisan, in Vit Paschal, H in Muratori, Script Ital tom ii P i, p. 335. The family has still great possession- in the Campagna of Rome; but they have alienated to the Rospechiosi this original fiel of Culonna (Eschmard, p. 258, 259).

CHAP.

scent from the counts of Tusculum, who in the tenth century were the tyrants of the apostolic see. According to their own and the public opinion, . the primitive and remote source was derived from the banks of the Rhine "; and the sovereigns of Germany were not ashamed of a real or fabulous affinity with a noble race, which in the revolutions of seven hundred years has been often illustrated by merit, and always by fortune ". About the end of the thirteenth century, the most powerful branch was composed of an uncle and six brothers, all conspicuous in arms, or in the honours of the church. Of these, Peter was elected senator of Rome, introduced to the Capitol in a triumphant car, and hailed in some vain acclamations with the title of Cæsar; while John and Stephen were declared marguis of Ancona and count of Romagna, by Nicholas the fourth, a patron so partial to their family, that he has been delineated in satirical portraits, imprisoned as it were in a hollow pillar 101. After his decease, their haughty Te longmqua dedit tellus et pascua Rhem, says Petrarch, and, in 1417, a duke of Guelders and Juliers acknowledges (Lenfant, Hist du Concile de Constance, tom a p 539) his descent from the ancestors of Martin V. (Otho Colombal but the royal author of the Memoirs of Brandenburg observes, that the sceptre in his arms has been confounded with the column To maintain the Roman origin of the Coloma, it was ingeniously supposed (Diarro di Monaldeschi, in the Script, Ital. tom, xii, p. 533), that a cousin of the emperor Nero escaped from the city, and founded Mentz in Germany.

¹⁰⁰ I cannot overloo!, the Roman triumph or ovation of Marco Antonio Colonna, who had commanded the pope's gallies at the analysis victory of Lepanto (Thuan, Hist. I. 7, tom, iit p. 55, 50 Murct Olatio x Opp. tom, I. p. 180—190 ().

¹⁰¹ Muiston, Aunah d'Itaha, tom. x. p. 216-220.

behaviour provoked the displeasure of the most implacable of mankind. The two cardinals, the uncle and the nephew, denied the election of Boniface the eighth; and the Colonna were oppressed for a moment by his temporal and spiritual He proclaimed a crusade against his personal enemies; their estates were confiscated; their fortresses on either side of the Tyber were besieged by the troops of St. Peter and those of the rival nobles; and after the ruin of Palestrina or Præneste, their principal seat, the ground was marked with a ploughshare, the emblem of perpetual desolation. Degraded, banished, prescribed. the six brothers, in disguise and danger, wandered over Europe without renouncing the hope of In this double hope, deliverance and revenge. the French court was their surest asylum: they prompted and directed the enterprise of Philip; and I should praise their magnanimity, had they respected the misfortune and courage of the His civil acts were annulled captive tyrant. by the Roman people, who restored the honours and possessions of the Colonna; and some estimate may be formed of their wealth by their losses, of their losses by the damages of one hundred thousand gold florins which were 102 Petrarch's attachment to the Colonna, has authorised the Abbé de Sade to expatate on the state of the family in the tourteenth century, the persecution of Bontiece VIII., the character of Stephen and his sons, their quarrels with the Ursin, &c. (Memories sin Petraique, tom. i. p. 98—110–149—148. 174—176–222—230. 273—280.) His entiresm often rectifies the hearsay stone of Villani, and the errors of the less diligent moderns. I understood the branch of Stephen to be now exting a granted them against the accomplices and heirs of the deceased pope. All the spiritual censures and disqualifications were abolished 103 by his prudent successors; and the fortune of the house was more firmly established by this transient The boldness of Sciarra Colonna himricane. was signalized in the captivity of Boniface; and long afterwards in the coronation of Lewis of Bayaria; and by the gratitude of the emperor, the pillar in their arms was encircled with a royal crown. But the first of the family in fame and merit was the elder Stephen, whom Petrarch loved and esteemed as an hero superior to his own times, and not unworthy of ancient Rome. Persecution and exile displayed to the nations his abilities in peace and war; in his distress he was an object, not of pity, but of reverence; the aspect of danger provoked him to avow his name and country: and when he was asked, "where is now your fortress?" he laid his on his heart, and answered, "here." He supported with the same virtue the return of prosperity; and, till the ruin of his declining age, the ancestors, the character, and the children of Stephen Colonna, exalted his dignity in the Roman republic, and at the court of

CITAP. LXIX

and Ursini, Avignon. II. The Ursini migrated from Spo-

¹⁰³ Alexander III. had declared the Colonna who adhered to the emperor Frederic I. incapable of holding any ecclesiastical benefice (Villani, I. v. c. 1.); and the last stains of annual excomnumeration, were purified by Sixtus V. (Vita di Sisto V. tom 10.1 p 416. Treason, sacrilege, and proscription, are often the best titles of ancient nobility.

leto104; the sons of Ursus, as they are styled in the twelfth century, from some eminent person, who is only known as the father of their race. But they were soon distinguished among the nobles of Rome, by the number and bravery of their kinsmen, the strength of their towers, the honours of the senate and sacred college, and the elevation of two popes, Celestin the third and Nicholas the third, of their name and lineage 105. Their riches may be accused as an early abuse of nepotism: the estates of St. Peter were alienated in their favour by the liberal Celestin 116; and Nicholas was ambitious for their sake to solicit the alliance of monarchs; to found new kingdoms in Lombardy and Tuscany: and to invest them with the perpetual office of senators of Rome. All that has been observed of 104 — Vallis te proxima inisit Appenninigenæ qua prata virentia sylvæ Spoletana metant amenta greges protervi.

CHAP LXIX

Monaldeschi (tom xm. Script, Ital (p. 533)) gives the Ursini a French origin, which may be remotely true

10) In the metrical life of Celestin V, by the Cardinal of St George Muratori, tom. in. P. i. p. 613, &c (we find a luminous, and not includent, passage (l. i. c. 3, p. 203, &c.)

Progenie , Romana domus, veterataque magnis Fascibus in clero, pompasque experta scincii, , Bellorumque manú grandi stipata parentum Cardineos apiers necnon fastigia dudum Papatús dicada tenens.

Muratori (Desert, xhi tom, ni.p. .) observes, that the first Ursmi pontificate of Celestine III, was unknown: he is inclined to read Ursi progenies.

106 Filit Ursi, quondam Colestini papae nepotes, de bours eet lessae Ronjana: difatr (Vit. Innocent. III. in Muratori, Seript tom iii. P. 1.) The partial prodigality of Nicholas III. is more conspicuous in Villam and Muratori. Yet the Ursim would disdam the nephews of a modern pope.

CHAP.

Then headiling

the greatness of the Colonna, will likewise redound to the glory of the Ursini, their constant and equal antagonists in the long hereditary feud. which distracted above two hundred and fifty years the ecclesiastical state. The jealousy of pre-eminence and power was the true ground of their quarrel; but as a specious badge of distinction, the Colonna embraced the name of Ghibelines and the party of the empire; the Ursini espoused the title of Guelphs and the cause of the church. The cagle and the keys were displayed in their adverse banners; and the two factions of Italy most furiously raged when the origin and nature of the dispute were long since forgotten 107. After the retreat of the popes to Avignon, they disputed in arms the vacant republic; and the mischiefs of discord were perpetuated by the wretched compromise of electing each year two rival senators. their private hostilities, the city and country were desolated, and the fluctuating balance inclined with their alternate success. But none of either family had fallen by the sword, till the most renowned champion of the Ursini was surprised and slain by the younger Stephen Colonna 10. His triumph is stained with the reproach of violating the truce; their defeat was basely avenged by the assassination, before the church door, of an innocent boy and his two servants. Yet the victorious Colonna, with an annual colleague, was declared senator of Rome during the term of five years. And the muse of Petrarch inspired a wish, a hope, a prediction, that the generous youth, the son of his venerable hero, would restore Rome and Italy to their pristine glory; that his justice would extirpate the wolves and lions, the serpents and bears, who laboured to subvert the eternal basis of the marble collean.

¹⁰⁷ In his fifty-first Dissertation on the Italian Antiquities, Muratori Aplains the factions of the Guelphs and Ghilolines.

¹⁰³ Petrarch (tom. i p. 222-230.) has celebrated this victory according to the Colonua, but two contemporaries, a Charentine (Giovanni Villani, I v. c. 220.) and a Roman (Ludovico Monalidechi, p. 533, 534.) are less favourable to their aims.

²⁰³ The Abbi de Sade (tom. i. No es, p. 01—40., has applied the rath Canzone of Petrarch, Spatio Grafif, see to Stephen Coloma by vonger

> Ord, lupi, leoni, aquile e serpi Ad qua gron manuorea (do va Panno noja savente e a se dana)

CHAP, LXX.

Character and Coronation of Petrarch.—Restora tion of the Freedom and Government of Rome by the Tribune Rienzi.—His Virtues and Vices. his Expulsion and Death .- Return of the Popes from Avignon .-- Great Schism of the West .--Re-union of the Latin Church.—Last Struggles of Roman Liberty .-- Statutes of Rome .- Fund Settlement of the Ecclesiastical State.

CHAP LXXPetrarch, A D 1.:01. Jan 19fuls to

In the apprehension of modern times, Petrarch 1 is the Italian songster of Laura and love. In the harmony of his Tuscan rhymes, Italy applauds, or rather adores, the father of her lyric AD 1671, poetry: and his verse, or at least his name, is repeated by the enthusiasm, or affectation, of amorous sensibility. Whatever may be the private taste of a stranger, his slight and superficial knowledge should humbly acquiesce in the taste of a learned nation: yet I may hope or presume, that the Italians do not compare the tedious uniformity of sonnets and elegies, with the sublime compositions of their epic muse, the original wildness of Dante, the regular beauties of Tasso, and the boundless variety of the incomparable Ariosto. The merits of the lover, I am still less qualified to appreciate: nor am I deeply interested in a metaphysical passion for a nymph so shadowy, that her existence has been questioned; for a matron so prolific, that she was delivered of eleven legitimate children', while her amorous swain sighed and sung at the fountain of Vaucluse . But in the eyes of Petrarch, and those of his graver contemporaries, his love was a sin, and Italian verse a frivolous amusement. His Latin works of philosophy, poetry, and cloquence, established his serious reputation, which was soon diffused from Avignon over France and ^{3.1} our de Noco, horn about the year 1307, was mained in January 1325 to Hugues de Sade, a noble curren of Avigoon, who epidon ywas not the effect of love, mee he marined a second within seven months of her death, which happened the 6th of April, 1345, piece ely one-and-twenty years after Petrarch had seen and loved her.

> ¹ The Memoires sur la Vie de François Petrarque (Amsterdam, 1764, 1767, 3 vols in 4to) form a copious, original, and entertaining work, a labour of love, composed from the accurate study of Petrarch and his contemporaries; but the hero is too often lost in the general history of the age, and the author too often languishes in the affectation of politeness and gallantry. In the preface to his first volume, he enumerate and weighs twenty Itahan booraphers, who have protessedly treated of the same subject

⁵ Vanchier, so familiar to our English travellers, is described from the writings of Petrarch, and the Israel knowled conclusion in p. 40—450. If was, in truth, the retreat of an hermit, and the moderos are much initiation, if cospilate Laura and an happy lover in the grotor.

LIXX

Italy: his friends and disciples were multiplied in every city; and if the ponderous volume of his writings" be now abandoned to a long repose, our gratitude must applaud the man, who by precept and example revived the spirit and study of the Augustan age. From his earliest youth, Petrarch aspired to the poetic crown. The academical honours of the three faculties had introduced a royal degree of master or doctor in the art of poetry; and the title of poet-laureat, which custom, rather than vanity, perpetuates in the English court, was first invented by the Cæsars of Germany. In the musical games of antiquity, a prize was bestowed on the victor";

⁶ Of (2.0) pages, in a close print, at Basil in the with color ary, but without the date of the year. The Abbe de Sade calls along for a new educined Petrarch's Latin works, but I much doubt whether it would redound to the profit of the beokseller, or the annumement of the public.

⁷ Consult Schlon's Tules of Hermar, in his work of his q 437—460 CAn hus fred years before Petrarch, St. 14 (1) (1) (2) (2) the visit of a post, qui ab imperatore fuerat coronal (1) (2) (2) ver mum die to

We from Angastus to Lour, the muse has too one, no in the and venal but I much doubt whether any are or constron produce a similar establishment of a superdury post, vino in every reign, and at all events, is bound to himself twice ever a not one praise and verse, such as may be sing in the chapel, and, I behave, in the presence, of the sovereign. I speak the more fieldy, as the best time for abolishing this radiculous costom, is while the purious is a man of gentue, and the post a man of gentue.

² Isociates (in Panegymo), tom 1 p. 110, 117 edit. Bathe, Centab. 1720) claims for his native Athens the glory of first instituting and recommending the σ_cσνες και τα σθεα μεγικά μα μετες τογείς και δοσκες αλοά και λοσκε κει μοσες. The example of the Panathenica was initiated at Delphi, but the Olympic gaines were ignorate of a musical crown, till it was extorted by the vain tyromy of Nero (Suction in Nerone, c. 23). Philostrat, apid Casculson of locum, Dron Cosens, or Xiphilm, I Isin. p. 10-2. 1041. Potter's Greek Anniquities, col. § p. 445–450.

the belief that Virgil and Horace had been crowned in the Capitol inflamed the emulation of a Latin bard "; and the laurel" was endeared to the lover by a verbal resemblance with the name of his mistress. The value of either object was enhanced by the difficulties of the pursuit; and if the virtue or prudence of Laura was inexorable 12, he enjoyed, and might boast of cujoving, the nymph of poetry. His vanity was not of the mo t delicate kind, since he applauds the success of his own labours; his name was popular; his friends were active; the open or seerct opposition of envy and prejudice was surmounted by the dexterity of patient merit. In the thirty-sixth year of his age, he was solicited to accept the object of his wishes: and on the same day, in the solitude of Vaucluse, he received a similar and solemn invitation from the senate of Rome and the university of Paris. The learning of a theological school, and the ignorance of a lawless city, were alike unqualified to bestow the

3. The Capitoline Land (certainen quanquentle, vertex, engineering Lymaneum), were insociated by Doomton's Section et all another pear of Christ 80. Centon's de Die Natah, et 18 p. 100 cmt. Have camply, and were not alof hold in the roth century (Austriana Procesionhus Buidisal V. Highterrown were Lycenton appearant, the exclusion of Smans. Capitolia mostas (adiciatelysis, Sch. Lin v. 3). may do homo in vertice games of the Capitoly and the Luni poets whicheed below. Domittangwere crowns body in the public oparion.

1) Petratch and the senators of Rome were ranso in that the band was not the Capitonia, but the Delphic, ero yn Par Hi (Notur xv. 20). Hist Critique de la Republione de Tattie, tom 1/p 150-220.) The victors in the Capitor were crowned with a garland of collectives. Morald, Lav epoternia.

12 The pous grades and Louri by Libour, a and not without the external care has a real factor of some strong or and of the control of the con ideal though immortal wreath which genius may obtain from the free applause of the public and of posterity: but the candidate dismissed this troublesome reflection, and after some moments of complacency and suspense, preferred the summons of the metropolis of the world.

His poche coronation at Rome, A D 1341, April 8

The ceremony of his coronation " was performed in the Capitol, by his friend and patron the supreme magistrate of the republic. Twelve patrician youths were arraved in searlet; six representatives of the most illustrious families, in green robes, with garlands of flowers, accompanied the procession; in the midst of the princes and nobles, the senator, count of Anguillara, a kinsman of the Colonna, assumed his throne; and at the voice of an herald Petrarch arose. After discoursing on a text of Virgil, and thrice repeating his vows for the prosperity of Rome, he knelt before the throne, and received from the senator a laurel crown, with a more precious declaration, "This is the reward of merit." shouted, "Long life to the Capitol and the poet" A sonnet in praise of Rome was accepted as the effusion of genius and gratitude; and after the whole procession had visited the Vatican, the profane wreath was suspended before the shrine of St. Peter. In the act of diploma " which was

⁴³ The whole process of Petranh's coronation is accurately described by the Abbé de Sade (tom, r. p. 42)—430 tom, n. p. 1—6, notes, p. 1—157 from his own writings, and the Roman Diany of Ladovico Monaldeschi, without mixing in this authentic narrative do more recent fables of Sammeco Delbene.

¹⁴ The original act is printed among the Pieces Jusuficatives in the Memories sur Petrague, tomeign near-sea presented to Petrarch, the title and prerogatives of poet laureat are revived in the Capitol, after the lapse of thirteen hundred years; and he receives the perpetual privilege of wearing, at his choice, a crown of laurel, ivy, or myrtle, of assuming the poetic habit, and of teaching, disputing, interpreting, and composing, in all places whatsoever, and on all subjects of literature. The grant was ratified by the authority of the senate and people; and the character of citizen was the recompense of his affection for the They did him honour, but they Roman name. did him justice. In the familiar society of Cicero and Livy, he had imbibed the ideas of an ancient patriot; and his ardent fancy kindled every idea to a sentiment, and every sentiment to a passion. The aspect of the seven hills and their majestic ruins confirmed these lively impressions; and he loved a country by whose liberal spirit he had been crowned and adopted. The poverty and debasement of Rome excited the indignation and pity of her grateful son: he dissembled the faults of his fellow-citizens; applauded with partial fondness the last of their heroes and matrons; and in the remembrance of the past, in the hope of the future, was pleased to forget the miseries of the present time. Rome was still the lawful mistress of the world: the pope and the emperor, the bishop and general, had abdicated their station by an inglorious retreat to the Rhône and the Danube: but if she could resume her virtue, the republic might again vindicate her liberty and dominion. Amidst the indulgence of enthusiasm and eloquence?, Petrarch, Italy, and Europe, were astonished by a revolution which realized for a moment his most splendid visions. The rise and fall of the tribune Rienzi will occupy the following pages in: the subject is interesting, the materials are rich, and the glance of a patriot-bard if will sometimes vivity the copious, but simple, narrative of the Florentine is, and more especially of the Roman is, historian.

TXZ

WTo find the proofs of this culturary for Rome, I in VI cally request that the reader would open, by chance, either Percach, or his French biographer. The Into r has described the proof of a visit to Rome (ton, e.p., G.)—25.5. But in the place of electric and interned and morality, Petrarch undit have amused the process and future ago with a municipal account of the city and his core account.

46 It has been treated by the pear of a Jesuit, the P. Ju Cenjero, whose positionnous well a Compitation de Nicola Command the Nicola Greena, of Build, Fyran de Rome, on 1547 was published of P. 1778, or 1200. I am indebted to him for conclusional document on the affections, canon of Lagge, a contemporary history of the concentration of Lagrena and District Late med. Also, tom in p. 273, tom where a first contemporary is some of the contemporary in the contem

17 The Alba' de Sale, who so freely expand to the first three such as the project makes the continuous properties as he project makes to the action of Merce at tour in p. 50, (1), 320—417, notes; p. 70—70 forming a selection of Books and action as the wind of the continuous probability coupled blue.

16 Groyana Villani, I. xu. с. 80, 104, уг. Маглота, R. сан. Гейьс туп Scriptores, tom.х.н. р. 090, 070, 031—288.

Ohr his third, dume of Indian autiquities p. 26 --- 18. Matation less in critical the Fragmenta Historice Remaine ab. Anno. 1/37 1/8ppc ad Ammun 13.54, in the original dialect of Rome of Naples in the sixth ecentury, and a Latin version for the benefit of stranger. It contains the most particular and authorite line of Color Nicholis, di Rien, 1, which had been punied at Biacciano 10.27, in 460, i. in the name of Tomeso Fortmocea, who is only mentioned in a swords. In v. 2, 1 con paint-field by the Informetic for cry. Phonoa mature is careely capable of sixth adding to step-of impartancy and with exercise the author of the c. Frequency, be with

OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE.

In a quarter of the city which was inhabited cuty only by mechanics and Jews, the marriage of an . innkeeper and a washerwoman produced the future Bath, the deliverer of Rome . From such parents Nicholas Rienzi Gabrini could inherit neither dignity nor de ras of fortune; and the gift of a liberal education, which they painfully bestowed, was the cause of his glory and untimely end. The study of history and cloquence, the writings of Cicero, Scneca, Livy, Casar, and Valerius Maximus, elevated above his equals and contemporaries the genius of the young plebeian: he perused with indefatigable diligence the manuscripts and marbles of antiquity; loved to dispense his knowledge in familiar language; and was often provoked to exclaim, "Where are now " these Romans? their virtue, their justice, their " power? why was I not born in those happy " times 2" When the republic addressed to the throne of Avignon an embassy of the three orders, the spirit and cloquence of Rienzi recommended a mer pocar Lat the ten it and points, verticuted etc. the armine, of Rome and the character of the fishing

* The first and plenoid cried of Riems, in aribinate a -verge ear, a contained in the court chapter of the True out-(p. 304-479), which, in the new division, forms the rid been of the lattery maximum smaller chapter, cr sections,

2) The reader may be pleased with a specimen of the original amon. Lo da soa piventinane metrica i di latte di elequentia, beno granaturo, meghore rettuorico, amorista bawo. Deh coro et quanto cia veloce lentore" moatosusava Tuo Livio, Sene a, et Tidho, et Balerio Massina, monto li allerte e le in la mecuta, di Julio Ce ne roccontare. Tinta la dese se serolle a ne. P. rotach di marmo lequali na cio intorno Roma. Non era din che e e, che sepesse lejere li antichi petathi. Tech cintino attotic vidagnoand quescripts of or no just note that a art. Oh come superior control December appelled to the first descent less in practice of females are a country processing at an - him to a place among the thirteen deputies of the commons. The orator had the honour of haranguing pope Clement the sixth, and the satisfaction of conversing with Petrarch, a congenial mind; but his aspiring hopes were chilled by disgrace and poverty; and the patriot was reduced to a single garment and the charity of the hospital. From this misery he was relieved by the sense of merit or the smile of favour; and the employment of apostolic notary afforded him a daily stipend of five gold florins, a more honourable and extensive connection; and the right of contrasting, both in words and actions, his own integrity with the vices of the state. The eloquence of Rienzi was prompt and persuasive: the multitude is always prone to envy and censure: he was stimulated by the loss of a brother and the impunity of the assassins; nor was it possible to excuse or exaggerate the public calamities. The blessings of peace and justice, for which cival society has been instituted, were banished from Rome: the jealous citizens, who might have endured every personal or pecuniary injury, were most deeply wounded in the dishonour of their wives and daughters : they were equally oppressed by the arrogance of the nobles and the corruption of the magistrates; and the abuse of arms or of laws was the only circumstance that distinguished the lions, from the dogs and serpents, of the Capitol. These allegorical emblems were variously repeated in the pictures which Rienzi exhibited in the streets and

Pen och compares the paionsy or the Romans, with the casy temperature has band of Avignon Meanures, tour rap 7.00

CHAP

LXX

churches; and while the spectators gazed with curious wonder, the bold and ready orator unfolded the meaning, applied the satire, inflamed their passions, and announced a distant hope of The privileges of comfort and deliverance. Rome, her eternal sovereignty over her princes and provinces, was the theme of his public and private discourse; and a monument of servicude became in his hands a title and incentive of liberty. The decree of the senate, which granted the most ample prerogatives to the emperor Vespasian, had been inscribed on a copper-plate still extant in the choir of the church of St. John Lateran23. A numerous assembly of nobles and plebeians was invited to this political lecture, and a convenient theatre was erected for their reception. The notary appeared, in a magnificent and mysterious habit, explained the inscription by a version and commentary", and descanted with eloquence and zeal on the ancient glories of the senate and people, from whom all legal authority was derived. The supine ignorance of the nobles was incapable of discerning the serious tendency of such representations: they might sometimes chastise with words and blows the plebeian reformer: but he was often suffered in the Colonna palace to amuse the company with his threats and predictions; and the modern Brutus was concealed under the mask of folly and the character of a buffoon. While they indulged their contempt, the restoration of the good estate, his favourite expression, was entertained among the people as a desirable, a possible, and at length as an approaching, event; and while all had the disposition to applaud, some had the courage to assist, their promised deliverer.

While trigments of the Let Regreemby be found by the Lectuptions of Graret, tool (1/p) 532, and at the end of the Tactas of Triesh, with some learned notes of the editor, tom/9

²⁹ Feating overlook a tripendoe and Taugh the blander of Rienzi. The Lex regia empowers Verposian to estimate the Poincerum, a word familier to every antiquary. It was not so to the tribunes, the community is sufficiently accordingly (ranslates lo Jandino de Roma crosse Frida, and is copied by the less excussible transfer over the Lamitian Lucosip (600), and the French Instormation of Period Regianary of Maraton has standard over the Lamitian Lucosian.

CHAP. LXX.

He assumes the government of Rome. May 20;

A prophecy, or rather a summons, affixed on the church door of St. George, was the first publie evidence of his designs; a nocturnal assembly A D 1347, of a hundred citizens on Mount Aventine, the first step to their execution. After an oath of secrecy and aid, he represented to the conspirators the importance and facility of their enterprise; that the nobles, without union or resources, were strong only in the fear of their imaginary strength; that all power, as well as right, was in the hands of the people; that the revenues of the apostolical chamber might relieve the public distress; and that the pope himself would approve their victory over the common enemies of government and freedom. After securing a faithful band to protect his first declaration, he proclaimed through the city, by sound of trumpet, that on the evening of the

Pron (Bed.) Canch stathor, juvenis interque, longa ingenio prove opis suculation or manerat, in alchocolitemic liberator P. P. Again, the Commission of A. Hiller, white his twanties, tre with District following day all persons should assemble without arms before the church of St. Angelo, to provide for the re-establishment of the good estate. The whole night was employed in the celebration of thirty masses of the Holy Ghost; and in the morning, Rienzi, bareheaded, but in complete armour, issued from the church, encompassed by the hundred conspirators. The pope's vicar, the simple bishop of Orvieto, who had been persuaded to sustain a part in this singular ceremony, marched on his right hand; and three great standards were borne aloft as the emblems of their design. In the first, the banner of liberty, Rome was seated on two lions, with a palm in one hand and a globe in the other: St. Paul, with a drawn sword, was delineated in the banner of justice; and in the third, St. Peter held the keys of concord and peace. Rienzi was encouraged by the presence and applause of an innumerable crowd, who understood little, and hoped much; and the procession slowly rolled forwards from the eastle of St. Angelo to the Capitol. His triumph was disturbed by some secret emotion which he laboured to suppress: he ascended without opposition, and with seeming confidence, citadel of the republic; harangued the people from the balcony; and received the most flattering confirmation of his acts and laws. nobles, as if destitute of arms and counsels. beheld in silent consternation this strange revolution; and the moment had been prudently chosen, when the most formidable, Stephen Colonna, was Asent tom the city On the first rumour, he returned to his palace, affected to despise this plebeian tumult, and declared to the messengers of Rienzi, that at his leisure he would cast the madman from the windows of the Ca-The great bell instantly rang an alarm, pitol. and so rapid was the tide, so urgent was the danger, that Colonna escaped with precipitation to the suburb of St. Laurence: from theuce. after a moment's refreshment, he continued the same speedy career till he reached in safety his cartle of Palestrina; lamenting his own imprudence, which had not trampled the spark of this mighty conflagration. A general and peremptory order was issued from the Capitol to all the nobles, that they should peaceably retire to their estates: they obeyed; and their departure secured the tranquillity of the free and obedient citizens of Rome.

with the title and other of tubine But such voluntary obedience evaporates with the first transports of zeal; and Rienzi felt the importance of justifying his usurpation by a regular form and a legal title. At his own choice, the Roman people would have displayed their attachment and authority, by lavishing on his head the names of senator or consul, of king or emperor: he preferred the ancient and modest appellation of tribune; the protection of the commons was the essence of that sacred office; and they were ignorant, that it had never been invested with any share in the legislative or executive powers of the republic. In this character, and with the consent of the Romans, the tribune cuacted the most salutary laws for the restoration and maintenance of the good estate. By the first he fulfils the wish of honesty and inexperience, that no civil suit should be protracted beyond the term of fifteen days. The danger of frequent perjury might justify the pronouncing against a false accuser the same penalty which his evidence would have inflicted: the disorders of the times might compel the legislator to punish every homicide with death, and every injury with equal But the execution of justice was retaliation. hopeless till he had previously abolished the tyranny of the nobles. It was formally provided, that none, except the supreme magistrate, should possess or command the gates, bridges, or towers, of the state: that no private garrisons should be introduced into the towns or castles of the Roman territory; that none should bear arms, or presume to fortify their houses in the city or country; that the barons should be responsible for the safety of the highways, and the free passage of provisions; and that the protection of malefactors and robbers should be expiated by a fine of a thousand marks of silver. But these regulations would have been impotent and nugatory, had not the licentious nobles been awed by the sword of the civil power. A sudden alarm from the bell of the Capitol could still summon to the standard above twenty thousand volunteers: the support of the tribune and the laws required a more regular and permanent force. In each harbour of the coast, a vessel was stationed for the assurance of commerce; a standing militia of three hundred and sixty horse and thirteen hundred foot was levied, clothed, and paid in the thirteen quarters of the city: and the spirit of a commonwealth may be traced in the grateful allowance of one hundred florins, or pounds, to the heirs of every soldier who lost his life in the service of his country. For the maintenance of the public defence, for the establishment of granaries, for the relief of widows, orphans, and indigent convents, Rienzi applied, without fear of sacrilege, the revenues of the apostolic chamber: the three branches of hearth-money, the salt-duty, and the customs, were each of the annual produce of one hundred thousand florins"; and scandalous were the abuses, if in four or five months the amount of the salt-duty could be trebled by his judicious economy. After thus restoring the forces and finances of the republic, the tribune recalled the nobles from their solitary independence; required their personal appearance in the Capitol; and imposed an oath, of allegiance to the new government, and of submission to the laws of the good estate. Apprehensive for their safety, but still more apprehensive of the danger of a refusal, the princes and barons returned to their houses at Rome in the garb of simple and peaceful citizens: the Colonna and Ursini, the Savelli and Frangipani, were confounded before the tribunal of a plebeian, of the vile buffoon

Lawy of the good citate

CHAP.

CILAP

W. In one MS, I read along a 1-p (400.5) performante quarto set, an another quarto pleriar, an amportant variety, since the floring vew outleten Roman solute. Must out, this cite, while The former trading would are us a population of 25,000, the latter of 250,000 families, and I much for that the former remove consistent varieties delived a Roma and her territory.

whom they had so often derided, and their dis- CHAP grace was aggravated by the indignation which they vainly struggled to disguise. The same oath was successively pronounced by the several orders of society, the elergy and gentlemen, the judges and notaries, the merchants and artizans, and the gradual descent was marked by the increase of sincerity and zeal. They swore to live and die with the republic and the church, whose interest was artfully united by the nominal association of . the bishop of Orvicto, the pope's vicar, to the office of tribune. It was the boast of Rienzi. that he had delivered the throne and patrimony of St. Peter from a rebellious aristocracy; and Clement the sixth, who rejoiced in its fall, affeeted to believe the professions, to applaud the merits, and to confirm the title, of his trusty servant. The speech, perhaps the mind, of the tribune, was inspired with a lively regard for the purity of the faith; he insinuated his claim to a supernatural mission from the Holy Ghost; euforced by an heavy forfeiture the annual duty of confession and communion; and strictly guarded the spiritual as well as temporal welfare of his faithful people.4

Never perhaps has the energy and effect of a Freedom single mind been more remarkably felt than in and prothe sudden, though transient, reformation of the Ro-Rome by the tribune Rienzi. A den of rob- pullic bers was converted to the discipline of a camp

²⁷ Poc emins, p. 428 april du Cere et, Hea de Rienzi, p. 194 The Lacentin on attended in the Leave I make Roman historian awhora for breva, I half name Torntocce, I n. c. 4

CHAP, LXX. or convent: patient to hear, swift to redress. inexorable to punish, his tribunal was always accessible to the poor and stranger; nor could birth, or dignity, or the immunities of the church, protect the offender or his accomplices. The priveged houses, the private sanctuaries in Rome, on which no officer of justice would presume to trespass, were abolished; and he applied the timber and iron of their barricades in the fortifications of the Capitol. The venerable father of the Colonna was exposed in his own palace to the double shame of being desirous, and of being unable, to protect a crimi-A mule, with a jar of oil, had been stolen near Capcapica; and the lord, of the Ursini family, was condemned to restore the damage, and to discharge a fine of four hundred florins for his negligence in guarding the highways. Nor were the persons of the barons more inviolate than their lands or houses; and, either from accident or design, the same impartial rigour was exercised against the heads of the adverse factions. Peter Agapet Colonna, who had himself been senator of Rome, was arrested in the street for injury or debt; and justice was appeased by the tardy execution of Martin Ursini, who, among his various acts of violence and rapine, had pillaged a shipwrecked vessel at the mouth of the Tyber". His name, the purple of two ³⁸ Fortificera, L.n. c. 11. From the account of this shipwreck, we learn ome cucum tances of the trade and navigation of the age. 1 The hip was built and freighted at Naples for the port, of Marseilles and Avignon. 2 The salor, were of Naples and the cardinals, his uncles, a recent marriage, and a mortal disease, were disregarded by the inflexible tribune, who had chosen his victim. The public officers dragged him from his palace and nuptial bed; his trial was short and satisfactory; the bell of the Capitol convened the people: stript of his mantle, on his knees, with his hands bound behind his back, he heard the sentence of death; and after a brief confession Ursini was led away to the gallows. After such an example, none who were conscious of gailt could hope for impunity, and the flight of the wicked, the licentious, and the idle, soon purified the city and territory of Rome. this time (says the historian) the woods began to rejoice that they were no longer infested with robbers; the oxen began to plow; the pilgrims visited the sanctuaries; the roads and inus were replenished with travellers; trade, plenty, and good faith, were restored in the markets; and a purse of gold might be exposed without danger in the midst of the highway. As soon as the life and property of the subject are secure, the labours and rewards of industry spontaneously revive: Rome was still the metropolis of the Christian world; and the fame and fortunes of the tribune were diffused in every country by cle of Cenaria, less saint than those of Soal, and Genoa at The navigation from Maiscilles was a constine voyage to the month of the Tyber, where they took helici mare form, but, instead of finding the current unfortunately rayon a head the vessel was stranded, the rearness capied at The cargo which was pilloged, tone) tool of the revenue of Provenic for the roy differently, many base of peoper and current on, and hales of French cloth, to the value of 20,000 florm—vaich puta.

The inlaine is respected in Italy, &c.

CHAP.

the strangers who had enjoyed the blessings of his government.

The deliverance of his country inspired Rienzi with a vast, and perhaps visionary, idea of uniting Italy in a great feederative republic, of which Rome should be the ancient and lawful head, and the free cities and princes the members and associates. His pen was not less cloquent than his tongue; and his numerous epistles were delivered to swift and trusty messengers. On foot, with a white wand in their hand, they traversed the forests and mountains; enjoyed, in the most hostile states, the sacred security of ambassadors; and reported, in the style of flattery or truth, that the highways along their passage were lined with kneeling multitudes, who implored Heaven for the success of their undertaking. Could passion have listened to reason; could private interest have yielded to the public welfare; the supreme tribunal and confederate union of the Italian republic might have healed their intestine discord, and closed the Alps against the Barbarians of the North. But the propitious season had clapsed; and if Venice, Florence, Sienna, Perugia, and many inferior cities, offered their lives and fortunes to the good estate, the tyrants of Lombardy and Tuscany must despise, or hate, the plebeian author of a free constitution. From them, however, and from every part of Italy, the tribune received the most friendly and respectful answers: they were followed by the ambassadors of the princes and republics; and in this foreign conflux, on all the occasions of pleasure or business, the low-born not by could assume the familiar or majestic a TXX contess of a severeign ". The most glorious circu astance of his reign was an appeal to his justice from Lewis king of Hungary, who complained. that his brother, and her husband, had been perfidiously strangled by Jane queen of Naples '; her guilt or innocence was pleaded in solemn trial at Rome; but after hearing the advocates a, the tribune adjourned this weighty and invidious cause, which was soon determined by the sword of the Hungarian. Beyond the Alps, more especially at Avignen, the revolution was the theme of curiosity, wonder, and applause. Petrarch had been the private friend, perhaps the secret counsellor, of board by Riepzi: his writings breathe the most ardent Penach. spirit of patriotism and joy; and all respect for the pope, all gratitude for the Colonia, was lost in the superior duties of a Roman citizen. The poet-laureat of the Capitol maintains the

- At year thin the Ohyer Cremyell's old legitant mee, who reto substrated a videar and magnetons cantainer into the House of Common , were a stom he lat the case and majesty of the protector on his thread see Hory & Line of Cromwell, p. 27-44. From Claa clea, Warakl, Wintelocks, Waller, &c. the correbut ac-s or eacht and power will sometimes elevate the manners to the

O See the care, caronia times, and cheers of the death of Audow, to Crimione, Control Lyan, p. 240-2203, and the Loc of Perrach (Memoires, tone in p. 143-146, 245-20, 75-570. notes, p. 21-27. The Aleberte Sub-presented a note and that and

¹ The advocate value pleade Lagran t Trac, could add nothin, to the loosed force and breaty of his marter's coather. Johannal inofdinal vira percolor, a rempo por tarana sego, perlecta virbetti, vir alter sicce property of a anathor inbeginning mean viri tur te probest for a prescipum et con orden. Jane of Naples, and M. you Scaland have a great rolling material act, applauds the hero, and mingles with some apprehension and advice the most lofty hopes of the permanent and rising greatness of the republic ³².

CHAP.

His vices and follies.

While Petrarch indulged these prophetic visions, the Roman hero was fast declining from the meridian of fame and power; and the people, who had gazed with astonishment on the ascending meteor, began to mark the irregularity of its course, and the vicissitudes of light and obscurity. More eloquent than judicious, more enterprising than resolute, the faculties of Rienzi were not balanced by cool and commanding reason: he magnified in a tenfold proportion the objects of hope and fear; and prudence, which could not have erected. did not presume to fortify, his throne. In the blaze of prosperity, his virtues were insensibly tinctured with the adjacent vices; justice with cruelty, liberality with profusion, and the desire of fame with puerile and ostentatious vanity. He might have learned, that the ancient tribunes, so strong and sacred in the public opinion, were not distinguished in style, habit, or appearance, from an ordinary plebeian ; and that as often as they visited the city on foot, a in his Roman Questions, Plutarch (Opuscul tom i p. 50), 500, 600. Grac. Hen Steph vistates, on the most constitutional principles, the simple greatness of the tubinars, who were not properly magistrates, but a check on in custing y. It was then dury and interest (procedure reports) on 5-typen harmy this crossly procedure single viator, or beadle, attended the exercise of their office. The Gracchi would have frowned or smiled, could they have read the sonorous titles and epithets of their successor, "NICHOLAS, SEVERE "AND MERCIFUL; DELIVERER OF ROME; DE-" FENDER OF ITALY"; FRIEND OF MANKIND. "AND OF LIBERTY, PEACE, AND JUSTICE; "TRIBUNE AUGUST:" his theatrical pageants had prepared the revolution; but Ricnzi abused, in luxury and pride, the political maxim of speaking to the eyes, as well as the understanding, of the multitude. From nature he had received the gift of an handsome person ", till it was swelled and disfigured by intemperance; and his propensity to laughter was corrected in the magistrate by the affectation of gravity and stermess. He was clothed, at least on public occasions, in a partycoloured robe of velvet or satin, lined with fur. and embroidered with gold: the rod of jurtice, which he carried in his hand, was a sceptre of polished steel, crowned with a globe and cross of gold, and inclosing a small fragment of the true

³² See, the Ppistola Horiatoria de Cape, senda Republica, from Petrarch to Nicholas Rienzi (Opp. p. 545—440), and the vth ecloque or pastoral, a peoperical and observe allegory.

CHAP Lλx. **∽

²¹ could not express in English the forable, though barbarons, title of Zelebo Tahas, which Rien crassianed

Of as bell homo (b.n.c. 1 p. 360)— It is remarkable, that the riso sareastico of the Braceiono edition is wanting in the Roman MS from which Muratori has given the text. In his second reign, when the is painted almost as a monster, Rienzi travia una ventresca tornic trionade, a modo de uno Abbate Astano, or Asiano (d. m. c. 18 p. 3718).

TZZ:

and holy wood. In his civil and religious processions through the city, he rode on a white steed, the symbol of royalty: the great banner of the republic, a sun with a circle of stars, a dove with an olive branch, was displayed over his head; a shower of gold and silver was scattered among the populace; fifty guards with halberds encompassed his person; a troop of horse preceded his march; and their tymbals and trumpets were of massy silver.

The pump of his faithful hood, AD 1347, August I

The ambition of the honours of chivalry " betraved the meanness of his birth, and degraded the importance of his office; and the equestrian tribune was not less odious to the nobles, whom he adopted, than to the plebeians, whom he descried. All that yet remained of treasure, or luxury, or art, was exhausted on that solemn day. Rienzi led the procession from the Capitol to the Lateran; the tediousness of the way was relieved with decorations and games; the ecclesiastical, civil, and military orders marched under their various banners; the Roman ladies attended his wife; and the ambassadors of Italy might loudly appland, or secretly deride, the novelty of the pomp. In the evening, when they had reached the church and palace of Constantine, he thanked and dismissed the numerous assembly, with an invitation to the festival of the ensuing day.

deStraige is it well seein, this to treaf was not without a precedent. In the year 1527, two barous, a Colonna and an Ursier, the usual balance, were created laughts by the Roman peoples; their bath was of resessator, their beds were decked with royal magnificence, and they were screed at St. Markof Aracelian the Capatol, by the twenty-eight inest known: They afterwards received from Robert Ling of Saples the sword of chiralty. Hist, Rom. I a c. C. p. 250.

From the hands of a venerable knight he received the order of the Holy Ghost; the purification of the bath was a previous ceremony; but in no step of his life did Rienzi excite such scandal and censure as by the profane use of the porphyry vase. · · · in which Constantine (a foolish legend) had been healed of his leprosy by pope Sylvester '. With equal presumption the tribune watched or reposed within the consecrated precincts of the baptistery; and the failure of his state-bed was incorrected as an omen of his approaching downfal. At the hour of worship, he shewed himself to the returning crowds in a majestic attitude, with a robe of purple, his sword, and gilt spurs; but the holy rites were soon interrupted by his levity and insolence. Rising from his throne, and advancing towards the congregation, he proclaimed in a loud voice: "We summon to our tribunal pope Cle-" ment; and command him to reside in his dio-"cese of Rome: we also summon the sacred " college of cardinals". We again summon the " two pretenders, Charles of Bohemia and Lewis " of Bayaria, who style themselves emperors: " we likewise summon all the electors of Ger-"many, to inform us on what pretence they have [5] All parter behaved in the lepto y and both of Contentine (Petraich, I pet. Found vi. 2 s, and Riemzi justified his owner of addition by observing to the count of Avignon, that a vasa which had been need by a Pagan could not be profund by a possible train Yet this crime te specified in the bull of excommunication (The example appendix Appellant).

o This collab summons of pape Clement VI, which rests on the cuthout, of the Roman historia, and a Vascan MS is disputed by the biographer of Petrach ctom in not p 70—76 y with accuments rather of deceases than of wordin. The court of Assenouies to not chase to ego, it this delicate question. CHAP.

" usurped the inalienable right of the Roman peo-" ple, the ancient and lawful sovereigns of the " empire "." Unsheathing his maiden sword, he thrice brandished it to the three parts of the world, and thrice repeated the extravagant declaration, " And this too is mine!" The pope's vicar, the bishop of Orvicto, attempted to check this career of folly; but his feeble protest was sileneed by martial music; and instead of withdrawing from the assembly, he consented to dine with his brother tribune, at a table which had hitherto been reserved for the supreme pontiff. A banquet, such as the Casars had given, was prepared for The apartments, porticoes, and the Romans. courts, of the Lateran were spread with innumerable tables for either sex, and every condition; a stream of wine flowed from the nostrils of Constantine's brazen horse; no complaint, except of the scarcity of water, could be heard; and the licentiousness of the multitude was curbed by discipline and fear. A subsequent day was appointed for the coronation of Rienzi "; seven crowns of different leaves or metals were successively placed on his head by the most eminent of the Roman clergy; they represented the seven gifts of the Holy Ghost; and he still professed to imitate the example of the ancient tribunes. These extraordinary spectacles might deceive or flatter the

and coronation

9 The summons of the two rival emperors, a monument of free-dom and folly, is extint in Horsenius (Cerceut, p. 103-100).

⁴⁰ It is singular, that the Roman Instorian should have overlood of this sevenfold coronation, which is sufficiently proved by internal evidence, and the testimony of Hocsenius, and even of Richel (Cenycan, p. 467—470, 220).

people; and their own vanity was gratified in the CHAP vanity of their leader. But in his private life he soon deviated from the strict rule of frugality and abstinence; and the plebeians, who were awed by the splendor of the nobles, were provoked by the luxury of their equal. His wife, his son, his uncle (a barber in name and profession), exposed the contrast of vulgar manners and princely expence: and without acquiring the majesty, Rienzi degenerated into the vices, of a king.

A simple citizen describes with pity, or perhaps. For and with pleasure, the humiliation of the barons of hand of Rome. " Barcheaded, their hands crossed on their of Rome " breast, they stood with downcast looks in the pre-"sence of the tribune; and they trembled, good " God, how they trembled" As long as the yoke of Rienzi was that of justice and their country, their conscience forced them to esteem the man, whom pride and interest provoked them to hate: his extravagant conduct soon fortified their hatred by contempt; and they conceived the hope of subverting a power which was no longer so deeply rooted in the public confidence. The old animosity of the Colonna and Ursini was suspended for a moment by their common disgrace: they associated their wishes, and perhaps their designs; an assassin was seized and tortured; he accused the nobles; and as soon as Rienzi deserved the fate, he adopted the suspicions and maxims, of a tyrant. On the same day, under various pretences, he invited to the Capitol his principal enemies, among whom were five members of the Ursini and three of the Colonna name. But instead of a council or a banquet, they found themselves prisoners under the sword of despotism or justice; and the consciousness of innocence or guilt might inspire them with equal apprehensions of danger. At the sound of the great bell the people assembled; they were arraigned for a conspiracy against the tribune's life; and though some might sympathise in their distress, not a hand, nor a voice, was raised to rescue the first of the nobility from their impending Their apparent boldness was prompted by despair; they passed in separate chambers a sleepless and painful night; and the venerable hero, Stephen Colonna, striking against the door of his prison, repeatedly urged his guards to deliver him by a speedy death, from such ignominious servitude. In the morning they understood their sentence from the visit of a confessor and the tolling of the bell. The great hall of the Capitol had been decorated for the bloody scene with red and white hangings: the countenance of the tribune was dark and severe; the swords of the executioners were unsheathed; and the barons were interrupted in their dying speeches by the sound of trumpets. But in this decisive moment, Rienzi was not less anxious or apprehensive than his captives: he dreaded the splendor of their names, their surviving kinsmen, the inconstancy of the people, the reproaches of the world, and, after rashly offering a mortal injury, he vainly presumed that, if he could forgive, he might himself be forgiven. His elaborate oration was that of a Christian and a suppliant; and, as the humble minister of the commons, he entreated his masters to pardon these noble criminals, for whose repentance and future service he pledged his faith and authority. " If "you are spired," said the tribune, " by the " mercy of the Romans, will you not promise " to support the good estate with your lives and " fortunes " Astonished by this marvellous clemency, the barons bowed their heads; and while they devoutly repeated the oath of allegiance, might whisper a secret, and more sincere, assurance of revenge. A priest, in the name of the people, pronounced their absolution; they received the communion with the tribunc, assisted at the banquet, followed the procession; and, after every spiritual and temporal sign of reconciliation, were dismissed in safety to their respective homes, with the new honours and titles of generals, consuls, and patricians".

³¹ Puoi se ticeva state dename ace, mentre ecdeva, li baroni turn in piedi inti co le viacem piecite, e co li capucci tratti - Deli como stavano paurosi! (Hist. Rom 1 n. c. 20. p. 430). He caw them, and we go them

LXZ CHAP

During some weeks they were checked by the They memory of their danger, rather than of their deli- oppose verance, till the most powerful of the Ursini, and escaping with the Colonna from the city, erected at Marino the standard of rebellion. The fortifications of the castle were instantly restored; the

^{$2} The original letter, to which River pictures his treatment of the Colombia Hore value, aparl du Cerçeau, p. 222—2295, di play car camar colora , the masons of the knay and madman

vassals attended their lord; the outlaws armed against the magistrate; the flocks and herds, the harvests and vineyards, from Marino to the gates of Rome, were swept away or destroyed; and the people arraigned Rienzi as the author of the calamities which his government had taught them to forget. In the camp, Rienzi appeared to less advantage than in the rostrum; and he neglected the progress of the rebel barons till their numbers were strong, and their castles impregnable. From the pages of Livy, he had not imbibed the art, or even the courage, of a general: an army of twenty thousand Romans returned without honour or effect from the attack of Marino: and his vengeance was amused by painting his enemies, their heads downwards, and drowning two dogs (at least they should have been bears) as the representatives of the Ursini. The belief of his incapacity encouraged their operations: they were invited by their secret adherents; and the barons attempted, with four thousand foot and sixteen hundred horse, to enter Rome by force or surprise. The city was prepared for their reception: the alarm-bell rung all night; the gates were strictly guarded, or insolently open; and after some hesitation they sounded a retreat. two first divisions had passed along the walls, but the prospect of a free entrance tempted the headstrong valour of the nobles in the rear; and after a successful skirmish, they were overthrown and massacred without quarter by the crowds of the Roman people. Stephen Colonna the vorager, the noble spirit to whom Petrarch ascribed the restoration of Italy, was preceded or a companied in death by his son John, a gallant youth, by his brother Peter, who might regret the ease and honours of the church, by a nephew of lessimate birth, and by two bastards of the Colonea taxe; and the number of seven, the seven crown, as Rienzi styled them, of the Hely C.l. st, v.e., completed by the agony of the deplatable point, and the veteran chief, who had survived the hope and fortune of his house. The vi in and 1: phecies of St. Martin and pope Boniface had been used by the tribune to animate his trops : he displayed, at least in the pursuit, the spirit of an hero; but he forgot the maxims of the ancient Romans, who abhorred the triumphs of civil war. The conqueror ascended the Capitol; deposited his crown and sceptre on the altar; and boasted with some truth, that he had cut off an ear, which neither pope nor emperor had been able to amputate". His base and implacable revenge denied the honours of burial; and the bodies of the Colonna, which he threatened to expose with those of the vilest malefactors, were 45 Rienzi, in the above-mentioned letter, ascribes to St. Mariin the tribune, Bomtace VIII, the enemy of Colomia, houself, and the Roman people, the glory of the day, which Villam his wire of 12, c. 104.5 describes as a regular bantle. The disorderly slavinish, the flight of the Romans, and the cowardice of Rienzi, are painted in the simple and uninite narrative of Fortmose a, or the anonymous efficient. In Co.34—37.

Defeat of and death of the Colonna, ; Nov. 20,

OF THE ROMAN EMPIRE

49 In describing the fall of the Coloma, I speak only of the family of Stephen the elder, who is often contourable boy the P dur Conjean with his son. That family we contriguousled, I but he home less them parpeture durable collar felt on the softwine't I be a not be reconstructed in the collar felt on the softwine't I be a not be reconstructed in which is Colombia, which is some softwine some softwine as more supportant to the softwine Qualitation at more supportant to the softwine processing the softwine softwine.

1 \\

CHAP.

secretly interred by the holy virgins of their name and family. The people sympathised in their grief, repented of their own fury, and detested the indecent joy of Rienzi, who visited the spot where these illustrious victims had fallen. It was on that fatal spot, that he conferred on his soif the honour of knighthood: and the ceremony was accomplished by a slight blow from each of the horsemen of the guard, and by a ridiculous and inhuman ablution from a pool of water, which was yet polluted with patrician blood 10.

Fill and flight of thembune Rienzi, A D.1347, Dec. 15. A short delay would have saved the Colonua, the delay of a single month, which clapsed between the triumph and exile of Rienzi. In the pride of victory, he forfeited what yet remained of his civil virtues, without acquiring the fame of military prowess. A free and vigorous opposition was formed in the city; and when the tribune proposed in the public council to impose a new tax, and to regulate the government of Perugia, thirty-nine members voted against his measures; repelled the injurious charge of 45 The convent of St. Silvester was founded, endowed, and protected by the Colonna cardinals, for the daughters of the randy who embraced a monastic life, and who, in the year 1318, were twelve in number. The others were allowed to marry with their lansation in the fourth degree, and the dripen attori was just field by the small number and closs alliances of the noble families of Rome (Memorres on Petropore, tomas p. 110, town usp. 30).

Petraich wrote a sait and pedantic letter of consolatem. Land Lyin epist 13, p. 602, 66 c. The mend was lost in the pain of Nulla toto orbe prin apanetamiha carior, caron tamen respirible i, caron Roma, carior Italia.

Je rends graces out Doors de n'etre pas Romaire

Within control and opposition is one unity incurrant to Petlistory, a contemporary conservation opposition of open curves and original facts effect. It make to a torn obey on top (748-5) 4.

treachery and corruption; and urged him to carry prove, by their forcible exclusion, that, if the alax populace adhered to bis cause, it was already disclaimed by the most respectable citizens. The pope and the sacred college had never been dazzled by his specious professions; they were justly offended by the insolence of his conduct; a cardinal legate was sent to Italy, and after some fruitless treaty, and two personal interviews, befulminated a bull of exconagunication, in which the tribune is degraded from his office, and branded with the guilt of rebellion, scerilege, and heresy 13. The surviving barons of Rome were now humbled to a sense of allegiance; their interest and revenge engaged them in the service of the church; but as the fate of the Colonna was before their eyes, they abandoned to a private adventurer the peril and glory of the revo-John Pepin, count of Minorbino in the kingdom of Naples, had been condemned for his crimes, or his riches, to perpetual imprisonment; and Petrarch, by soliciting his release, indirectly contributed to the ruin of his friend. At the head of one hundred and fifty soldiers, the count of Minorbino introduced himself into Rome; barricaded the quarter of the Colema;

4) The briefs and bulls of Clearent VI (2) and Perma, are to exlated by the P du Cerei et ap. 100 (232, no march 1994) recent Annals of Odenous Raynables A D 14.7, No 1 (47) 41, 80 . who found them in the archives of the Victoria and found the enterprise as easy as it had seemed impossible. From the first alarm, the bell of the Capitol incessantly tolled; but, instead of repairing to the well-known sound, the people was silent and inactive; and the pusillanimous Rienzi, deploring their ingratitude with sighs and tears, abdicated the government and palace of the republic.

⁴⁾ Matter Villam des elles the origin, character, and death of this count of Minorland, a man da nature mediastatic escala fede, y so eggradiother, a creaty norms, westernabed and chard. The Soft the San Live Notice I very 10st, 20st. See his impressionera, and the officer of Persich (the just 149-1;

Revolutions of Rome, A D 1 (4)

Without drawing his sword, count Pepia restored the aristocraey and the church; three senators were chosen, and the legate assuming the first rank, accepted his two colleagues from the rival families of Colonna and Ursini. The acts of the tribune were abolished, his head was proscribed; yet such was the terror of his name. that the barons hesitated three days before they would trust themselves in the city, and Rienzi was left above a month in the eastle of St. Angelo, from whence he peaceably withdrew, after labouring, without effect, to revive the affection and courage of the Romans. The vision of freedom and empire had vanished: their fallen spirit would have acquiesced in servitude, had it been smoothed by tranquillity and order: and it was scarcely observed, that the new senators derived their authority from the Apostolic See; that four cardinals were appointed to reform, with dictatorial power, the state of the republic. Rome was again agitated by the bloody feuds of the barons, who detested each other, and despised the commons: their hostile fortresses, both in town and country, again rose, and were again demolished; and the peaceful citizens, a flock of slocy, were devoured, says the Florentine historian, by these rapacious wolves. But when their pride and avarice had exhausted the patience of the Romans, a confraternity of the Virgin Mary protected or avenged the republic: the bell of the Capitol was again tolled, the nobles in arms trembled in the presence of an unarmed multitude; and of the two senators, Colonna escaped from the window of the palace, and Ursini was stoned at the foot of the altar. The dangerous office of tribune was successively occupied by two plebeians, Cerroni and Baroncelli. The mildness of Cerroni was unequal to the times; and after a faint struggle, he retired with a fair reputation and a decent fortune to the comforts of inval Devoid of eloquence or genius, Baroncelli was distinguished by a resolute spirit: he spoke the language of a patriot, and trod in the footsteps of tyrants; his suspicion was a sentence of death, and his own death was the reward of his cruelties. Amidst the public misfortunes, the faults of Rienzi were forgotten; and the Romans sighed for the peace and prosperity of the good estate."

After an exile of seven years, the first deli- Advenverer was again restored to his country. In the Richard disguise of a monk or a palgrim, he escaped from the castle of St. Angelo, implored the triendship of the king of Hungary at Naples, tempted the ambition of every bold adventurer, 56 The troubles of Rome, from the departure to the return of Recura, are related by Marco Villamalan c. 37. 1 m. c. 35, 57-78.) and Thomas Formhore of an extent of these dightly provide over the discondary character, who mutated the original tubure mingled at Rome with the pilgrims of the jubilee, lay concealed among the hermits of the Apennine, and wandered through the cities of Italy, Germany, and Bohemia. His person was invisible, his name was yet formidable; and the anxiety of the court of Avignon supposes, and even magnifies, his personal merit. The emperor Charles the fourth gave audience to a stranger, who frankly revealed himself as the tribune of the republic; and astonished an assembly of ambassadors and princes, by the eloquence of a patriot and the visions of a prophet, the downfal of tyranny and the kingdom of the Holy Ghost's. Whatever had been his hopes, Rienzi found himself a captive; but he supported a character of independence and dignity, and obeyed, as his own choice, the irresistible summons of the supreme pontiff. The zeal of Petrareh, which had been cooled by the unworthy conduct, was rekindled by the sufferings and the presence, of his friend; and he boldly complains of the times, in which the saviour of Rome was delivered by her emperor A prisoner into the hands of her bishop. Rienzi was transported slowly, but in safe custody, from Prague to Avignon: his entrance into the city was that of a malefactor; in his prison he was chained by the leg; and four cardinals were named to inquire into the crimes of heresy and rebellion.

at Avignon. AD 1351.

⁵¹ These visions, of which the friends and chemic of Rienzi seem alike ignorant, it cannot marinted by the real of Polli tore, a Dominican inquisitor (Rev. Ital. tom. xxv. c. 56, p. 819.). Had the tribine taught, that Christ was succeeded by the Holy Gho t, that the tyrene, of the pope would be abolished, he might have been convicted of heresy and treason, without offending the Roman people

But his trial and condemnation would have involved some questions, which it was more prudent to leave under the veil of mystery: the temporal supremacy of the popes; the duty of residence; the civil and ecclesiastical privileges of the clergy and people of Rome. The reigning pontiff well deserved the appellation of Clement: the strange vicissitudes and magnanimous spirit of the captive excited his pity and esteem; and Petrarch believes that he respected in the hero the name and sacred character of a poet". Rienzi was indulged with an easy confinement and the use of books; and in the assiduous study of Livy and the bible, he sought the cause and the consolation of his misfortunes.

The succeeding pontificate of Innocent the Rienzi, sixth opened a new prospect of his deliverance Rome, and restoration; and the court of Avignon was AD 104 persuaded, that the successful rebel could alone appease and reform the anarchy of the metropo-After a solemn profession of fidelity, the Roman tribune was sent into Italy, with the title of scuator; but the death of Baroncelli appeared to supersede the use of his mission; and the legate, cardinal Albornoza, a consummate statesman,

2 The astoni-liment, the ency almost, of Petrarch's a proof of not of the truth of the mere blde as the best of his over versetty The Aldo' de Sale. Memone, tom in peace grote the certh crayle of the winth book of Petroich, but it is of the royd MS. which he consided, and not of the ordinary Berlieuters, p. C.0.

5. Leidnis, to Cules Albonia, a noble Spensad, nebbi hop of Toledo, and cardwal let us an Italy A. D. (1) 3— 6.07 , by tored, by his mins, ad corn. Is, the temperal common of the pope-His his his been by aid, women by Sepulce to but Daylor could not reconclude appear that the arrest or the core Wolfer, mate a had the early real Man on Den Chamber allowed him with reluctance, and without aid, to undertake the perilous experiment. His first reception was equal to his wishes: the day of his entrance was a public festival; and his eloquence and authority revived the laws of the good estate. But this momentary sunshine was soon clouded by his own vices and those of the people: in the Capitol, he might often regret the prison of Avignon: and after a second administration of four months. Rienzi was massacred in a tumult which had been fomented by the Roman barons. In the society of the Germans and Bohemians, he is said to have contracted the habits of intemperance and cruelty: adversity had chilled his enthusiasm, without fortifying his reason or virtue; and that youthful hope, that lively assurance, which is the pledge of success, was now succeeded by the cold impotence of distrust and despair. The tribune had reigned with absolute dominion, by the choice, and in the hearts, of the Romans: the senator was the servile minister of a foreign court; and while he was suspected by the people, he was abandoned by the prince. The legate Albornoz, who seemed desirous of his ruin, inflexibly refused all supplies of men and money; a faithful subject could no longer presume to touch the revenues of the apostolical chamber; and the first idea of a tax was the signal of clamour and sedition. Even his justice was tainted with the guilt or reproach of selfish cruelty: the most virtuous citizen of Rome was sacrificed to his jealousy; and in the execution of a public robber, from whose purse he had been assisted, the magistrate too much forgot, or too much remembered, the obligations of the debtor ". A civil war exhausted his treasures, and the patience of the city: the Colonna maintained their hostile station at Palestrina; and his mercenatics soon despised a leader whose ignorance and fear were envious of all subordinate merit. death as in the life of Rieuzi, the hero and the coward were strangely mingled. When the Capitol was invested by a furious multitude, when he was basely deserted by his civil and military servants, the intrepid senator, waving the banner of liberty, presented himself on the balcony, addressed his eloquence to the various passions of the Romans, and laboured to persuade them, that in the same cause himself and the republic must either stand or fall. His oration was interrupted by a volley of imprecations and stones; and after an arrow had transpierced his hand, he sunk into abject despair, and fled weeping to the inner chambers, from whence he was let down by a sheet before the windows of the prison. Destitute of aid or hope, he was besieged till the evening: the doors of the Capitol were destroyed with axes and fire; and while the senator attempted to escape in a plebeian habit, he was discovered and dragged to the platform of the palace, the fatal scene of his judgments and executions. A whole hour, without voice or motion, he stood amidst the multitude half naked and half dead; their rage was hushed into curiosity and wonder: the last feelings of

CHAP.

^{} From Matrix Villar ed Forr or a the Para Cove vi Q 244—2016, have treeted the line and death of the characterist, the Lie of a robber and the death of an hero. As the head of a free company, the correspondents of Plata, he becomes hand serents block, had more in all the boar a bigourdness on Pada calone.

1 X Z V He doub Sept. 8.

reverence and compassion vet struggled in his fayour; and they might have prevailed, if a bold assassin had not plunged a dagger in his breast. ADD 13 is He fell senseless with the first stroke; the impotent revenge of his enemies inflicted a thousand wounds; and the senator's body was abandoned to the dogs, to the Jews, and to the flames. Posterity will compare the virtues and failings of this extraordinary man; but in a long period of anarchy and servitude, the name of Rienzi has often been celebrated as the deliverer of his country, and the last of the Roman patriots 1.

Petroch mendan the empa ror Charles ١١. ADBB6. Janu uy-May.

The first and most generous wish of Petrareli mand was the restoration of a free republic; but after the exile and death of his plebeian hero, he turned his eyes from the tribune, to the king, of the Romans. The Capitol was yet stained with the blood of Rienzi, when Charles the fourth descended from the Alps to obtain the Italian and Imperial In his passage through Milan he received the visit, and repaid the flattery, of the poet-laureat; accepted a medal of Augustus; and promised, without a smile, to imitate the founder of the Roman monarchy. A false application of the names and maxims of antiquity was the source of the hopes and disappointments of Petrarch; yet he could not overlook the difference of times and characters; the immeasurable distance between the first Casars and a Bohemian prince, who by the favour of the clergy had been elected the titular head of the German aristocracy. Instead of restoring to Rome her glory and her provinces, he had bound himself, by a secret treaty with the Pope, to evacuate the city on the day of his coronation; and his shameful retreat was pursued by the reproaches of the patriot bard ".

³⁵ The cycle, record poverment, and death of Rich i, are mimutely related by the propositions Roman, who appears really this freedoor by cropped for a factor of Pennien, who loved the color, was infulcient to the interesting in a con-

After the loss of liberty and empire, his third He chouse ! and more humble wish, was to reconcile the shepherd with his flock; to recal the Roman bishop mon-to-by to his ancient and peculiar diocese. In the fervour dense at of youth, with the authority of age, Petrarch addressed his exhortations to five successive popes, and his eloquence was always inspired by the enthusiasm of sentiment and the freedom of language 7. The con of a citizen of Florence invariably preferred the country of his birth to that of his education; and Italy, in his eyes, was the queen and garden of the world. Amidst her domestic factions, she was doubtless superior to France both in art and science, in wealth and politeness; but the difference could searetly support the epithet of barbarous, which he promiscuously bestows on the countries beyond the Alps. Avignon, the mystic Babylon, the sink of vice and corruption, was the object of his hatred and con-

56 The hopes and the disappointment of Per nels are agreedly decembed in his own words by the Trench biographer 7 Memories, tom in p. 37 -4132; but the deep, though ecret, wound, was the coronation of Zamubi the porclaim at, by Cherle, IV

'7 See in his accurate and anni mg beer , her, the a pheation of Petrarch and Rome to Beather XII made and of Memones, tomat partition, to Clement VI in Forchour up 45-47% and to I then V in 2006 from in p 127-401. This perio p. 711—71 — ada en e. p. 771 - ol escha or de e ponтов. Наструктовой ступпействерство во и от Гълго ed Jedymay be from 1. Opp. p. 100 - 100 * tempt; but he forgets that her scandalous vices were not the growth of the soil, and that in every residence they would adhere to the power and luxury of the papal court. He confesses, that the successor of St. Peter is the bishop of the universal church; yet it was not on the banks of the Rhône, but of the Tyber, that the apostle had fixed his everlasting throne; and while every city in the Christian world was blessed with a bishop, the metropolis alone was desolate and forlorn. Since the removal of the Holy See, the sacred buildings of the Lateran and the Vatican, their altars and their saints, were left in a state of poverty and decay; and Rome was often painted under the image of a disconsolate matron, as if the wandering husband could be reclaimed by the homely portrait of the age and infirmities of his weeping spouse". But the cloud which hung over the seven hills, would be dispelled by the presence of their lawful sovereign: eternal fame, the prosperity of Rome, and the peace of Italy, would be the recompence of the pope who should dare to embrace this generous resolution. Of the five whom Petrarch exhorted, the three first, John the twenty-second, Benedict the twelfth, and Clement the sixth, were importuned or amused by the boldness of the orator; but the memorable change

⁵⁶ Squalida od quomain tores, neclectaque cultú
Ca mies; multi que moli lossata seriectus
Empirito di um afrigiem ovetu accipe momen;
Roma vecor (Carm. l. 2, p. 77.)
He pins ilius allegori beyond all mea une or patieme. The Epistles to Uthon Von pino este more single and per un eve (Semilium, I vir p. 644—654.)

which had been attempted by Urban the fifth, was finally accomplished by Gregory the eleverth. The execution of their design was opposed by weighty and almost insuperable obstacles. A king of France who has deserved the epithet of wise, was unwilling to release them from a local dependence: the cardinals, for the most part his subjects, were attached to the language, manners, and climate, of Avignon; to their stately palaces; above all, to the wines of Burgundy. In their the world eyes. Italy was foreign or hostile; and they reluctantly embarked at Marseilles, as if they had been sold or banished into the land of the Saraceus. Urban the fifth resided three years in the Vatican with safety and honour: his sanctity was protected by a guard of two thousand horse; and the king of Cyprus, the queen of Naples, and the emperors of the East and West, devoutly salated their common father in the chair of St. Peter. joy of Petrarch and the Italians was soon turned into grief and indignation. Some reasons of publie or private moment, his own impatience or the prayers of the cardinals, recalled Urban to France; and the approaching election was saved from the tyrannic patriotism of the Romans. The powers of Heaven were interested in their cause: Bridget of Sweden, a saint and pilgrim, disapproved the return, and forefold the death, of Urban the fifth: the migration of Gregory the ele- Find reventh was encouraged by St. Catherine of Sienna, tongot Gregory the spouse of Christ and ambassadiess of the Flo- M. rentines; and the popes themselves, the great mas- $\hat{\beta}_{a} = \hat{\beta}_{a}$ ters of human credulity, appear to have listened to these visionary females 1. Yet those celestial admonitions were supported by some arguments of temporal policy. The residence of Avignon had been invaded by hostile violence: at the head of thirty thousand robbers, an hero had extorted ransom and absolution from the vicar of Christ and the sacred college; and the maxim of the French warriors, to spare the people and plunder the church, was a new heresy of the most dangerous import ". While the pope was driven from Avignon, he was strenuously invited to Rome. The senate and people acknowledged him as their lawful sovereign, and laid at his fect the keys of the gates, the bridges, and the fortresses; of the quarter at least beyond the Tyber 61. But this loval offer was accompanied by a declaration, that they could no longer suffer the scandal and calamity of his absence; and that his obstinacy would finally provoke them to revive and assert the primitive right of election. The abbot of mount Cassin had been to Freey alleges, course condition Oderon Reveal its, takenguetre in which bewees Lack in 21-rad December 1750 beween Gregor Mean to J. Remost (Her. Lieberton Superson) consulted, whether he would accept the triple crown from the clergy and people: "I am a citizen of Rome "replied that venerable ecclesiastic, " and " my first law is the voice of my country'."

A D 1 70. $\Lambda_{\rm c}$ of $\Gamma_{\rm c}$

⁵⁾ I have not lecture to expand to on the legends of St. Budget of St. Catherine, the last of which might framely-ome minising stories. Their effect on the mind of Gregory XI is attested by the last solemn winds of the dying pope, who admonstred the assistants, at ear rent ab hominibus, sive viris, sive matherithat, sub-specie religious loquentibus visione, sinceputes, quite per edge upset coluent, &c. (Bahu, Not. ad Vit. Pap. As canone usum, tour at p. 1225).

⁽⁹⁾ This predatory expedition is related by Prossard (Chromque, tom, r.p. x 30% and r.e the late of du Greeschin, Collection Generalides Memories Historiques, tome wile 10% p. 107—11.3%. As early as the year Lot) the court of Avignon had been molested by similar freebooter, who arreve its present the Alps (Memories) on Petraque, real in p. 305—200.

If superstition will interpret an untimely death'; the death, if the merit of counsels be judged from the event; $\frac{104005}{M_{\rm cool}(27)}$ the heavens may seem to frown on a measure of such apparent reason and propriety. Gregory the eleventh did not survive above fourteen monto. his return to the Vatican; and his discuse was followed by the great schism of the West, which distracted the Latin church above forty years.

62 The first crown or region Ducerze, Glo. Larm ten p. 702) on the episcopal mitro of the population and all to the a of Constantine, or Clovis. The second was added by Bon (VIII as the emblem not only of a spinoual, but or a tempore, kingdom. The three soft of the chench are topic one life, the tuple crown which was introduced by John XXII or Rev 2, a XII (Memories sin Perraque, form 1 p. 208, 2-60)

6. Baluce (Nat ad Pap Avenion toma p 1194, 1195) produces the original evidence which are a the threat or the Ross at ambas, does, and the resignation of the abbot of mount Co. 9, altro a offerens, ne quadrase eivem Romanam e a cet illiel celgood in Evellent

(4) The remain of the popes from Avenion to Rome, and their reception by the people, an arbited prahe original Lices of Urbert V. and Gregory XI in Biline (Vir. Pajornin Avenioner 1913) from a p 303-480,; and Micitori (Serga Ret Trilication, fone in Tu the dragger of the schring every course stance was severely, through parvall, a contact of a more especial in the great imprest, which don't be a conclude of Castie, as to which Bilinze, in his notes, so offerful I so largely appeals from a M5 volume in the Harley little on 4551, Ac

65 Can the death of a good man be esteemed a 1 so tone in by those who helice in the numerical year discort. They belt y the instability of their forth. Act a concer plane given Learnest agrees with the Greek contract of the second of the Schiller to Guidace position So in the few for the contractions as phase and of the Alexander

CILAP. LXX

UrbanVI, April 9.

The sacred college was then composed of twentytwo cardinals: six of these had remained at Avicnon; eleven Frenchmen, one Spaniard, and four Italian, entered the conclave in the usual form. Their choice was not yet limited to the purple; and their unanimous votes acquiesced in the archbishop of Bari, a subject of Naples, conspicuous for his zeal and learning, who ascended the throne of St. Peter under the name of Urban the sixth. The epistle of the sacred college affirms his free, and regular, election; which had been inspired, as usual, by the Holy Ghost: he was adored, invested, and crowned, with the customary rites; his temporal authority was obeyed at Rome and Avignon, and his ecclesiastical supremacy was acknowledged in the Latin world. During several weeks, the cardinals attended their new master with the fairest professions of attachment and loyalty; till the summer heats permitted a decent escape from the city. But as soon as they were united at Anagni and Fundi, in a place of security, they east aside the mask, accused their own falsehood and hypocrisy, excommunicated the Election of apostate and antichrist of Rome, and proceeded to a new election of Robert of Geneva, Clement the seventh, whom they announced to the nations as the true and rightful vicar of Christ. first choice, an involuntary and illegal act, was annulled by the fear of death and the menaces of the Romans; and their complaint is justified by the strong evidence of probability and fact. twelve French cardinals, above two-thirds of the votes, were masters of the election: and whatever might be their provincial jealousies, it cannot fairly be presumed that they would have sacrificed their right and interest to a foreign candidate, who would never restore them to their native country. In the various, and often inconsistent, narratives the shades of popular violence are more darkly or faintly coloured: but the licentiousness of the seditious Romans was inflamed by a sense of their privileges, and the danger of a second emigration. The conclave was intimidated by the shouts, and encompassed by the arms, of thirty thousand rebels; the bells of the Capitol and St. Peter's rang an alarm; "Death, or an "Italian pope" was the universal cry; the same threat was repeated by the twelve bannerets or chiefs of the quarters, in the form of charitable advice; some preparations were made for burning the obstinate cardinals; and had they chosen a Transalpine subject, it is probable that they would never have departed alive from the Vatican. same constraint imposed the necessity of dissembling in the eyes of Rome and of the world: the pride and cruelty of Urban presented a more inevitable danger; and they soon discovered the features of the tyrant, who could walk in his garden and recite his breviary, while he heard from an adjacent chamber six cardinals groaning

Clement VII Sept. 21.

CHAP.

¹⁰ In the first book of the Historie du Concite de Pres, M. Lentant har abridged and compared the original marrances of the adherents of Urbin and Clement, of the Italians and Germans, the French and Spaniar !! The latter appear to be the most active and loquacious, and every fact end word in the original Lives of Gregory XI and Clement VII are appointed in the notes of their editor Baluce.

CHAP.

on the rack. His inflexible zeal, which loudly censured their luxury and vice, would have attached them to the stations and duties of their parishes at Rome; and had he not fatally delayed a new promotion, the French cardinals would have been reduced to an helpless minority in the sacred college. For these reasons, and in the hope of repassing the Alps, they rashly violated the peace and unity of the church, and the merits of their double choice are yet agitated in the Catholic schools of. The vanity rather than the interest of the nation determined the court and clergy of France ". The states of Savoy, Sicily, Cyprus, Arragon, Castille, Navarre, and Scotland, were inclined by their example and authority to the obedience of Clement the seventh, and, after his decease, of Benedict the thirteenth. Rome and the principal states of Italy, Germany, Portugal, England', the Low Countries, and the kingdoms of the North, adhered to the prior election of Urban the sixth, who was succeeded by Boniface the ninth, Innocent the seventh, and Gregory the twelfth.

⁶⁷ The ordinal numbers of the popes seem to decide the question against. Clement VII. and Benedict XIII. who are boldly stigmatised as antipopes, by the Italians, while the French are content with authorities and reasons to plead the cause of doubt and toleration (Baluz, in Pradat.). It is singular, or rather it is not singular, that saints, visions, and miracles, should be common to both parties.

⁶⁶ Baluze stremously labours (Not. p. 1271–1280.) to justify the pure and pious motives of Charles V king of France, he refused to hear the arguments of Urban; but were not the Urbanists equally deaf to the reasons of Clement, &c.?

⁶⁹ An epistle, or declamation, in the name of Isdward III (Baluz, Vit. Pap. Avenion, tom. 1-p. 553.) displays the zeal of the English nation against the Clementinics. Nor was their zeal confined to words: the Bishop of Norwich led a crusade of 60,000 bigots beyond sea (Huine's History, vol. iii, p. 57, 58.)

From the banks of the Tyber and the Rhône, Great the hostile pontiffs encountered each other with the West. the pen and the sword: the civil and ecclesias- AD 1378 tical order of society was disturbed, and the Romans had their full share of the mischiefs of which they may be arraigned as the primary authors?. They had vainly flattered themselves with the hope of restoring the seat of the ecclesiastical monarchy, and of relieving their poverty with the tributes and offerings of the nations; but the separation of France and Spain Calamnies diverted the stream of lucrative devotion; nor of Rome. could the loss be compensated by the two jubilees which were crowded into the space of ten By the avocations of the schism, by foreign arms, and popular tumults, Urban the sixth and his three successors were often compelled to interrupt their residence in the Vatican. The Colonna and Ursini still exercised their deadly feuds: the bannerets of Rome asserted and abused the privileges of a republic: the vicars of Christ, who had levied a military force, chastised their rebellion with the gibbet, the sword, and the dagger; and, in a friendly conference, eleven deputies of the people were perfidiously murdered and east into the street. Since the invasion of Robert the Norman, the Romans had pursued their domestic quarrels 70 Besides the general historians, the Diaries of Delphinus Gentilis, Peter Antonois, and Stephen Infessura, in the great Collection of Muratori, represent the state and misfortunes of Rome.

CHAP LXX

without the dangerous interposition of a stran-But in the disorders of the schism, an aspiring neighbour, Ladislans king of Naples, alternately supported and betraved the pope and the people: by the former he was declared gonfalonier, or general, of the church, while the latter submitted to his choice the nomination of their magistrates. Besieging Rome by land and water, he thrice entered the gates as a Barbarian conqueror; profaned the altars, violated the virgins, pillaged the merchants, performed his devotions at St. Peter's, and left a garrison in the castle of St. Angelo. His arms were sometimes unfortunate, and to a delay of three days he was indebted for his life and crown; but Ladislaus triumphed in his turn, and it was only his premature death that could save the metropolis and the ecclesiastical state from the ambitious conqueror who had assumed the title. or at least the powers, of king of Rome 71.

Negocitations for processed union, A D 1 392 —1407.

I have not undertaken the ecclesiastical history of the schism; but Rome, the object of these last chapters, is deeply interested in the disputed succession of her sovereigns. The first counsels for the peace and union of Christendom arose from the university of Paris, from the faculty of the Sorbonne, whose doctors were esteemed, at least in the Galhean church, as the most consummate masters of theological science 72. Prudently waving all invidious inquiry into the origin and merits of the dispute, they proposed, as an healing measure, that the two pretenders of Rome and Avignon should abdicate at the same time, after qualifying the cardinals of the adverse factions to join in a legitimate election: and that the nations should substract? their obedience, it either of the competitors preferred his own interest to that of the public. At each vacancy, these physicians of the church deprecated the mischiefs of an hasty choice; but the policy of the conclave and the ambition of its members were deaf to reason and entreaties; and whatsoever promises were made, the pope could never be bound by the oaths of the cardatal. During fifteen years, the pacific designs of the university were eluded by the arts of the rival pontifis, the scruples or passions of their adherents, and the vicissitudes of French factions, that ruled the insanity of Charles the sixth. At length a vigorous resolution was embraced; and a solemn embassy, of the titular patriarch of Alexandria, two archbishops, five bishops, five abbots, three knights, and twenty ⁷² Or this mercace. John Gerson, a stout doctor, was the author or the champion. The proceedings of the university of Paris and the Collican church were often prompted to his advice, and are comound displayed in his theological writings, or which Le Clerc (Bibliothique Choise, tom x p 1-73 s has given a valuable extract. John Gerson acted an important part in the councils of Pea and Constance.

⁷¹ It is supposed by Giannone (form in, p. 292) that he styled himself Rex Roma, a title unknown to the world since the expulsion of Tarquin. But a neater inspection has justified the reading of Rex Roma, of Rama, an obscure langdom annexed to the crown of Hungary.

⁷³ The leading and decisive part which Frence as unted in the schrism is crited by Peter du Puis in a coporate Indoors, extracted from authentic records, and inserted in the 7th volume of the last and be t edition of his around Theories (P. vi. p. 110—154.)

CHAP.

doctors, was sent to the courts of Avignon and Rome, to require, in the name of the church and king, the abdication of the two pretenders, of Peter de Luna, who styled himself Benediet the thirteenth, and of Angelo Corrario, who assumed the name of Gregory the twelfth. For the ancient honour of Rome, and the success of their commission, the ambassadors solicited a conference with the magistrates of the city, whom they gratified by a positive declaration, that the most Christian king did not entertain a wish of transporting the holy see from the Vatican, which he considered as the genuine and proper seat of the successor of St. Peter. In the name of the senate and people, an eloquent Roman asserted their desire to co-operate in the union of the church, deplored the temporal and spiritual calamities of the long schism, and requested the protection of France against the arms of the king of Naples. The answers of Benedict and Gregory were alike edifying and alike deceitful; and, in evading the demand of their abdication, the two rivals were animated by a common spirit. They agreed on the necessity of a previous interview, but the time, the place, and the manner, could never be ascertained by mutual consent. "If the one advances," says a servant of Gregory, " the other retreats: "the one appears an animal fearful of the "land, the other a creature apprehensive of "the water. And thus, for a short remnant ." of life and power, will these aged priests

" endanger the peace and salvation of the Chris-" tian world " ...

LXX

The Christian world was at length provoked Conneil of by their obstinacy and fraud: they were deserted AD 1400 by their cardinals, who embraced each other as friends and colleagues; and their revolt was supported by a numerous assembly of prelates and ambassadors. With equal justice, the council of Pisa deposed the popes of Rome and Avignon; the conclave was unanimous in the choice of Alexander the fifth, and his vacant seat was soon filled by a similar election of John the twenty-third, the most profligate of mankind. But instead of extinguishing the schism, the rashness of the French and Italians had given a third pretender to the chair of St. Peter. Such new claims of the synod and conclave were disputed: three kings, of Germany, Hungary, and Naples, adhered to the cause of Gregory the twelfth; and Benedict the thirteenth, himself a Spaniard, was acknowledged by the devotion and patriotism of that powerful nation. The rasht proceedings of Pisa were corrected by the council of Constance; the empe- Contance ror Sigismond acted a conspicuous part as the -1418 advocate or protector of the Catholic church; and the number and weight of civil and ecclesiastical members might seem to constitute the states-general of Europe. Of the three popes, 74 Leonardus Brunus Aretinus, one of the revivers of classic learning in Italy, who, after serving many years as secretary in the Roman court, retired to the honourable office of chancellor of the republic of Florence (Fabric, Bibliot medii Ævi, tom i p. 200) Lenfant has given the version of this curious epistle (Concile de Pisc, tom 1, p 192-1971

CHAP.

John the twenty-third was the first victim; he fled and was brought back a prisoner: the most scandalous charges were suppressed; the vicar of Christ was only accused of piracy, murder, rape, sodomy, and incest; and after subscribing his own condemnation, he expiated in prison the imprudence of trusting his person to a free city beyond the Alps. Gregory the twelfth, whose obedience was reduced to the narrow precincts of Rimini, descended with more honour from the throne, and his ambassador convened the session, in which he renounced the title and authority of lawful pope. quish the obstinacy of Benedict the thirtcenth or his adherents, the emperor in person undertook a journey from Constance to Perpignan. The kings of Castille, Arragon, Navarre, and Scotland, obtained an equal and honourable treaty; with the concurrence of the Spaniards, Benedict was deposed by the council; but the harmless old man was left in a solitary eastle to excommunicate twice each day the rebel kingdoms which had described his cause. After thus cradicating the remains of the schism, the synod of Constance proceeded with slow and cautious steps to elect the sovereign of Rome and the head of the church. On this momentous occasion, the college of twenty-three cardinals was fortified with thirty deputies; six of whom were chosen in each of the five great nations of Christendom, the Italian, the German, the French, the Spanish, and the English 75: the interference of strangers was softened by their generous preference of an Italian and a Roman; and the bereditary, as well as personal, merit Dectioned of Otho Colonna recommended him to the con-Sclave. Rome accepted with joy and obedience the noblest of her sons; the coclesiastical state was defended by his powerful family, and the elevation of Martin the fifth is the æra of the restoration and establishment of the popes in the Vatican.

⁷⁵ I cannot overlook this great national cause, which was vigorously maintained by the English ambassadors against those of France.

CHAP. IXXMartin V.

The latter contended, that Christendom was essentially distributed into the four great nations and votes, of Italy, Germony, France, and Spain, and that the lesser kingdoms (such as Lingland, Domnark, Portugal, &c.) were comprehended under one or other of the e great divisions The English a scited, that the British clands, of which they were the head, should be considered as a fifth and coordinate nation, with an equal vote, and every argument of trighor table was introduced to exalt the dignity of their country cluding England, Scotland, Wale, the four king dome of Ireland, and the Orlines, the British islands are decorated with eight foyal grown a and discriminated by four or five langua, es, English, Well h, Cornish, Scatch, Irish, &c. The greater island from north to south measures 800 miles, or to days pointed, and Ingland alone contains 32 countries, and 2,000 parish churches, cabol laccount' beside cathedrals, colleges, prioric, and hospitals. They celebrate the mission of St. Joseph of Arabathes, the birth of Court wire, and the legarithe process of the two pain ites, without for effice the feetimony of Bartholemy de Glanydle (A.D. 1300), whe wellons only from Clin tran langer in , 1, of Rome , 2 of Constantinople, 3 of Ireland, which had been trussicated to the Leeb hadonache, and, 4 of Span Oct countries prevailed by the council, but the victories of Henry V, added much weight to their agraments. The adverse pleadings were found at Copernies. by Sir Rebert Wingfield, ambiguador from Henry VIII, to the emperor Maximilian L. and by him printed in 1917 at Longaro. The ma Logisa MS, they are more correctly published in the Collection of Von der Hardt, tom v , but I have only seen Lentant's observe to these acts (Conede de Constance, tom u p 447 4 3, eo 1

76 The histories of the these successe connects, Prog. Constance, and Basil, have been written with a tolerable degree of candour, industry, and elegance, by a Protest un measter, M. Lenfort, who retired from France to Berlin. They form six volumes in quarto, and as Basil is the worst, so Constance is the best, part of the Collection

Martin V. A.D 1417.

CHAP

Eugenius IV A D.1431

Nicholas V. A D.1447 Lastrevolt of Rome, A.D 1434, May 29— October 20. The royal prerogative of coining money, which had been exercised near three hundred years by the senate, was first resumed by Martin the fifth¹⁷, and his image and superscription intro-nith", and his image and superscription introduce the series of the papal medals. Of his two immediate successors, Eugenius the fourth was the last pope expelled by the tumults of the Roman people, and Nicholas the fifth, the last who was importuned by the presence of a Roman emperor. I. The conflict of Eugenius, with the fathers of Basil, and the weight or apprehension of a new excise, emboldened and provoked the Romans to usurp the temporal government of the city. They rose in arms, elected seven governors of the republic, and a constable of the Capital; imprisoned the pope's nephew; besieged his person in 77 See the xxviih Dissertation of the Antiquities of Muraton, and the 14 Instruction of the Science des Medailles of the Pere Joilbert and the Baron de la Basue. The Metallic History of Martin V. and his successors, has been composed by two monks, Moulinet a Frenchman, and Bonamu an Italians but I understand, that the first part of the series is restored from more recent comes.

the palace; and shot vollies of arrows into his bark as he escaped down the Tyber in the habit of a monk. But he still possessed in the castle of St. Angelo a faithful garrison and a train of artillery: their batteries incessantly thundered on the city, and a bullet more dextrously pointed broke down the barricade of the bridge, and scattered with a single shot the heroes of the republic. Their constancy was exhausted by a rebellion of five months. Under the tyranny of the Ghibeline nobles, the wisest patriots regretted the dominion of the church; and their repentance was unanimous and effectual. The troops of St. Peter again occupied the Capitol; the magistrates departed to their homes; the most guilty were exccuted or exiled; and the legate, at the head of two thousand foot and four thousand horse, was saluted as the father of the city. The synods of Ferrara and Florence, the fear or resentment of Eugenius, prolonged his absence: he was received by a submissive people; but the pontiff understood from the acclamations of his triumphal entry, that to secure their loyalty and his own repose, he must grant without delay the abolition of the odious excise. H. Rome was restored, adorned, and enlightened, by the peaceful reign of Nicholas the fifth. In the midst of these laudable occupations, the pope was alarmed by the approach of Frederick the third of Austria; though Last comhis fears could not be justified by the character German or the power of the Imperial candidate. After England drawing his military force to the metropolis, A.D 1452. and imposing the best security of oaths and March 18

76 Besides the Lives of Engenius IV. (Rerum Italia tom in P. i. p. 869, and tom axiv p. 250 s, the Diaries of Paul Petroni and Stephen Infessir) are the best original evidence for the revolt of the Romans again. Engenius IV. The former, who lived at the time and on the spot, speaks the language of a citizen, equally afraid of priestly and popular tyranny.

79 The coronation of Frederic III. is described by Lenfant (Concile de Basle, tom. n. p 270-288.) from Acneas Sylvius, a spectator and actor in that splendid scene.

LXX

19 The oath of fidelity imposed on the emperor by the pope, is recorded and sincipled in the Clementines did tit ix ;; and Æneås Sylvius, who objects to this new demand, could not foresee, that mea few years he should ascend the throne, and unbabe the maxims, of Bombre VIII

CHAP.

treatics, Nicholas received with a smiling countenance the faithful advocate and vassal of the church. So tame were the times, so feeble was the Austrian, that the pomp of his coronation was accomplished with order and harmony: but the superfluous honour was so disgraceful to an independent nation, that his successors have excused themselves from the toilsome pilgrimage to the Vatican; and rest their Imperial title on the choice of the electors of Germany.

The statute and government of Rone A citizen has remarked, with pride and pleasure, that the king of the Romans, after passing with a slight salute the cardinals and prelates who met him at the gate, distinguished the dress and person of the senator of Rome; and in this last farewel, the pageants of the empire and the republic were clasped in a friendly embrace. According to the laws of Rome!, her first magistrate was required to be a doctor of laws, an alien, of a place at least forty miles from the city; with whose inhabitants he must not be connected in the third canonical degree of blood or alliance. The election was annual: a severe scrutiny was instituted into the conduct of the

O Lo sen itore di Roma, vestito di brocuto con quella beretta, e con quelle in unche, et ornamente di pelle, co' quali va alle feste di Testaccio e Nagone, might escape the eye of Ameas Syhius, but he is viewed with admiration and complarency by the Roman crizzen (Diarro di Stephano Intessura, p. 1133) to See in the statute, of Rome, the secution and three judges (i. i. c. 3—14.), the conservation (d. i. c. 15, 16, 17.1 m. c. 4.), the common owned (l. ii. c. 15, 1 m. c. 8.), the secret control (l. iii. c. 2.), the common council (l. iii. c. 3.). The title of fends, defiances, acts of violence, See, is appeal through many a chapter (c. 14—40.) of the second back departing senator; nor could be be recalled to the same office till after the expiration of two years. A liberal salary of three thousand florins was assigned for his expence and reward; and his public appearance represented the majesty of the His robes were of gold brocade or republic. crimson velvet, or in the summer season of a lighter silk: he bore in his hand an ivory sceptre; the sound of trumpets announced his approach; and his solemu steps were preceded at least by four lietors or attendants, whose red wands were enveloped with bands or streamers of the golden colour or livery of the city. His oath in the Capitol proclaims his right and duty, to observe and assert the laws, to controul the proud, to proteet the poor, and to exercise justice and mercy within the extent of his jurisdiction. In these useful functions he was assisted by three learned strangers; the two collaterals, and the judge of criminal appeals: their frequent trials of robberies, rapes, and murders, are attested by the laws; and the weakness of these laws connives at. the licentiousness of private fends and armed associations for mutual defence. But the senator was confined to the administration of justice: the Capitol, the treasury, and the government of the city and its territory, were entrusted to the three conservators, who were changed four times in each year: the militia of the thirteen regions assembled under the banners of their respective chiefs, or caporioni; and the first of these was distinguished by the name and dignity of the prior. The popular legislature consisted of the secret and the common councils of the Romans. The former was composed of the magistrates and their immediate predecessors, with some fiscal and legal officers, and three classes of thirteen, twenty-six, and forty counsellors; amounting in the whole, to about one hundred and twenty persons. the common council all male citizens had a right to vote; and the value of their privilege was enhanced by the care with which any foreigners were prevented from usurping the title and character of Romans. The tunult of a democracy was cheeked by wise and jealous precautions: except the magistrates, none could propose a question; none were permitted to speak, except from an open pulpit or tribunal; all disorderly acclamations were suppressed; the sense of the majority was decided by a secret ballot; and their decrees were promulgated in the venerable name of the Roman senate and people. It would not be easy to assign a period in which this theory of government has been re-«duced to accurate and constant practice, since the establishment of order has been gradually connected with the decay of liberty. But in the year one thousand five hundred and eighty, the ancient statutes were collected, methodised in three books, and adapted to present use, under the pontificate, and with the approbation, of Gregory the thirteenth81: this civil and criminal code is the ⁸³ Statuta alma Urbis Roma Auctoritate S. D. N. Gregora XIII.

CHAP LXX

Pont Max a Schata Populoque Rom. reformata et edita. Roma, 1980, in folio. The obsolete, repugnant statutes of antiquity were modern law of the city; and, if the popular assentblies have been abolished, a foreign senator, with the three conservators, still resides in the palace of the Capitol 84. The policy of the Cæsars has been repeated by the popes; and the bishop of Rome affeeted to maintain the form of a republic, while he reigned with the absolute powers of a temporal, as well as a spiritual, monarch.

CHAP. LXX

It is an obvious truth, that the times must be tong suited to extraordinary characters, and that the Poisson genius of Cromwell or Retz might now expire in AD 14.5, obscurity. The political enthusiasm of Rienzi had exalted him to a throne: the same enthusiasm. in the next century, conducted his imitator to the gallows. The birth of Stephen Porcaro was noble, his reputation spotless; his tongue was armed with eloquence, his mind was enlightened with learning; and he aspired, beyond the aim of vulgar ambition, to free his country and immortalize his name. The dominion of priests is most odious to a liberal spirit: every scruple was removed by the recent knowledge of the fable and forgery of Constantine's donation: Petrarch was now the oracle of the Italians; and as often as Porcaro reconfounded in five books, and Luc is Pieto , a lawyer and antiqua man, was appointed to act as the modern l'ubonim. Yet I regict the old code, with the rugged crust of freedom and barbari in 84 In my time (1705), and in M. Grosley's 'Observations sur l'Italie, toni, ii p. 301.), the senator of Rome was M Birlke, a noble Swede, and a proselyte to the Catholic faith. The pope's right to appoint the senator and the conservator is implied, rather than affirmed, in the statutes

CHAP.

volved the ode which describes the patriot and hero of Rome, he applied to himself the visions of the prophetic bard. His first trial of the popular feelings was at the funeral of Eugenius the fourth: in an elaborate speech he called the Romans to liberty and arms; and they listened with apparent pleasure, till Porcaro was interrupted and answered by a grave advocate, who pleaded for the church and state. By every law the seditions orator was guilty of treason; but the benevolence of the new pontiff, who viewed his character with pity and esteem. attempted by an honourable office to convert the patriot into a friend. The inflexible Roman returned from Anagni with an increase of reputation and zeal; and, on the first opportunity, the games of the place Navona, he tried to inflame the casual dispute of some boys and mechanics into a general rising of the people. Yet the humane Nicholas was still averse to accept the forfeit of his life; and the traitor was removed from the scene of temptation to Bologna, with a liberal allowance for his support, and the easy obligation of presenting himself each day before the governor of the city. But Porcaro had learned from the younger Brutus, that with tyrants no faith or gratitude should be observed: the exile declaimed against the arbitrary sentence; a party and a conspiracy were gradually formed; his nephew, a daring youth, assembled a band of volunteers; and on the appointed evening a feast was prepared at his house for the friends of the republic. Their leader, who had escaped from Pologna, appeared among them in a robe of purple and CHAP. gold: his voice, his countenance, his gestures, bespoke the man who had devoted his life, or death to the glorious cause. In a studied oration, he expatiated on the motives and the means of their enterprise: the name and liberties of Rome; the sloth and pride of their ecclesiastical tyrants: the active or passive consent of their fellowcitizens; three hundred soldiers, and four hundred exiles, long exercised in arms or in wrongs; the licence of revenge to edge their swords, and a million of ducats to reward their victory. would be easy (he said), on the next day, the festival of the Epiphany, to seize the pope and his cardinals, before the doors, or at the altar, of St. Peter's: to lead them in chains under the walls of St. Angelo; to extort by the threat of their instant death a surrender of the castle; to ascend the vacant Capitol, to ring the alarmbell; and to restore in a popular assembly the ancient republic of Rome. While he triumphed, he was already betrayed. The senator, with a strong guard, invested the house: the nephew of Porearo cut his way through the crowd; but the unfortunate Stephen was drawn from a chest, lamenting that his enemies had anticipated by three hours the execution of his design. After such manifest and repeated guilt, even the mercy of Nicholas was silent. Porcaro, and nine of his accomplices, were hanged without the benefit of the sacraments; and amidst the fears and invectives of the papal court, the Romans pitied, and almost applauded, these martyrs of their country. But their applause was mute, their pity ineffectual, their liberty for ever extinct; and, if they have since risen in a vacancy of the throne or a scarcity of bread, such accidental tumults may be found in the bosom of the most abject servitude.

VOL. XII. 2 C. CHAP

Last disorders of the nobles of Rome

But the independence of the nobles, which was fomented by discord, survived the freedom of the commons, which must be founded in union. A privilege of rapine and oppression was long maintained by the barons of Rome; their houses were a fortress and a sanctuary: and the ferocious train of banditti and criminals whom they protected from the law, repaid the hospitality with the service of their swords and daggers. private interest of the pontiffs, or their nephews. sometimes involved them in these domestic feuds. Under the reign of Sixtus the fourth, Rome was distracted by the battles and sieges of the rival houses: after the conflagration of his palace, the protonotary Colonna was tortured and beheaded; and Savelli, his captive friend, was murdered on the spot, for refusing to join in the acclamations of the victorious Ursini. But the popes no longer trembled in the Vatican: they had strength to command, if they had resolution to claim, the obedience of their subjects; and the strangers, who observed these partial disorders, admired the easy taxes and wise administration of the ecclesiastical state ".

CHAP.

The spiritual thunders of the Vatican depend The page. on the force of opinion; and if that opinion be ab obtain supplanted by reason or passion, the sound may dominion of Robert idly waste itself in the air; and the helpless priest is exposed to the brutal violence of a noble or a plebeian adversary. But after their return from Avignon, the keys of St. Peter were guarded by the sword of St. Paul. Rome was commanded by an impregnable citadel: the use of cannon is a powerful engine against popular seditions: a regular force of cavalry and infantry was culisted under the banners of the pope: his ample revenues supplied the resources of war; and, from the extent of his domain, he could bring down on a rebellious city an army of hostile neighbour of The disorders of Rome, which were much inflamed by the partiality of Sixtus IV, are exposed in the Diaries of two spectitors, Stephen Infessura, and an anonymous enrich so the troubles of the year 1484, and the death of the peotoactary Co-Johns, in tom in P ii p 1083 11.55 and loyal subjects85. Since the union of the duchies of Ferrara and Urbino, the occlesiastical state extends from the Mediterranean to the Adriatic, and from the confines of Naples to the banks of the Po: and as early as the sixteenth century, the greater part of that spacious and fruitful country acknowledged the lawful claims and temporal sovereignty of the Roman pontiffs. Their claims were readily deduced from the genuine, or fabulous, donations of the darker ages: the successive steps of their final settlement would engage us too far in the transactions of Italy, and even of Europe; the crimes of Alexander the sixth, the martial operations of Julius the second, and the liberal policy of Leo the tenth, a theme which has been adorned by the pens of the noblest historians of the times! In the first period of their conquests, till the expedition of Charles the eighth, the popes might successfully wrestle with the adjacent princes and states, whose military force was equal, or inferior, to their own. But as soon as the monarchs of France, Germany, and Spain,

66 Est toute la terre de l'egli-e troublee pour cette parriable. (des Colonnes et des Visins), come nou obnons Luca et Grunmont, on en Hollande Houe et Caballan , et qui al ce ne seroit ce differend la terre de l'eglise seron la plus herara e l'abitation pour les sujets, qui son d'ens tout le monde car ils ne jeigent pi tailles in pacie, our cho con et seroient toigours bien conduits tear tolipour le pape sont sign et bien con cillér, nais très souvent catalynem degrands et emels mearine et pilleries.

²⁶ By the occonomy of Sixtus V—the revenue of the ecclesiastical state was roised to two millions and a half—of Roman crowns (Vita, toin, ii p. 291—296); and so regular was the military establishment, that in one month Clement VIII, could invade the duchy of Ferrara with three thousand horse and twenty thom and foot (toin, in, p. 64). Since that time (A.D. 1597), the papal arms are happily rusted, but the revenue must have gained some nominal increase.

⁶⁹ More especially by Guiceiardini and Machavel, in the general history of the former, in the Florentine history, the Prince, and the polinical discourses of the latter. These, with their worthy successors, Fra-Paolo and Davila, were mady externed the first historians of modern languages, till, in the present are, Scotland grose, to dispute the prize with Italy herself.

, contended with gigantic arms for the dominion of Italy, they supplied with art the deficiency of strength; and concealed, in a labyrinth of wars and treaties, their aspiring views, and the immortal hope of chasing the Barbarians beyond the The nice balance of the Vatican was often subverted by the soldiers of the North and West, who were united under the standard of Charles the fifth: the feeble and fluctuating policy of Clement the seventh exposed his person and dominions to the conqueror; and Rome was abandoned seven months to a lawless army, more eruel and rapacious than the Goths and Vandals". After this severe lesson, the popes contracted their ambition, which was almost satisfied, resumed the character of a common parent, and abstained from all offensive hostilities, except in an hasty quarrel, when the vicar of Christ and the Tunkish Sultan were armed at the same time against the kingdom of Naples". The French and Germans at length withdrew from the field of battle: Milan, Naples, Sicily, Sardinia, and the sca-coast of Tuscany, were firmly possessed by the Spaniards; and it became their interest to main-

CHAP LXX

⁹⁰ In the history of the Gothic siege, I have compared the Barbarians with the subjects of Charles V. (vol. v.p. 310—322), an anticipation, which, like that of the Tartar conquests, I indulged with the less scruple, as I could scarcely hope to reach the conclusion of my work.

91 The ambitions and feeble hostilities of the Caraila pope, Paul IV, may be seen in Thuanus (I. 301—3010) and Giannone (tom. iv. p. 1449—163). Those Catholic bigots, Philip II, and the dake of Alva, presumed to separate the Roman prince from the vicar of Christ. Set the holy character, which would have sanctined his victory, was decently applied to protect his deteat.

CHAP.

tain the peace and dependence of Italy, which continued almost without disturbance from the middle of the sixteenth to the opening of the eighteenth century. The Vatican was swaved and protected by the religious policy of the Catholic king: his prejudice and interest disposed him in every dispute to support the prince against the people; and instead of the encouragement, the aid, and the asylum, which they obtained from the adjacent states, the friends of liberty, or the encmies of law, were inclosed on all sides within the iron circle of despotism. The long habits of obedience and education subdued the turbulent spirit of the nobles and commons of Rome. The barons forgot the arms and factions of their ancestors, and insensibly became the servants of luxury and government. Instead of maintaining a crowd of tenants and followers, the produce of their estates was consumed in the private expences, which multiply the pleasures, and diminish the power, of the lord 92. The Colonna and Ursini vied with each other in the decoration of their palaces and chapels; and their antique splendour was rivalled or surpassed by the sudden opulence of the papal families. In Rome the voice of freedom and discord is no longer heard; and instead of the foaming torrent, a smooth and stagnant lake reflects the image of idleness and servitude.

⁹¹ This gradual change of manners and expence is admirably explained by Dr. Adam Smith (Wealth of Nations, vol. i. p. 405—043, who proves, perhaps too severely, that the most salutary effects have flowed from the meanest and most sellish cause.)

A Christian, a philosopher", and a patriot, will be equally scandalized by the temporal kingdom of the clergy; and the local majesty of Rome, The cockthe remembrance of her consuls and triumphs, governmay seem to embitter the sense, and aggravate ment the shame, of her slavery. If we calmly weigh the merits and defects of the ecclesiastical government, it may be praised in its present state, as a mild, decent, and tranquil system, exempt from the dangers of a minority, the sallies of youth, the expences of luxury, and the calamities of war. But these advantages are overbalanced by a frequent, perhaps a septennial election of a sovereign, who is seldom a native of the country: the reign of a noung statesman of threescore, in the decline of his life and abilities, without hope to accomplish, and without children to inherit, the labours of his transitory reign. The successful candidate is drawn from the church, and even the convent: from the mode of education and life the most adverse to reason, humanity, and freedom. the tranmels of servile faith, he has learned to believe because it is absurd, to revere all that is contemptible, and to despise whatever might deserve the esteem of a rational being; to punish error as a crime, to reward mortification and celibacy as the first of virtues; to place the saints of the kalendar above the heroes

Mr Hume (Hist of England, vol. 1, p. 89, too histily concludes, that if the civil and coclesiastical powers be united in the same person, it is of little moment whether by be "yled prince or prelate, since the temporal character will always a redominate

A protestant may dislain the unworthy preference of St Fran-of Rome and the sages of Athens; and to consider the missal, or the crucifix, as more useful instruments than the plough or the loom. office of nuncio, or the rank of cardinal, he may acquire some knowledge of the world, but the primitive stain will adhere to his mind and manners: from study and experience he may suspect the mystery of his profession; but the sacerdotal artist will imbibe some portion of the bigotry which he incul-The genius of Sixtus the fifth "burst from the gloom of a Franciscan cloister. In a reign of five years, he exterminated the outlaws and banditti. abolished the profune sanctuaries of Rome ". formed a naval and military force, restored and emulated the monuments of antiquity, and after a liberal use and large increase of the revenue, left five millions of crowns in the castle of St. Angelo.

CHAP.

cis or St. Dominic, but he will not rashly condemn the real or judement of Sixtus V, who placed the statues of the apostles, St. Peter and St. Paul, on the vacant columns of Trajan and Antonino ¹⁵ A wandering Italian, Giegorio Leti, has given the Vita di Stato-Quinto (Amstel, 1721, 3 vols in 12010), a repross and annining work, but which does not connound our absolute confidence. Yet the character of the man, and the pumpal facts, are supported by the annal of Spondanus and Muraton (A. D. 1585—1500), and the contemporary history of the great Thuanus (I. Ixxvii. c. 10.1 c. c. 8).

of These privileged places, the quarteri or franchises, were adopted from the Roman nobles by the foreign ministers. Julius II had once abolished the abonium and uncet detestandum franchitarum hujusmodi nomen; and after Sixtus V, they again reserved. I cannot discern either the justice or magnaminity of Louis XIV, who, in 1667, sent his ambassador, the marquis de Lavardin, to Ronie, with an armod force of a thousand officers, guards, and donesties, to maintain this miquitions claim, and insult pope Innocent XI in the heart of his capital (Vita di Sisto V, 1600 m. p. 200—278. Microri, Amalii D'Italia, tom xx p. 401—405 and Voltaire, Siecle de Louis XIV tom in c. 14 p. 58, 50.

But his justice was stilled with cruelty, his activity was prompted by the ambition of conquest; after his decease, the abuses revived; the treasure was dissipated; he entailed on posterity thirty-five new taxes and the venality of offices; and, after his death, his statue was demolished by an ungrateful. or an injured, people 97. The wild and original character of Sixtus the fifth stands alone in the series of the pontiffs: the maxims and effects of their temporal government may be collected from the positive and comparative view of the arts and philosophy, the agriculture and trade, the wealth and population, of the ecclesiastical state. For myself it is my wish to depart in charity with all mankind, nor am I willing, in these last moments, to offend even the pope and clergy of Rome '.

97 This outlage produced a decree, which was inscribed on marble, and placed in the Capitol. It is expressed in a style of manly simplicity and freedom. Si quis, sive privatus, sive magnituding errens de collocandà wito pontifici statua mentionen faccio ausit, legitimo S. P. Q. R. decreto in perpetuum infamis et publicorum innunerum expers esto. MDXC mense Augusto Avia di Sisto V. tom in p. 469.). I believe that this decree is sull observed, and I know that every monarch who deserves a statur, should himself impose the prohibition.

9) The histories of the church, Italy, and Curr tendom, how contributed to the chapter which I now conclude. To the original Laves of the Popes, we often discover the cuts and republic of Rome, and the events of the xivth and xivth contones are preserved in the rude and domestic chronicles which I have carefully inspected, and shall recapitulate in the order of time.

- Monaldeschi (Ludovici Boncomitis) Fragmenta Aonaluun Roman A D 1328, in the Scriptores Remoi Italicarum of Muratori, tom xii p. 525 N B The eredu of this fragment is somewhat hurt by a singular interpolation, in which the author relates his oven death at the age of 115 years.
- Fragmenta Historia Romana (volgo Thomas Fortifisceae), in Romana Dialecto sulz in (ADI, 27—15) (4, in Murvion, Antiquiat, media Ævi Italie, tom, in p. 247—546), the authoria do und-work of the history of Riena;

- 3 Delphini (Gentals) Diarium Romanium (A. D. 1370—1410.), in the Rerum Italicarum, tom. iii. P. ii. p. 846.
- 4 Antonii (Petri) Diarium Rom. (A. D. 1404—1417.), tom. xxxx. p. 969.
- Petroni (Pauli) Miscellanea Historica Romana (A.D. 1433—1446.), tom xxw. p. 1101.
- 6 Volateri un Jacob) Diarium Rom. (A. D. 1472-1484), tom xxii, p. 81.
- Anonymi Diamum Urbis Roma (A. D. 1481—1492), tom/m P. ii p. 1000.
- 8 Infessura (Stephann) Diarinm Romanum (A. D. 1294, or 1478
 4-1404., tom in P it p 1109
 9 Historia Arcana Alexandri VI, sive Executa ex Danio Joh

Bureardi (A.D.) 1402—1503.), edita a Godefi. Gulichii. Leibni. 10, Hanover, 1607, in 4to. The large and valuable Journal of Bureard might be completed from the MSS, in different library sof Italy and France (M de Foncemagne, in the Memoires de P.Acad. des Inscrip tom, xvii, p. 197-606). Except the last, all these fragments and diaries are inserted in the Collections of Muratori, my guide and master in the history of His country, and the public, are indebted to him tor the following works on that sulgect 1 Recar Heliocu Se Hores (A. I) 500-1500), guorian polissima pais mure per cum in lucin model, NC, axvin vols. in folio, Milan, 1723-1738, 1741 A volume of chronological and alphabetical tables is till wenture as a key to this great work, which is yet in a disorderly and differing state 2. Antiquitates Italiae meda "Era, vi vols in toho, Milan, 1738-1743, in laxy, curious dissertations, on the manuers, government, religion, &c of the Dahans of the darker age, with a large supplement of charters, thronicles, &c. 3 Deserter on seperate Antiquata Paliane, hi vols. in 4to, Milano, 1751, a free version by the author, which may be quoted with the same confidence as the Latin text of the Antiquities 4 Annah d' Italia, xvin cols in o tavo, Milan, 1753-1756, a dry, though accurate and useful, abridgment of the history of Italy from the birth of Christ to the middle of the xvinth century. 5 Dell' Antichita Estense el Italina, it vols, in Joho, Modena, 1717, 1740. In the history of this illustrious race, the parent of our Brunswick kings, the critic is not seduced by the loyalty or gratitude of the subject works, Muratori approves himself a diligent and laborious writer. who aspires above the prejudices of a Catholic priest. He was born in the year 1072, and died in the year 1740, after passing near sixty years in the libraries of Milan and Modena (Vita del

Proposto Ludovico Antonio Muratori, by his nephew and successor Grue Francesco Sult Muratori, Venezio, 1770, in 400

CHAP, LXXL

Prospect of the Rains of Rome in the Lifteenth Century.—Four Causes of Decay and Destruction. -- Example of the Coliscum. -- Renovation of the City.—Conclusion of the whole Work.

In the last days of pope Eugenius the fourth, two of his servants, the learned Poggius' and Vew and a friend, ascended the Capitoline hill; reposed themselves among the ruins of columns and tem- tom the ples; and viewed from that commanding spot the half wide and various prospect of desolation". place and the object gave ample scope for moralising on the vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave; and it was agreed, that in proportion to her former greatness, the fall of Rome was the more awful and deplorable. "Her primæval state, such as " she might appear in a remote age, when Evan-" der entertained the stranger of Troy', has

CHAP LXXIdi course of Poggmis Capitolini A D 1430

1 I have already (not. 50, 51, on chap 65) mentioned the are, character, and writings of Poggius, and particularly noticed the date of this elegant moral lecture on the varynes of fortune

² Consedimus in ipsis Tarpeiae arcis rainis, pone ingen, portae cujusdam, ut puto, templi, marmoreum limen, plurimisque passun confracțas columnas, unde magnă ex parte pro pectus urbas patet (p. 5 \

3 . Encid viii, 97-309. This ancient picture, to artifully introduced, and so exquisitely finished, must be a been highly intere tCHAP. LXXI.

" been delineated by the fancy of Virgil. This Tar-" peian rock was then a sayige and solitary thicket: " in the time of the poet, it was crowned with the "golden roofs of a temple; the temple is over-"thrown, the gold has been pillaged, the wheel of " fortune has accomplished her revolution, and the " sacred ground is again disfigured with thorns " and brambles. The hill of the Capitol, on which " we sit, was formerly the head of the Roman " empire, the citadel of the earth, the terror of "kings; illustrated by the footsteps of so many " triumphs, enriched with the spoils and tributes " of so many nations. This spectacle of the "world, how is it fallen! how changed! how " defaced! the path of victory is obliterated by " vines, and the benches of the senators are con-" cealed by a dunghill. Cast your eyes on the " Palatine hill, and seek among the shapeless "and enormous fragments, the marble theatre, "the obelisks, the colossal statues, the porti-"coes of Nero's palace: survey the other hills " of the city, the vacant space is interrupted "only by ruins and gardens. The forum of "the Roman people, where they assembled to " enact their laws and elect their magistrates " is now enclosed for the cultivation of pot-" herbs, or thrown open for the reception of The public and private " swine and buffaloes. " edifices, that were founded for eternity, lie " prostrate, naked, and broken, like the limbs " of a mighty giant; and the ruin is the more "visible, from the stupendous relies that have - ing to an inhabitant of Rome; and our early studies allow us to sympathise in the feelings of a Roman survived the injuries of time and CHAP. " fortune 4"

These relies are minutely described by Pog- Ilis degius, one of the first who raised his eyes from of the the monuments of legendary, to those of classic, superstition. 1. Besides a bridge, an arch, a sepulchre, and the pyramid of Cestius, he could discern, of the age of the republic, a double row of vaults, in the salt-office of the Capitol, which were inscribed with the name and munificence of Catulus. 2. Eleven temples were visible in some degree, from the perfect form of the Pantheon, to the three arches and a marble column of the temple of peace, which Vespasian erected after the civil wars and the Jewish triumph. Of the number, which he rashly defines, of seven thermae, or public baths, none were sufficiently entire to represent the use and distribution of the several parts: but those of Dioeletian and Antoninus Caracalla still retained the titles of the founders, and astonished the curious spectator, who, in observing their solidity and extent, the variety of marbles, the size and multitude of the columns, compared the labour and expense with the use and importance. Of the baths of Constantine, of Alexander, of Domitian, or rather of Titus, some vestige might yet be found. triumphal arches of Titus, Severus, and Constantine, were entire, both the structure and the

⁴ Capitolium adeo immutatum ut vinca in senatorum subselha suecessenni, stercorum ac purgamentorum receptaculum , factum Respected Palatinum monteni . . vasta rudera cetitos colles perlustra omnas vacua edinon , rumis vincisque oppleta conspicies (Pogguis de Vanctat, Fortuna, p. 21.)

⁵ See Poggius, p. 8-22.

CHAP. LXXL •~~ inscriptions; a falling fragment was honoured with the name of Trajan? and two arches, then extant, in the Flaminian way, have been ascribed to the baser memory of Faustina and Gallienus. 5. After the wonder of the Coliseum, Poggius might have overlooked a small amphitheatre of brick, most probably for the use of the prætorian camp: the theatres of Marcellus and Pompey were occupied in a great measure by public and private buildings; and in the Circus, Agonalis and Maximus, little more than the situation and the form could be investigated. 6. The columns of Trajan and Antonine were still creet; but the Egyptian obelisks were broken or buried. A people of gods and heroes, the workmanship of art, was reduced to one equestrian figure of gilt brass, and to five marble statues, of which the most conspicuous were the two horses of Phidias and Praxiteles. 7. The two mausoleums or sepulchres of Augustus and Hadrian could not totally be lost; but the former was only visible as a mound of earth; and the latter, the castle of St. Angelo, had acquired the name and appearance of a modern fortress. With the addition of some separate and nameless columns, such were the remains of the ancient city: for the marks of a more recent structure might be detected in the walls, which formed a circumference of ten miles, included three hundred and seventy-nine turrets. and opened into the country by thirteen gates.

radual cay of nne. This melancholy picture was drawn above nine hundred years after the fall of the Western empire, and even of the Gothic kingdom of Italy. A long period of distress and anarchy, in which empire, and arts, and rieses, had migrated from the banks of the Tyber, was incapable of restoring or adorning the city; and as all that is human must retrograde if it do not advance, every successive age must have hastened the ruin of the works of antiquity. To measure the progress of decay, and to ascertain, at each æra, the state of each edifice, would be an endless and a useless labour, and I shall content myself with two observations, which will introduce a short enquiry into the general causes and effects. 1. Two hundred years before the eloquent complaint of Poggius, an anonymous writer composed a description of Rome b. His ignorance may repeat the same objects under strange and fabulous names. Yet this barbarous topographer had eyes and ears. he could observe the visible remains, he could listen to the tradition of the people, and he distinetly enumerates seven theatres, eleven baths, twelve arches, and eighteen palaces, of which many had disappeared before the time of Poggius. It is apparent, that many stately monuments of antiquity survived till a late period, and that the principles of destruction acted with vigorous and increasing energy in the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries. 2. The same reflection must be applied to the three last ages; and we should vainly seek the Septizonium of Severus ; which is celebrated by Petrarch and the antiquarians of the sixteenth century. While the Roman edifices were still entire, the first blows, however weighty and impetuous, were resisted by the solidity of the mass and the harmony of the parts; but the slightest touch would precipitate the fragments of arches and columns, that already nodded to their fall.

⁶ Liber de Mirabalibus Romae, ex Registro Nicolar Cardinale de Arragonia, in Bibliothec'i St. Isidori Armano IV, No. (a). That treati e, with some short but pertinent notes, has been publicle by Monttaucon (Diarium Traticum, p. 283—801 y, who this dislices his own entited opinion. Scriptor vanno encotes could, it didden notature, antiquature for imperitus et, at abillio avo, nugre et analibus (dollo refertus, sed, qua monumenta, que us temponibus Romes supererant pro modulo recense), non parara inde lue seguntu datum qui Romen, autoqua aubus in laginalis opereran navadat (p. 283).

³ The Pere M dillon (Analect), tome resp. 562 s has published in anniymous pilerna of the right century, who, to his your round to

CHAP.

Four causes of destrucnon. After a diligent enquiry, I can discern four principal causes of the ruin of Rome, which continued to operate in a period of more than a thousand years. I. The injuries of time and nature. II. The hostile attacks of the Barbarians and Christians. III. The use and abuse of the materials. And, IV. The domestic quarrels of the Romans.

I. The injuries of nature; I. The art of man is able to construct monuments far more permanent than the narrow span of his own existence: yet these monuments, like himself, are perishable and frail; and in the boundless annals of time, his life and his labours must equally be measured as a fleeting moment. Of a simple and solid edifice, it is not easy however to circumscribe the duration. As the won-churches and holy places of Rome, touches on several buildings, especially porticoes, which had disappeared before the winth century, it is On the Septizonium, see the Memoires sur Petrarque (tom. i.

p. 325), Donatu (p. 338), and Naudini (p. 117, 414.).

ders of ancient days, the pyramids 'attracted the C'externation curiosity of the ancients; an handred generations, the leaves of autumn', have dropt into the grave; and after the fall of the Pharaohs and Ptolemics, the Casars and caliphs, the same pyramids stand creet and unshaken above the floods of the Nile. A complex figure of various and minute parts is more accessible to injury and decay; and the silent lapse of time is often secelerated by hurricanes and carthquakes, by fires hip a and inundations. The air and earth have doubts quite less been shaken; and the Joffy turner of Rome have tottered from their foundations; but the seven hills do not appear to be placed on the great eavities of the globe; nor has the city, in any age, been exposed to the convulsions of nature, which, in the climate of Antioch, Lisbon, or Lima, have crumbled in a few moments the works of ages into dust. Fire is the most power- hres, ful agent of life and death: the rapid mischief may be kindled and propagated by the industry or negligence of mankind; and every period of the Roman annals is marked by the repetition of similar calamities. A memorable conflagration, the guilt or misfortune of Nero's reign, continued, though with unequal fury, either six, or 9 The are of the pyround is remore and not nown, once Dio dorus Siendre, tom a Lare, 40 p 72 as unable to decole whether they were constructed 1000, o. 3,400, years becoming the the Olympad Sir John Mar han "command coords Laydran dynastics would be them allow (2000 year better Unit). Cumur Chromeus, p. 47 to See the speech of election in the Bod of the This is aim d Lat an lancholy prome research a to Homes nine days 1. Innumerable, buildings, crowded in close and crooked streets, supplied perpetual fuel for the flames; and when they ceased, four only of the fourteen regions were left entire; three were totally destroyed, and seven were deformed by the relies of smoking and lacerated edifices ". In the full meridian of empire, the metropolis arose with fresh beauty from her ashes; yet the memory of the old deplored their irreparable losses, the arts of Greece, the trophies of victory, the monuments of primitive or fabulous antiquity. In the days of distress and anarchy, every wound is mortal, every fall irretrievable, nor can the damage be restored either by the publie care of government, or the activity of private interest. Yet two causes may be alleged, which render the calamity of fire more destructive to a flourishing than a decayed city. 1. The more combustible materials of brick, timber, and metals, are first melted or consumed; but the flames may play without injury or effect on the ¹¹ The learning and entirism of M des Vignoles (H) forc Critique de la Republique des Letti s, foir vin p 74—118 is p 172—187 (dates the fine of Rome from A D 64, July 19, and the subsequent percecution of the Christians from November 15, of the suncepture.

¹² Quippe in regiones quatiordecim. Roma dividitir, quantum quature integrae manebant, tres solo tenus dejectae, septem reliquis panca tectorium vestigia supererant, laccia et comin ta. Among the old relies that were incpu dily lost, Taemis enumerate ofte temple of the moon of Servins Tullius; the fane and altar conservated by Evander pra anni Recoili, the temple of Jupiter Stater, a viola of Romalius, the pedect of Numa, the temple of Vesti cam Permittirs populi Romaia. The then deplotes the opes torvictories are sure errors of Graecamon around domain annial agrae, considerate muchai quie, considerate minimal quie considerate minimal quie, considerate minimal quie, considerate minimal quie, considerate minimal quie co maked walls, and merry arelys, that have been disported of their ornaments. It is an one the common and plebeian habitation, that a mischievous spark is most easily blown to a coullagration; but as soon as they are devoured, the greater edifices which have resisted or escaped. are left as so many islands in a state of solitude and safety. From her situation, Rome is exposed to the danger of frequent inundations Without excepting the Tyber, the rivers that descend from either side of the Apennine have a short and irregular course: a shallow stream in the summer heats; an impetuous torrent, when it is swelled in the spring or winter, by the fall of rain, and the melting of the snows. When the current is repelled from the sea by adverse winds, when the ordinary bed is inadequate to the weight of waters, they rise above the banks, and overspread, without limits or controll, the plains and cities of the adjacent country. Soon . after the triumph of the first Punic war, the Tyber was increased by unusual rains; and the inundation, surpassing all former measure of time and place, destroyed all the buildings that were situate below the hills of Rome. According to the variety of ground, the same mischief was ploduced by different means; and the edifices were either swept away by the sudden impulse, or dissolved and undermined by the long continuance of the flood 1. Under the reign of Au-

3. A. C. C. (7, aspective) assersive quite. Roma prevent aithat's a Romanoran of casa, a manage or one class

TYXI CHAP gustus, the same calamity was renewed: the lawless river overturned the palaces and temples on its banks "; and, after the labours of the emperor in cleansing and widening the bed that was encumbered with ruins b, the vigilance of his successors was exercised by similar dangers and designs. The project of diverting into new channels the Tyber itself, or some of the dependent streams, was long opposed by superstition and local interests "; nor did the use compensate the toil and cost of the tardy and imperfect execution. The servitude of rivers is the noblest and most important victory which man has obtained over the licentiousness of

Vidmus flavnin Tr⁵ernin, ictoris Lettore Etruceo violenter undi , Tre depetum monumenta Regis

Temploque Vesta (Honat Carm 1): If the palse of Numa, and temple of Vesta, were thrown down in Honace's time, what were consumed of those buildings by New title reald hardly deserve the epithets of veta tissima or incorning.

35 Ad correctida aranelationes alvenin Tiberts lavavit, ac repregavit, completina ofancia l'ad us, et addictorum prolepsionibus e arciatum (Suctomas in Agensto, e. 30 8).

to Tacitus a Annal. 1-75 j. reports the permons of the different towns of Italy to the agrae algebra the measure, and we may applied the progress of reason. On a similar occasion, for dimeters would undoubtedly be consulted about an Lughsh Hou cort Contains would inject with containing the argument of supersurfers, within nature had a smooth of the inversation proper comise, "So -, nature and if such were the rayages of the Typer under a firm and active government, what could oppose, or who can enumerate, the injuries of the city, after the fall of the Western empire? A remedy was at length produced by the evil itself: the accumulation of rubbish and the earth, that has been washed down from the hills, is supposed to have elevated the plain of Rome, fourteen or fifteen feet, perhaps, above the ancient level 1; and the modern city is less accessible to the attacks of the river ".

II. The crowd of writers of every nation, who II The impute the destruction of the Roman monuments ho de atto the Goths and the Christians, have neglected Barbarras to enquire how far they were animated by an man hostile principle, and how far they possessed the means and the leisure to satiate their enmity. the preceding volumes of this History, I have described the triumph of barbarism and religion; and I can only resume, in a few words, their real or imaginary connection with the ruin of ancient Our fancy may create, or adopt, a pleasing romance, that the Goths and Vandals sallied from Scandinavia, ardent to avenge the flight of

⁴⁷ See the Epoques de la Nature of the eloquent and philosophic Burlon Hispician of Guyana, in South America, is that of a new and cas its land, in which the voiter are abandoned to themselve, without being regulated by human malastry op 212-501 quarto edition y

to In his Trivels in Italy, Mr. Addition, in west, velon page Bell civille's edition class of-cived the curron, and imprestionable

¹⁰ Ygt m modern time , the Tyber has someomics damaged the constand in the years 1 (e. 1) 47, 1 98, the A hads of Minn our cross three mischneyon and using table uninequality form as a 508 Act tem av 6 fea No

Odin 60; to break the chains, and to chastise the oppressors, of mankind; that they wished to burn the records of classic literature, and to found their national architecture on the broken members of the Tuscan and Corinthian orders. But in simple truth, the northern conquerors were neither sufficiently savage, nor sufficiently refined, to entertain such aspiring ideas of destruction and revenge. The shepherds of Scythia and Germany had been educated in the armies of the empire, whose discipline they acquired, and whose weakness they invaded: with the familiar use of the Latin tongue, they had learned to reverence the name and titles of Rome; and, though incapable of emulating, they were more inclined to admire, than to abolish, the arts and studies of a brighter period. transient possession of a rich and unresisting capital, the soldiers of Alaric and Genseric were stimulated by the passions of a victorious army; amidst the wanton indulgence of lust or cruelty. portable wealth was the object of their search; nor could they derive either pride or pleasure from the unprofitable reflection, that they had battered to the ground the works of the consuls and Casars. Their moments were indeed precious; the Goths evacuated Rome on the sixth a, the Vandals on the diffeenth, day-2; and, though it be far more difficult to build than to destroy, their hasty assault would have made a slight impression on the solid piles of antiquity. We may remember, that both Alaric and Genseric affected to spare the buildings of the city; that they subsisted in strength and beauty under the auspicious government of Theodorie '; and that the momentary resentment of Totila was disarmed by his own temper and the advice of his friends and enemies. From these innocent Barbarians, the reproach may be transferred to the Catholics of Rome. statues, altars, and houses of the demons, were an abomination in their eyes; and in the absolute command of the city, they might labour with zeal and perseverance to eraze the idolatry of their The demolition of the temples in the East 'affords to them an example of conduct, and to us an argument of belief; and it is probable, that a portion of guilt or merit may be imputed with justice to the Roman proselvtes. abhorrence was confined to the monuments of heathen superstition; and the civil structures that were dedicated to the business or pleasure of socicty might be preserved without mjury or scandal. The change of religion was accomplished, not by a popular tumult, but by the decrees of the emperors, of the senate, and of time. Of the Christian hierarchy, the bishops of Rome were commonly the most prudent and least fanatic: nor can any positive charge be opposed to the meritorious act of saving and converting the majestic structure of the Pantheon."

²⁰ I take this opportunity of declaring, that in the course of twelve years, I have for otten, or renounced, the flight of Odin from Azoph to Sweden, which I never very scriously believed (vol. 1 p. 500). The Goths are apparently Germans - bet all beyon! Casar and Tacinis, is darlaness or fable, in the antiquities of Germany.

³ History of the Decline, &c. vol. v. p. 325

²³ History of the Dichae, &c vol. vii. p. 95– 32 — vol. vii. p. 60–27.1 2 — vol. v. v. v. v. p. 10 m ms

III The u e and alor e of the materials.

III. The value of any object that supplies the wants or pleasures of mankind, is compounded of its substance and its form, of the materials and the manufacture. Its price must depend on the number of persons by whom it may be acquired and used; on the extent of the market; and consequently on the ease or difficulty of remote exportation, according to the nature of the commodity, its local situation, and the temporary circumstances of the world. The Barbarian conquerors of Rome usurped in a moment the toil and treasure of successive ages; but, except the luxuries of immediate consumption, they must view without desire all that could not be removed from the city in the Gothic waggons or the fleet of the Vandals ". Gold and silver were the first objects of their avarice; as in every country, and in the smallest compass, they represent the most ample command of the industry and possessions of mankind. A vase or a statue of those precious metals might tempt the vanity of some Barbarian chief; but the grosser multitude, regardless of the form, was tenacious only of the substance; and the melted ingots might be readily divided and stamped into the current coin of the empire. The less active or less fortunate robbers were reduced to the baser plunder of brass, lead, iron, and copper: whatever had escaped the Goths and Vandals was pillaged by the Greek tyrants; and the emperor Constans, in his rapacious visit, stripped the bronze tiles from the roof of the Pantheon . The edifices of Rome might be considered as a vast and various mine; the first labour of extracting the materials was aheady performed; the metals were purified and cast; the marbles were hewn and polished; and after foreign and domestic rapine had been satiated, the remains of the city, could a purchaser have been found, were still venal. The monuments of antiquity had been left naked of their precious ornaments, but the Romans would demolish with their own hands the arches and walls, if the hope of profit could surpass the cost of the labour and exporta-If Charlemagne had fixed in Italy the seat of the Western empire, his genius would have aspired to restore, rather than to violate, the ²⁸ Onjuryquae crant in abe ad ornamin extrate depoint, sed et eech rum B. Marre ad marryres ques le tegah, a reis cooperta discorporate. And there is to prove perfet in The best and calculations. Greek had not extra the poor pretence of planels are an heather each, the Pantheon was already a Catle heighbuch.

²⁶ Eodem tempore petut a Phocate principe templum, quod appellator Pavikon, in quo fecit coclesiam Sanctae Maria cemper Virginie, et omnium martyrimi, in quá ceclesia princeps inultationa obiulit (Anastasius velpotiu. Liber Ponuticalis in Bomfacio IV, in Min itou, Script. Rerum Italicariun, toin, in, P. 1-p. 135.). According to the anonymous writer in Montfaucon, the Pantheon had been vowed by Agrippa to Cybele and Neptune, and was dedicated by Bomface IV, on the calends of November, to the Yirgin, quasiest mater comman, anctorum (p. 297, 298).

⁷ Flammus Vacca (apud Montfaucon, p. 156, 156). His Memorr is likewise printed, pp. 21 at the end of the Roma Antica of Nardian and several Romans, doctring traves, were persuaded that the Goths build then use uses at Rome, and bequealfied the secondards his including que. The relaces some anecdores to prove, that, in his own time, these places were visited and rifled by the Transalpine, playing, the heirs of the Codific conquerous

CHAP. LXXI works of the Cæsars: but policy confined the French monarch to the forests of Germany; his taste could be gratified only by destruction; and the new palace of Aix la Chapelle was decorated with the marbles of Ravenna of and Rome of Sicily, Robert, the wisest and most liberal sovereign of the age, was supplied with the same materials by the easy navigation of the Tyber and the sea; and Petrarch sighs an indignant complaint, that the ancient capital of the world should adorn from her own bowels the slothful luxury of Naples of Plunder or

O For the spoils of Rayenna (musiva atque marmora) see the on mal grant of pope Adrian I. to Chorlemagne (Codex Carolin opist Isyn, in Muratori, Script Hal, foin, in P. n. p. 223.)

50 I shall quote the authentic testimony of the Secon poet (A D 887—809)), de Rebus gostis Caroli magni, 4 y 447-4440 m the Historius of France (tom y. p. 1803)

Adquee maintorens præstab it Roma columnas, Quadam præcipuas palelina Ravanna dedit. De tom longingna potent regione veru aas Blue omatum Dancia ferie ula

And I hill add, from the Chromole of Sigebert (Historians of Letner, foin, v. p. 578.) estructi etiam Aqui-gram basilicam plurimae palchitindina-, ad enjus structuram a Roma et Ravenna columna et marmora develu fecit

19 I cannot refuse to transcribe a long passage of Petrarch Opp. p. 530, 537 cm Episiola hortatoria ad Nicolaum Laurentium, at is so trong and full to the point. Nee pudor aut pietas continuit quominus impuspoli ita Der templa, occupatas arces, opes publicas, regiones, indicate et quam unia in re, turbulenti ac sedimosi hommes et totus reliquae viae consilus et rationibus discordes, inhumani foederis simpene'a societate convenerant, in pointes et meima atque minurentos lipides desevuent. Denique post vi vel senio collapsa politia, qua quorolani ingentes tenierunt viri, post diruptos arcus timingliales (in d. n. qor. shorum forstan cormenunt), de ip insociu toti ac propas impetant fragiminibu, vilem question turpe setu toti ac propas impetant fragiminibu, vilem question turpe purchase were rare in the darker ages; and the Romans, alone and unenvied, might have applied to their private or public use the remaining structures of antiquity, if in their present form and situation they had not been useless in a great measure to the city and its inhabitants. The walls still described the old circumference, but the city had descended from the seven hills into the Campus Martius; and some of the noblest monuments which had braved the injuries of time were left in a desert, far remote from the habitations of mankind. The palaces of the senators were no longer adapted to the manners or fortunes of their indigent successors; the use of baths; and porticoes was forgotten: in the sixth century, the games of the theatre, amphitheatre, and circus, had been interrupted: some temples were devoted to the prevailing worship; but the Christian churches preferred the holy figure of the cross; and fashion, or reason, had distributed after a peculiar model the cells and offices of the cloy-ter. Under the ceclesiastical reign, the number of these pious foundations was enormously multiplied: and the city was crowded with forty monasteries mercimono espiare non paduit. Traque nina, lora dello Menseclus rad giunn! de vestris marinorer columni, de linnamatemplorum cod que imper est orbe toto concer a de occile bate, de maginibas expullarioram robe, abor portos veste a veste a venerabilis esvis (cons²)/crat, ut recopa sa deno, de dello esvis (cons. Referi adornatur. Sie poullatini runna que deno con . Ye con, Referi was the figend of Petrarch.

32 Yet Charlemagne wished and awam at Ar. 1) Chipelle with an hundred of his commers algorithm, e 22 p 108, 100 c and Muratan describe cast late is the year s11, the proble bath, which were built at Spulet on Italy Annaly, converge (19). CHAP.

of men, twenty of women, and sixty chapters and colleges of canons and priests 34, who aggravated, instead of relieving, the depopulation of the tenth century. But if the forms of ancient architecture were disregarded by a people insensible of their use and beauty, the plentiful materials were applied to every call of necessity or superstition; till the fairest columns of the Ionic and Corinthian orders, the richest marbles of Paros and Numidia, were degraded, perhaps to the support of a convent or a stable. The daily havock which is perpetrated by the Turks in the cities of Greece and Asia, may afford a melancholy example: and in the gradual destruction of the monuments of Rome, Sixtus the fifth may alone be excused for employing the stones of the Septizonium in the glorious edifice of St. Peter's ". A fragment, a ruin, howsoever mangled or profaned, may be viewed with pleasure and regret; but the greater part of the marble was deprived of substance, as well as of place and proportion; it was burnt to lime for the purpose of cement. Since the arrival of Poggius, the temple of Concord", and many capital structures, had vanished from his eyes; and an epigram of the same age expresses a just 1 and pious fear, that the continuance of this practice would finally annihilate all the monuments of antiquity . The smallness of their numbers was the sole check on the demands and depredations of the Romans. The imagination of Petrarch might create the presence of a mighty people'; and I hesitate to believe, that, even in the fourteenth century, they could be reduced to a contemptible list of thirty-three thousand inhabitants. From that period to the reign of Leo the tenth, if they multiplied to the amount of eighty-five thousand, the increase of citizens was in some degree pernicious to the ancient cuy.

³⁵ See the Annals of Italy, A. D. 988. For this and the preceding fact, Muraton him elf is indebted to the Benedictine history of Pere Mahillon.

[&]quot;Vita di Si to Quinto, da Gregorio Leti, tom in p. 50

⁵ Porticus achs Concordia, quant cum primorii ad urbem accessi vidi fere integram opere marmoro admodum specioso. Romaini postnodumi ad calcem ach in totam et porticus partem dispectis columnis sunt demodur quite. The temple of Concord was therefore ned destroyed by a sedition in the entiry, as I have real in a MS treatise del Coverno civile di Rome, lent me fermerly at Rome, and ascendord. I false vital elverto true celebrated Grayma. Poggar likewise allums, that the significant of Cacalia Metells was burnt for line, p. 19, 200.

IV. I have reserved for the last, the most post post of the tent and foreible cause of destruction, the domes-  pr tic hostilities of the Romans themselves Under the Rose the dominion of the Greek and French emp 1018, the peace of the city was disturbed by accidental. though frequent, seditions: it is from the decline of the latter, from the beginning of the ten'h

¹² Composed by Tance S Year, afters (2) press Par H and published by Mabillon, noer a MS of the book on Sacoton (Musæmii Dahemii, tora a p. 97)

Obligating, Roma, this spect of the Exempts lapen gloon per rapera Sel trus hie populationeri delle exette te-

Coloren olare year and a large at Improtencement of a contract masses Nullium hore rada concern tach

47 Vozabamini je pri repeditorila vzerne se se qua com projete. spatiani viena voca tor, pepulani le l'incerca na Oppapara. Fig. Fameloges, n. 14 s

"The a state of any profit or so I have a different period, are defined to account to appropriate to the firm Lander, de-Romani Cost Oo do niba p. 155 century, that we may date the licenticusness of private war, which violated with impunity the laws of the Code and the Gospel, without respecting the majesty of the absent sovereign, or the presence and person of the vicar of Christ. In a dark period of five hundred years, Rome was perpetually afflicted by the sanguinary quarrels of the nobles and the people, the Guelphs and Ghibelines, the Colonna and Ursini; and if much has escaped the knowledge, and much is unworthy of the notice, of history, I have exposed in the two preceding chapters, the causes and effects of the public disorders. At such a time, when every quarrel was decided by the sword, and none could trust their lives or properties to the impotence of law; the powerful citizens were armed for safety, or offence, against the domestic enemies whom they feared or hated. Except Venice alone, the same dangers and designs were common to all the free republies of Italy; and the nobles usurped the prerogative of fortifying their houses, and erecting strong towers" that were capable of resisting a The cities were filled with these sudden attack. hostile edifices: and the example of Lucea, which contained three hundred towers; her law, which confined their height to the measure of fourscore feet, may be extended with suitable latitude to the more opulent and populous states. The first step of the senator Brancalcone in the establishment of peace and justice, was to demolish (as CHA) we have already seen) one hundred and forty of the towers of Rome; and, in the last days of anarchy and discord, as late as the reign of Martin the fifth, forty-four still stood in one of the thirteen or fourteen regions of the city. this mischievous purpose, the remains of antiquity were most readily adapted: the temples and arches afforded a broad and solid basis for the new structures of brick and stone; and we can name the modern turrets that were raised on the triumphal monuments of Julius Casar, Titus, and the Antonines". With some slight alterations, a theatre, an amphitheatre, a mausoleum, was transformed into a strong and spacious citadel. I need not repeat, that the mole of Adrian has assumed the title and form of the eastle of St. Angelo"; the Septizonium of Severus was capable of standing against a royal army'; the sepulchre of Metella has sunk under it, outworks"; the theatres of Pompey and Marcellus

CHAP.

² All the facts that relate to the towers at Rome, and in other five case of Italy, may be found in the Isborous and entertaining origination of Marstoni, Amaquinus, Italian medically, dissert of National up 493—106 of the Latin, tomal p 446, of the Italian work

⁴⁹ As for instance, Templana Jamanano di itu , Ciris Como. Frangiquits, et sauc Jano migosiae pro Tare e e c'in preci hodicque vestigia supersunt (Montlaucon D errori Italicum, p 180.) The anonymous winer presses can accordis, area Title turrus Cartularia, aicus Julii Castaris er Seat ori ne turce (6) Bratis, arens Amonini, parrioli Corrett, Se

⁴⁾ Hadraat molem . In convey peter Romaneeron 1993 (. . disturbacit, quod certe fancita est in continue a bus pervia, absumptis grand bussers, telescoped and the attention Poggin, de Vari t de Pottmae, p. 32.

⁶² Against the emperor Heray IV (May exc. A cold d'Dable, tom is p 117

I must copy a surject entry to a sec gette rotunda . C. der Melelle the dated in more fam solide, or potent eperger i percenti coltas vac i a Superate et Torode Borodicpine, Chique approximation or expe-were occupied by the Savelli and Ursini fami lies"; and the rough fortress has been gradually softened to the splendour and elegance of an Even the churches were en-Italian palace. compassed with arms and bulwarks, and the military engines on the roof of St. Peter's were the terror of the Vatican and the scandal of the Whatever is fortified will be Christian world. attacked; and whatever is attacked may be destroyed. Could the Romans have wrested from the popes the castle of St. Angelo, they had resolved by a public decree to annihilate that monument of servitude. Every building of defence was exposed to a siege; and in every siege the arts and engines of destruction were laboriously employed. After the death of Nicholas the fourth. Rome, without a sovereign or a senate. was abandoned six months to the fury of civil war. "The houses," says a cardinal and poet of the times", " were crushed by the weight and

CHAP.

tis. Hine sequaori aevo, tempore intestinorum bellonum, een urbecula adjunista fut, enjus menna et turies chaomium visintum, ita iti a pulchima Metella quasi arx oppiduli fuent. Ferventibus en urbe partiba, einu Ursim atque Columnenses metinis cladibus perinerem interient civitati, in utriusve partis ditionem cederet magni moraculi civit (j. 142).

At See the termionic of Donatus, Naulini, and Montfaucou. In the Savelh palace, the remains of the theatre of Marcellus are still great end consponents.

4) Junes, endured of St. George, advelorm ameum, in his metrical line of pape Celestra V. Muraton, Script Ital tom a P in p. 6ct. I(i,c) I vol. 132, ∞c , How division of est, Romain carmine Senata Menathic cartistient in billoque vocatum (rosatos). In seelus, ia sociolo frateriagne vulnera pattes; Tormer tripicisse vivos immaina axia. Perfodis cidomos tratubir ifects e termas lembre, no circa cunte, ob cinaepie finno Lameric vicino, quo su spidata, apellex :

"velocity of enormous stones 46; the walls were " perforated by the strokes of the battering-ram; "the towers were involved in fire and smoke; " and the assailants were stimulated by rapine "and revenge." The work was consummated by the tyranny of the laws; and the factions of Italy alternately exercised a blind and thoughtless vengeance on their adversaries, whose houses and castles they razed to the ground ". In comparing the days of foreign, with the ages of domestic, hostility, we must pronounce, that the latter have been far more ruinous to the city; and our opinion is confirmed by the evidence of Petrarch. " Behold," says the laureat, "the relies of Rome, "the image of her pristine greatness! neither "time, nor the Barbarian, can boast the merit of "this stupendous destruction: it was perpetrated "by her own citizens, by the most illustrious of "her sons, and your ancestors (he writes to a " noble Annibaldi) have done with the battering-" ram, what the Punic hero could not accomplish " with the sword "." The influence of the two last principles of decay must in some degree be mul-

49 Muratori Dissertazione sopia le Antiquità It diane, tom 1 p. 427—431) finds, that stone bullets of two or direct hundred pounds weight were not uncommon, and they are sometime computed at xii or xxiii cardan of Genoa, e.e.h. cardae, wei, hin, 47 The vith law of the Visconti prolator, this common and intechesions practice, and strictly enjoins, that the houses of banished cutzens should be preserved procommon utilities. Guidamens de la Flamma, in Muraton, Script Return Ethicarona, tone Su. p. 1041.)

¹⁵⁰ pounds

⁴³ Petrarch thus addresses his friend, who, with shame and tears, had shewn shim the mount, facetar specimen inserabile Rome.

CHAP.

tiplied by each other; since the houses and towers, which were subverted by civil war, required a new and perpetual supply from the monuments of antiquity.

The Coliseum or amphitheatre of Titus

These general observations may be separately applied to the amphitheatre of Titus, which has obtained the name of the Coliseum", either from its magnitude, or from Nero's colossal statue: an edifice, had it been left to time and nature. which might perhaps have claimed an eternal duration. The curious antiquaries, who have computed the numbers and seats, are disposed to believe, that above the upper row of stone steps, the amphitheatre was encircled and elevated with several stages of wooden galleries, which were repeatedly consumed by fire, and restored by the emperors. Whatever was precious, or portable, or profane, the statues of gods and heroes, and the costly ornaments of sculpture, which were cast in brass, or overspread with leaves of silver and and declared his own intention of reatoring them (Carmina Latina, 1 in epist Paulo Amiibalensi, xii p. 97, 98 v.

Perfect his ares ----

40 The fourth part of the Verona Illustrata of the marquis Maffer, professedly treats of amplitude ares, particularly those of Rome and Verona, of their dimensions, wooden galleries, &c. It is from magnitude that he derives the name of Coloscom, or Coloscom since the same appellation was applied to the amplitude of Cipita, without the aid of a coloscal statue, since that of Nero was exected in the court (in atra) of his palace, and not in the Coloscom (P. iv. p. 1 — 10.1 i. c.4.).

gold, became the first prev of conquest or fanati- CHAP eism, of the avarice of the Barbarians or the Christians. In the massy stones of the Coliseum. many holes are discerned; and the two most probable conjectures represent the various accidents of its decay. These stones were connected by solid links of brass or iron, nor had the eye of rapine overlooked the value of the baser metals": the vacant space was converted into a fair or market: the artisans of the Coliscum are mentioned in an ancient survey; and the chasms were perforated or enlarged to receive the poles that supported the shops or tents of the mechanic trades '. Reduced to its naked majesty, the Flavian amphitheatre was contemplated with awe and admiration by the pilgrims of the North; and their rude enthusiasm broke forth in a sublime proverbial expression, which is recorded in the eighth century, in the fragments of the venerable Bede: "As long" " as the Coliscum stands, Rome shall stand: when " the Coliscum falls, Rome will fall; when Rome " falls, the world will fall"." In the modern system of war, a situation commanded by three

²⁰ Joseph Maria Snares, a learned hishop, and the author of an history of Praneste, has composed a separate of the action on the seven or eight probable causes of these hole a smelt has been since reprinted in the Roman Thesauric of Sillentine. Monitoreon (Diarum, p. 233) pronounces the equic of the Bubarian, to be the unam germanamque cansam for unburb

²⁴ Donatus, Roma Vetus et No. a, p. 255

⁵² Quandin stabit Colescus, stabit et Roma, per slocadet Cole ens, cader Roma, qualdo cader Roma, cader et noradus ¿Beda ra Excerptis Sen Collectations apud Durange Gloom med et infima-Latinitatis, tome if p 407 cdit Basil. This is ng must be as culied to the Anglo-Saxon pilgrims who visited Rome before the year 73%, the gra of Bede's death for I do not believe that our years the monk ever provid the ea-hills would not be chosen for a fortress; but the strength of the walls and arches could resist the engines of assault; a numerous garrison might be lodged in the inclosure; and while one faction occupied the Vatican and the Capitol, the other was entrenched in the Lateran and the Coliscum.

Games of Rome The abolition at Rome of the ancient games must be understood with some latitude; and the carnival sports, of the Testacean mount and the Circus Agonalis, were regulated by the law or custom of the city. The senator presided with dignity and pomp to adjudge and distribute the prizes, the gold ring, or the pallium, as it was styled, of cloth or silk. A tribute on the Jews supplied the annual expence of; and the races, on

- 53 I cannot recover, in Muraton's original Lives of the Popes (Script Rerum Italication, toin in P. (1), the passage that are exthis hostile partition, which must be applied to the end of the xith or the beginning of the xith century.
- 54 Although the structure of the Circus Azon dis be destroyed, it still retain cits form and name (Azon). Nazona, Nazona) and the interior space affords a sufficient level for the purpose of racing But the Monte Te-faceo, that strange pile of broken pottery, seems only adapted for the annual practice of hirling from top to bottom some wagron loads of live logs for the diversion of the populace (Statuta Urbis Rome), p. 1805.
- 56 See the Statuta Urbis Romae, L. iii e. 87, 88, 80, p. 186, 186. I have already given an idea of this municipal code. The races of Nagona and Monte Testacco are likewise mentioned in the Diary of Peter Antonius from 1404 to 1417 (Minatori, Script, Remin Italicarum, tom XXIV. p. 1124.)
- 50 The Pullium, which Menage so foolishly derives from Pulmirium, is an easy extension of the idea and the words, from the tobe or cloak, to the materials, and from thence to their application is a prize (Minatori, dissert NXXIII).
- ⁹ For these expenses, the Jews of Rome paid each year 1130 florms, of which the odd thirty represented the precess of silver for foot, on horseback, or in chariots, were ennobled by a tilt and tournament of seventy-two of the Roman youth. In the year one thousand three Visibility hundred and thirty-two, a bull-feast, after the Coliscon, fashion of the Moors and Spaniards, was cele- AD 132, brated in the Coliseum itself; and the living manners are painted in a diary of the times?. A convenient order of benches was restored; and a general proclamation, as far as Rimini and Ravenna, invited the nobles to exercise their skill and courage in this perilous adventure. The Roman ladies were marshalled in three squadrons, and seated in three balconies, which on this day, the third of September, were lined with scarlet cloth. The fair Jacova di Rovere led the matrons from beyond the Tyber, a pure and native race, who still represent the features and character of antiquity. The remainder of the city was divided as usual between the Colonna and Ursini: the two factions were proud of the number and beauty of their female bands: the charms of Savella Ursini are mentioned with praise; and the Colonna regretted the absence of the youngest of their house, who had sprained her ancle in the garden of Nero's tower. The lots of the champions were which Judas had betrayed his Macter to their ancestors. There was a foot-race of Jewish as well as of Christian youth a Statuta Urbis, ibidem).

CHAP LXXIter em the

50 This extraordinary bull-feast in the Colseum is described, from tradition rather than memory, by Ludovico Buonconte Monaldesco, in the most ancient fragments of Roman annals (Mutaton, Script, Rerum Italicanum, tom xit p 970, 930 % and however foreiful they may seem, they are deeply marked with the colouis of fruth and nature.

CHAP LXXI

drawn by an old and respectable citizen; and they descended into the arena, or pit, to encounter the wild bulls, on foot as it should seem, with a single spear. Amidst the crowd, our annalist has selected the names, colours, and devices, of twenty of the most conspicuous knights. Several of the names are the most illustrious of Rome and the ecclesiastical state: Malatesta, Polenta, della Valle, Cafarello, Savelli, Capoccio, Conti, Annibaldi, Altieri, Corsi; the colours were adapted to their taste and situation; the devices are expressive of hope or despair, and breathe the spirit of gallantry and arms. "I am alone, like the youngest of the Horatii," the confidence of an intrepid stranger: "I live disconsolate," a weeping widower: "I burn under the ashes," a discreet lover: "I adore Lavinia, or Lucretia," the ambiguous declaration of a modern passion: " My faith is as pure," the motto of a white livery: " Who is stronger than myself?" of a lion's hide: " If I am drowned in blood, what a pleasant death," the wish of ferocious courage. The pride or prudence of the Ursini restrained them from the field, which was occupied by three of their hereditary rivals, whose inscriptions denoted the lofty greatness of the Colonna name: "Though sad, I am strong:" "Strong as I am great:" " If I fall," addressing himself to the spectators, " you fall with me;"-intimating (says the contemporary writer) that while the other families were the subjects of the Vatican, they alone were the supporters of the Capitol. The combats of the amphitheatre were dangerous and bloody.

CHAP

champion successively encountered a wild bull; and the victory may be ascribed to the quadrupeds, since no more than eleven were left on the field. with the loss of nine wounded and eighteen killed on the side of their adversaries. Some of the noblest families might mourn, but the pomp of the funerals, in the churches of St. John Lateran and St. Maria Maggiore, afforded a second holiday to the people. Doubtless it was not in such conflicts that the blood of the Romans should have been shed; yet, in blaming their rashness, we are compelled to applaud their gallantry; and the noble volunteers, who display their magnificence, and risk their lives, under the balconies of the fair. excite a more generous sympathy than the thousands of captives and malefactors who were reluctantly dragged to the scene of slaughter".

This use of the amphitheatre was a rare, per-topones, haps a singular, festival: the demand for the materials was a daily and continual want, which the citizens could gratify without restraint or In the fourteenth century, a scandalous act of concord secured to both factions the privilege of extracting stones from the free and common quarry of the Coliscum'; and Poggius laments, that the greater part of these stones had been burnt to lime by the folly of the ⁵⁹ Muraton has given a leparate dissertation (the XX2 h) to the games of the Italians in the noddle ages.

to In a concise but instructive memoir, the abbi Barthelemy (Memoires de l'Academie des Inscriptions, tom ANTH p. 08). has mentioned this a recincut of the factions of the xivth century, de-Tiburtino fore odo in the Cole-tum, from an original set in the archives of Rome

CHAP.

Romans 61. To check this abuse, and to prevent the nocturnal crimes that might be perpetrated in the vast and gloomy recess, Eugenius the fourth surrounded it with a wall; and, by a charter long extant, granted both the ground and edifice to the monks of an adjacent convent 62. After his death, the wall was overthrown in a tumult of the people: and had they themselves respected the noblest monument of their fathers, they might have justified the resolve that it should never be degraded to private poverty. The inside was damaged; but in the middle of the sixteenth century, an æra of taste and learning, the exterior circumference of one thousand six hundred and twelve feet was still entire and inviolate: a triple elevation of four score arches, which rose to the height of one hundred and eight feet. Of the present ruin, the nephews of Paul the third are the guilty agents; and every traveller who views the Farnese palace may curse the sacrilege and luxury of these upstart princes ". A similar re-by Of the Oliveran monks. Montfaucon (p. 142) affirms this fact from the incinorals of Flammius Vacca (N°, 72). They still hoped, on some future occasion, to revive and vindicate their grant, by After measuring the priscus amphitheath gyrus, Montfaucon (p. 142.) only adds, that it was entire under Paul III., taccido clainat. Muratori (Annali d'Italia, tom xiv. p. 671) more freely reports the guilt of the Farnese pope, and the indugnation of the Roman people. Against the highests of Urban VIII. I have no other evidence than the vulgar saying, "Quod non fecerunt Barban, fecere Barberini," which was perhaps suggested by the resemblance of the words.

⁶⁾ Collseum . . . ob stultitiam Romanorum majori ex parte ad calcem deletum, says the indumant Poggius (p. 17) but his expression, too strong for the present age, must be very tenderly applied to the with century.

proach is applied to the Barberini; and the repetition of injury might be dreaded from every reign. till the Coliseum was placed under the safeguard and constof religion by the most liberal of the pontiffs, Benedict the fourteenth, who consecrated a spot which persecution and fable had stained with the blood of so many Christian martyrs64.

CHAP the Coh-

When Petrarch first gratified his eyes with a 1 monance view of those monuments, whose scattered frag- and harbiments so far surpass the most eloquent descrip- Romans tions, he was astonished at the supine indifference" of the Romans themselves"; he was humbled rather than elated by the discovery, that, except his friend Rienzi and one of the Colonna. a stranger of the Rhône was more conversant with these antiquities than the nobles and natives of the metropolis⁽⁷⁾. The ignorance and credulity of the Romans are elaborately displayed in the old survey of the city which was composed

6) As an antiquarian and a priest, Montfaucon thre depice to the rnin of the Coliseum. Quod si non-uopte merito atque pulchritudine digium furs-et quod improbas arceret manis, radigita res uti que in locum tot in atymin critore sacrum fantopere centum * 0

65 Yea the Scatness of Rome [1] may 81 p. 1822 topose a fine of 500 auter on whosoever shall demolish my ancient editice, no rums civitàs deformetur, et ut antiqua ædificia de coi, in urbis per petuo representent.

66 In his first visit to Rone (A D 1337 See Memones sur Petrarque, tom. 1. p. 302, &c) Petrarch is struck mute nurseulo rerum tantanim, et stuporis mole obrutu-Parsento vero, mirum dictà, nihil minimuit - vere major fint Roma maioresque sunt reliquiae quam rebar. Jam non orbem ab hac urbe dominium, sed tam sero domitum, naror (Opp. p. 60s. F. miliores, n. 14. Joanna Columna.

197 He excepts and praces the inic knowledge of John Colonna Qui enim hodic magis aman terimi Romanarum, quata Romani cives. Invitus dico nas pant, minus Romo cognoceitur quo-Rome about the beginning of the thirteenth century: and, without dwelling on the manifold errors of name and place, the legend of the Capitol " may provoke a smile of contempt and indignation. "The Capitol," says the anonymous writer, " is " so named as being the head of the world; where "the consuls and senators formerly resided for " the government of the city and the globe. The " strong and lofty walls were covered with glass "and gold, and crowned with a roof of the "richest and most curious carving. Below the " citadel stood a palace, of gold for the greatest " part, decorated with precious stones, and whose " value might be esteemed at one-third of the " world itself. The statues of all the provinces " were arranged in order, each with a small bell " suspended from its neck; and such was the " contrivance of art magic", that if the province " rebelled against Rome, the statue turned round " to that quarter of the heavens, the bell rang,

CHAP

6. After the description of the Capitol, head ls, status crant quot sint mundi province, a crant-habitar quelibet (intumabulum ad collum). Exerain ita per magicini artem dispositie, ut quando iliqua regio Ramano Imperio rebellis erat, statun imago illius provincia vertebat se contra illiane, unde unitumabulum resonabat quod pendehar ad collum, timoque vates Capitolii qui erant circodes senatui, &i. He mentions an example of the Saxons and Suevi, who, after they had been subdued by Agrippa, again rebelled; timinmabulum sonurt. Sacerlos qui erat in speculo in hebdonadă senatoribus nuntiavit. Agrippa marched back and reduced the — Persans Almonym, in Montfaucou, p. 297, 298.

⁴⁰ The same winer affirms, that Virgil captus a Romants invisibiliter exist, ryaque Neapolim. A Roman magiciam, in the sist certure, is introduced by William of Malmsbury (de Gesus Region Andorum, Liu, p. 80%, and in the time of Hammins Varce (No. 81/10%) it was the vidgo belief that the strongers (the GPC) invoked the demonstor the disposers of holden trassures.

LXXL

" the prophet of the Capitol reported the pro-" digy, and the senate was admonished of the im-" pending danger." A second example of less importance, though of equal absurdity, may be drawn from the two marble horses, led by two naked youths, which have since been transported from the baths of Constantine to the Quirinal hill. The groundless application of the names of Phidias and Praxiteles may perhaps be excused; but these Grecian sculptors should not have been removed above four hundred years from the age of Pericles to that of Tiberius: they should not have been transformed into two philosophers or magicians, whose nakedness was the symbol of truth or knowledge, who revealed to the emperor his most secret actions; and, after refusing all pecuniary recompence, solicited the honour of leaving this eternal monument of themselves?'. Thus awake to the power of magic, the Romans were insensible to the beauties of art: no more than five statues were visible to the eyes of Poggius; and of the multitudes which chance or design had buried under the ruins, the resurrection was fortunately delayed till a safer and more enlightened age 71. The Nile, which now adorns the Vatican, had been 70 Anonym p. 280. Montfaueon, p. 1913, justly observes, that if Alexander be represented, these statues cannot be the work of Phidias (Olympiad Exxina) or Praxiteles. Olympiad examples before that conquerors (Plin. Hist. Natur. xxxiv. 194).

⁷⁾ Walliam of Malinsbiny (1 in p. 80, 67) relates a mary flous discovery (A.D. 1046) of Palla, the son of by ander, who had been slain by Tunnis, the perpetual light in his sepulchie, a Latin epitaph, the corpse, set enois, of a young grant, the enoimous wound explored by some labourers, in digging a vineyard near the temple, or convent, of the Minerva; but the impatient proprietor, who was tormented by some visits of curiosity, restored the unprofitable marble to its former grave 7.7. The discovery of a statue of Pompey, ten feet in length, was the occasion of a law-suit. It had been found under a partition-wall: the equitable judge had pronounced, that the head should be separated from the body to satisfy the claims of the contiguous owners; and the sentence would have been executed, if the intercession of a cardinal, and the liberality of a pope, had not rescued the Roman hero from the hands of his barbarous countrymen 7.

{c toraion and rnaments (the cut), (D 1120, c. But the clouds of barbarism were gradually dispelled; and the peaceful authority of Martin the fifth and his successors, restored the ornaments of the city as well as the order of the ecclesiastical state. The improvements of Rome, since the fifteenth century, have not been the spontaneous produce of freedom and industry. The first and most natural root of a great city, is the labour and populousness of the adjacent country, which in his breat (pectus perforatingers), &c.—If this fable rests on the slightert foundation, we may pity the bodies, as well as the statues, that were exposed to the ur in a barbarous age.

7º Prope porti um Minervae, statua est recubantis, cujus caput integră effigie tantă magnitudinis, ut signa omina execulat. Quidam ad plantandos arbores scrobes faciens detexit. Ad hoc visculam cum plures in dies magis concurrerent, strepitum ademitium lastidiumque pertissis, horti patronis congesta liunio texit (Poggiude Varietate Fortune, p. 123).

73 See the Memorials of Flammus Vacco, No 57, p. 11, 12, at the end of the Roma Antica of Nardini (1704, m. (10.).

supplies the materials of subsistence, of manufactures, and of foreign trade. But the greater part of the Campagna of Rome is reduced to a dreary and desolate wilderness: the overgrown estates of the princes and the clergy are cultivated by the lazy hands of indigent and hopeless vassals; and the scanty harvests are confined or exported for the benefit of a monopoly. A second and more artificial cause of the growth of a metropolis, is the residence of a monarch, the expence of a luxurious court, and the tributes of dependent provinces. Those provinces and tributes had been lost in the fall of the empire: and if some streams of the silver of Peru and the gold of Brasil have been attracted by the Vatican; the revenues of the cardinals, the fees of office, the oblations of pilgrims and clients, and the remnant of ecclesiastical taxes, afford a poor and precarious supply, which maintains however the idleness of the court and city. The population of Rome, far below the measure of the great capitals of Europe, does not exceed one hundred and seventy thousand inhabitants71; and within the spacious inclosure of the walls, the largest portion of the seven hills is overspread with vineyards and ruins. The beauty and splendour of the modern city may be ascribed to the abuses of the government, to the influence of superstation.

CHAP

⁷⁴ In the year 1700, the inhabitants of Rober warm of the haloz eight or ten thousand Jew 4 amounted to 138, tot rook 11 deat, Voyages en Espagne et en It the, form in 19-217, 1183 1 In 1740, they had mercased to 140,080, and in 1700, I len them, without the Jews, 101,300 1 am ignorant whether they have since coatinged in a progressive state.

CHAP.

Each reign (the exceptions are rare) has been marked by the rapid elevation of a new family, enriched by the childish pontiff at the expence of the church and country. The palaces of these fortunate nephews are the most costly monuments of elegance and scrvitude; the perfect arts of architecture, painting, and sculpture, have been prostituted in their service, and their galleries and gardens are decorated with the most precious works of antiquity, which taste or vanity has prompted them to collect. The ecclesiastical revenues were more decently employed by the popes themselves in the pomp of the Catholic worship: but it is superfluous to enumerate their pious foundations of altars, chapels, and churches, since these lesser stars are eclipsed by the sun of the Vatican, by the dome of St. Peter, the most glorious structure that ever has been applied to the use of religion. The fame of Julius the second. Lee the tenth, and Sixtus the fifth, is accompanied by the superior merit of Bramante and Fontana, of Raphael and Michael-Angelo: and the same munificence which had been displayed in palaces and temples, was directed with equal zeal to revive and emulate the labours of antiquity. Prostrate obelisks were raised from the ground, and erected in the most conspicuous places; of the eleven aqueducts of the Cæsars and consuls, three were restored; the artificial rivers were conducted over a long series of old, or of new, arches, to discharge into marble basins a flood of salubrious and refreshing waters: and the spectator, impatient to ascend the steps of St.

Peter's, is detained by a column of Egyptian granite, which rises between two lofty and perpetual fountains, to the height of one hundred and twenty feet. The map, the description, the monuments of ancient Rome, have been elucidated by the diligence of the antiquarian and the student ": and the footsteps of heroes, the relics, not of superstition, but of empire, are devoutly visited by a new race of pilgrims from the remote, and once savage, countries of the North.

Of these pilgrims, and of every reader, the at- fands on tention will be excited by an history of the decline and fall of the Roman empire; the greatest, perhaps, and most awful scene, in the history of The various causes and progressive mankind.

7) The Pere Montfinion distribute his own object dons into twenty days, he should have styled them yeed a or mouth, of his visits to the different part of the city. Diamon Italieum, c. 8-20. p 104-301 a. That learned Bouchetine reviews the topographics of Ancient Rome, the first efforts of Blondo Traker, Marriaga, and Faunce, the superior labours of Perilie Teories, had belearning been equal to his labours, the writing of Omighious Panymins, qui omne obseravit, and the recent but imperfect books of Donatus, and Nardini. Act Montineon of the history a more complete plan and description of the old cras, which is not be attained by the three following methods -1. The measurement of the space and interval of the runs of The analy of its appropria and the places where they were found In a car arm of all the acts, charters, diaries of the middle ages, which acone any spot or birdding of Rome. The laborious work, such as Monttancon desired, must be promoted by princely or public non-eaceneebut the great modern pley of Nolls A D 171- would finar ha solid and securate basis for the ascient topological of Rome effects are connected with many of the events, most interesting in human annals: the artful po! licy of the Cæsars, who long maintained the name and image of a free republic; the disorders of military despotism; the rise, establishment, and sects of Christianity; the foundation of Constantinople; the division of the monarchy; the invasion and settlements of the Barbarians of Germany and Seythia; the institutions of the civil law; the character and religion of Mahomet; the temporal sovereignty of the popes; the restoration and decay of the Western empire of Charlemagne; the crusades of the Latins in the East; the conquests of the Saracens and Turks: the ruin of the Greek empire; the state and revolutions of Rome in the middle age. The historian may applaud the importance and variety of his subject; but, while he is conscious of his own imperfections, he must often accuse the deficiency of his materials. It was among the ruins of the Capitol, that I first conceived the idea of a work which has amused and exercised near twenty years of my life, and which, however inadequate to my own wishes, I finally deliver to the curiosity and candour of the public.

CHAP. LXXI.

^{*} I.AUSANNE. June 27, 1787.

N. B. The Roman Numerals refer to the Volume, and the Figures to the Page.

Α

ABAN, the Saracen, heroism of his widow, 18, 3/3,

Abhassides, elevation of the house of, to the office of caliph of the Saracens, x, 28.

Abdallah, the Saracen, his excursion to plunder the fair of Abyla, ix. 400. His African expedition, 401.

Abdalmalel, caliph of the Saracens, refuses tribute to the emperor of Constantinople, and establishes a national munt, x 7

Abdah ahman, the Saracen, establishes his throne at Cordove in Spain, x, 31. Splendour of his court, 37. The estimate of his happiness, 59.

Abdelaziz, the Saracen, his treaty with Theodema the Gothic prince of Spain, ix 481, 482. His death, 485.

Abderâne, his expedition to France, and victories there, x 24. His death, 26.

Abdol Motalleb, the grandfather of the prophet M diomet, his history, ix, 253.

Abgarus, inquiry into the authenticity of his correspondence with Jesus Christ, ix. 117

Abgarus, the last King of Edessa, sent in chains to Rome, 1 "37.

Ablanus, the confidential prafect under Constantine the Great, a conspiracy formed against him on that emperor's death, in 130. Is put to death, 132.

Abu Ayub, his history, and the veneration part to his memory by the Maliometans, x. 5, xii. 214.

Abubeker, the friend of Mahomet, is one of his first converts, ix. 283. Flies from Mecca with him, 288. Succeeds Mahomet as callph of the Saracens, 332. His character, 338

Abu Caab commands the Andalusian Moors who subdued the island of Crete, x, 58.

VOL. XIL.

Abu Sophian, prince of Mecca, conspires the death of Mahomet, ix. 288. Battles of Beder and Ohud, 298-301. Besieges Median without success, 301. Surrenders Mecca to Mahomet, and receives him as a prophet, 307.

Abu Tuker, the Carmathian, pillages Mecca, x. 77.

Abulfedu, his account of the splendour of the caliph Moctader, x. 37.

Abulpharagius, primate of the Eastern Jacobites, some account of, vii 353. His encomium on wisdom and learning, x. 42.

Abundantius, general of the East, and patron of the cunuch Eutropius, is disgraced and exiled by him, v. 381.

Abyla, the fair of, plundered by the Saracens, 1x. 402.

Abyssaua, the inhabitants of, described, vii. 340. Their alliance with the cooperor Justinian, 343. Ecclesiastical history of, viii. 307.

Accens, hishop of Annda, an uncommon instance of episcopal benevolence, v. 427.

Achara, its extent, i. 38,

Acre, the memorable siege of, by the crusaders, xi. 132. Final loss of, 106.

Actions, institutes of Justinian respecting, viii. 82.

Actium, a review of Roman affair, after the battle of, i. 95.

Address, the only martyr of distinction during the persecution under Dioelettan, n. 480.

Adolphas, the brother of Alarre, brings him a reinforcement of troops, v. 296. Is made count of the domestics to the new emperor Attabis, 305. Succeeds his brother as king of the Goths, and concludes a peace with Honorius, 330.

Adoption, the two kinds of, under the Greek empire, xi. 49, note.

Adoption of the Roman emperor, custom of, and derivation of the term, x. 124.

Adorno, the Genouse governor of Phocma, conveys Amurath II. from Asia to Europe, xn. 52.

Adrian L., pope, his alhance with Charlemagne against the Lombards, IX., 150. His reception of Charlemagne at Rome, 154, 155.

Asserts the fictitious donation of Constantine the Great, 159.

Adultery, distinctions of, and how pumshed by Augustus, vini. 99. By the Christian emperors, 102.

Ælia Capitolina, founded on Mount Sion, by Hadrian, ii. 270.

Elius Patus, his Tripartic, the oldest work of Roman jurisprudence, von. 25.

Emilianus, governor of Pannonia and Mæsia, routs the bai barous invaders of the empire, and is declared emperor by his troops, i. 408.

Encus of Gaza, his attestation of the miraculous gift of speech to the Catholic confessors of Tipasa, whose tongues had been cut out, vi. 204.

Eneus Sylvius, his account of the impracticability of an European crusade against the Turks, xii. 253. His epigram on the destruction of ancient buildings in Rome, 413. note.

Era of the world, remarkable epochas in, pointed out, vii. 15! note.

—... Gelalæan, of the Turks, when settled, x. 367.

aicrtal tribute, in the Eastern empire, what, vii. 106.

- Etius, surnamed the Atherst, his character and adventures, in. 339 351. 370. note
- -, the Roman general under Valent man III his character, vi. 9. His treacherous scheme to runneoue t Boniface, 11. Is forced to retire into Runnine, 26. His invitation of the Hans into the empire, 39. Screet the administration of the West 1 compire, 89. His character, as given by Renatus, a contemporary historian, 60. Laploys the Huns and Alam in the defence of Gord, 02. Concludes a peace with Theodoric, 97. Roses the second Orleins, 110. Battle of Chalons, 112. His prinden e cu the a ivasion of Italy by Attily, 129 - Is murdered by Valentinian, 139

Africa, its situation and revolution , (11). Great revenue 1 and from, by the Romans, 2/3 Progress of Christianity there, it 505 is distracted with religious discord in the time of Constantine the Great, m. 307. Character and revolved the Cacamer lhores, 398. Oppressions of, under the government of rount Romanus,

General state of Africa, 508

-, revolt at count Bonifice there, vi 11 Arrival of Genseric king of the Vandals, 11. Per remion of the Donatists, 10. Devastations of, by the Vand ds. 20. Carthige surprised by Gen-Persecution of the Catholics, 280.

-, expedition of Belisaius to, vii. 108. Is recovered by the Romans, 186. The government of, settled by Justinian, 187. Revolt of the troops there, under Stoza, 349. Devastation of the war, 353.

-, invasion of, by the Saracens, ix 44). Conquest of, by Akbah, 455. Decline and extinction of Christianity there, 495. Revolt and independence of the Saracens there, x. 79.

Aglabates, the Saracen dynasty of, x, 70,

Aglae, a Roman lady, patronises St. Boniface, n. 182, Agricola, review of his conduct in Britain, 1, 7.

Agriculture, great improvement of, in the western countries of the Roman empire, 1, 84. State of, in the Eastern empire, under Justiman, iv. 70.

Ajax, the sepulchre of, how distinguished, in. 11.

Aiznadin, battle of, between the Saracens and the Greeks, ix. 388.

Akbah, the Saracen, his exploits in Africa, ix. 455.

Alam, occasion of these people invading Asia, it 68. Conquest of, by the Huns, iv. 371. Jum the Goths who had emigrated into Thrace, 400. See Goths, and Vanduly.

Alaric, the Goth, learns the art of war under Theodosius the Great, v. 80. Becomes the leader of the Gothic revolt, and ravages Greece, 178. Escapes from Stilicho, 180. Is appointed master general of the Eastern Illyricum, 188. His invasion of Italy, 190. Is defeated by Stilicho at Pollentia, 199 Is driven out of Italy, 203. 1s, by treaty with Honorius, declared master general of the Roman armies throughout the præfecture of Illyricum, 231. His pleas and motives for marching to Rome, 252. Encamps under the walls of that city, 255. Accepts a ransom, and raises the siege, 295. His negociations with the emperor Honorius, 297. His second siege of Rome, 303. Places Attalus on the Imperial throne, 305. Degrades him, 309. Seizes the city of Rome, 311. His sack of Rome compared with that by the emperor Charles V., 323. Retires from Rome, and ravages Italy, 325. His death and burial, 325.

Alaric II, king of the Goths, his overthrow by clovis king of the Franks, vi. 330.

Alberic, the son of Marozia, his revolt, and government of Rome, 1x, 201.

Albigeois of France, persecution of, x. 187.

Albaia, king of the Lombards, his history, viii, 117. His alliance with the Avars against the Gepide, 119, 120. Reduces the Gepide, 121. He undertakes the conquest of Italy, 122. Overtums what is now called Lombardy, 126. Assumes the regal tale there, 127, 128. Takes Pavia, and makes it his capital city, 128, 129. Is murdered at the instigation of his queen Rosamond, 129.

Alchemy, the books of, in Egypt, destroyed-by Diocletian, ii. 157. Aleppo, siege and capture of, by the Sarkeens, ix. 415. Is recovered by the Greeks, x. 90. Is taken and sacked by Tamerlane, xii, 21.

Alexander III., pope, establishes the papal election in the college of cardinals, xii, 300.

Alexander, archbishop of Alexandria, excominunicates Arius for his heresy, iii, 328.

Alexander Severus, is declared Cæsar by the emperor Elagabalus, 1236. Is raised to the throne, 240 Examination into his pretended victory over Artaxerxes, 537. Shewed a regard for the Christian religion, il, 450.

Alexandria, a general massacre there, by order of the emperor Canacalla, 1, 219. The city described, 452. Is runced by indiculous intestine commotions, 453. By famine and pestilence, 456, Is besieged and taken by Diocletian, ii. 134. The Christian theology reduced to a systematical form in the school of, 363. Number of martyrs who suffered there in the persecution by Decius, 428.

, the theological system of Plato taught in the school of, and received by the Jews there, in 316. Questions concerning the nature of the Triinty, aguitated in the philosophical and Christian schools of, 321, 327. History of the archbishop St. Athanasus, 350. Outrages attending his expulsion and the establishment of his successor, George of Cappadocia, 380. The city distracted by pious factions, 389. Disgrareful life and tragical death of George of Cappadocia, iv. 125. Restoration of Athanasus, 131. Athanasus banished by Julian, 132. Suffers greatly by an earthquake, 339.

ple, and the famous library, destroyed by lishop Theophilus, 111.

, is taken by Amrou the Saracen, ix. 435. The famous library destroyed, 439.

Alexius Angelus, his usurpation of the Greek empire, and character, N. 185. Pries before the crusado , 212 Alexius I. Commenus, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 83. New titles of dignity ingented by him, 121. Battle of Darazzo, 2.11. So-heats the art of the emperor Henry III 300.

- solicits the of the Christian princes against the Turks, xi. 6. His suspicious policy on the arrival of the crusaders, 45, 46. Exacts homage from them, 48. Profits by the success of the crosaders, 101, 102,

Alextus II. Comnenus, emperor of Constantinople, ix 92

Alexius Strategopulus, the Greek general, retakes Constantinople from the Latins, xi. 284, Alexaes, the son of Isaac Angelus, his escape from his uncle, who had deposed his father, xi, 186. His fresty with the criesiders for his restoration, 202. Restoration of his father, 217. His death, 225, Agreed sends an embassy to the shrine of St. Thomas in India, vm. 545.

Algebra, by whom invented, x. 47.

Ah, jour Mahomet in his prophetical mission, ix 1984. His heroism, 304. His character, 324. Is chosen caliph of the Saracens, 333. Devotion paid at his tomb, 341. This posterity, 342.

Alizern, defends Cum e. for his brother Teias, king of the Goths, vii 390. Is reduced, 392.

Allectus murders Carausius, and usurps his station, ii. 127

Allemann, the origin and warlike spirit of, i. 117. Are driven out of Italy by the senate and people, 415. Invade the empire under Amelian, n. 21. Are totally routed, 21. Gaul delivered from then depredations by Constantins Chlorus, 151.

--- invade and establish themselves in Gaul, in 211 deteated at Strasburgh by Julian, 223. Are reduced by Julian in his expections beyond the Rhine, 229. Invade Gaul under the emperor Valentinian, iv. 277. Are reduced by Jovinia, 279. And chastised by Valentinian, 282.

- are subdued by Clovis king of the Franks, vi. 310.

Alp Arstan, sultan of the Turks, his reign, x 102.

Alypius, governor of Britain, is commissioned by the emperor Juhan to rebuild the temple of Jerusalem, iv 105.

Amaig, king of the Goths, his high credit among them 1 201

Amalusentha, queen of Italy, her history and character, vii 206. Her death, 210.

Amaiphi, description of the city, and its commerce, x. 27%.

Amusons, improbability of any society of, ii. 10, note.

Ambition, reflections on the violence, and various operations of that passion, ix. 1co.

Ambrose, St., composed a treatise on the Timity, for the use of the emperor Gratian, v. 4. note. His birth, and promotion to the archbishopric of Milan. 38. Opposes the Arian worship of the empress Justina, 30. Refuses obedience to the Imperial power, 45. Controuls the emperor Theodosius, 65, 60. Imposes penance on Theodosius for his cruel treatment of Thessalonica, 71. Employed his influence over Gratian and Theodosius, to inspire them with maxims of persecution, 91. Opposes Symmachus, the advocate for the old Pagan religion, 99. Comfort; the critzens of Florence with a dream, when besieged by Kadagansus, 218

Anida, siege of, by Sapor king of Persia, in., 2/5. Receives the foguive inhabitants of Nishis, iv. 220. Is besieged and taken by Cabades king of Persia, vii, 138.

Amir, prince of lonia, his character, and passage into Europe, xi. 438. Ammianus the historian, his religious character of the emperor Constantius, in. 352. His remark on the enumity of Christians toward each other, 103. His account of the fiery obstructions to restoring the temple of Jerusalem, iv. 108. His account of the hostile contest of Damasis and Ursinus for the bishopric of Rome, iv. 274. Testimony in tayour of his historical merit, 427. His character of the nobles of Rome, v. 207.

Ammonius, the muthematician, his measurement of the circuit of Rome, v. 237.

Ammonius, the monk of Alexandria, his martyrdom, viii. 280.

Amorium, siege and destruction of, by the caliph Motassem, x. 69.

Amphilochus, bishop of Iconium, gains the favour of the emperor Theodosius by an orthodox bon mot, v. 16.

Amphitheatre at Rome, a description of ii. 103, xii. 418.

Amou, his birth and character, ix. 425. His invasion and conquest of Egypt, 423. His administration there, 443. His description of the country, 415.

Amurath I. sultan of the Turks, his reign, xi. 444.

Amurath II. sultan, his reign and character, xii. 150.

Anachorets, in monkish history, described, vi. 263.

Anacletics, pope, his Jewish extraction, xii. 315.

Anastasias I. marries the empress Ariadne, vii. 6. His war with Theodoric, the Ostrogoth king of Italy, 24. His occonomy celebrated, 101. His long wall from the Proportis to the Euxine, 129. Is humbled by the Catholic clergy, viii, 316.

Anastasses II, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 24. His preparations of defence against the Saracens, x. 8.

Anastasius, St., his brief history and martyrdom, viii. 223. note. Anatho, the city of, on the banks of the Euphrates, described, iv.

Andalusia, derivation of the name of that province, ix. 407. note.
Androneus, president of Lybia, excommunicated by Synesius bi-shop of Prolemais, in. 209, 300.

Andronicus Commenus, his character, and first adventures, ix. 92. Seizes the empire of Constantinople, 104. His unhappy fate, 107. Andronicus, the Elder, emperor of Constantinople, his superstition, xi. 858. His war with his grandson, and abdication, 360.

Andronicus, the Younger, emperor of Constantinople, his heentious character, xi. 363. His civil war against his grandfather 365. His reign, 369. Is vanquished and wounded by sultan Orchan, 436. His private application to pope Benedict XII. of Rome, xii. 66.

Angora, battle of, between Tamerlane and Bajazet, xii. 66.

Anianus, bishop of Orleans, his pious anxiety for the relief of that city, when besieged by Attila the Hun, vi 108.

Anacom family at Rome, brief history of, v. 259.

Anna Commena, Maryeter of her history of her father, Alexius I.

emperor of Cossantinople, ix. 83. Her conspirary against her brother John, 86.

Anthemius, emperor of the West, his descent, and investiture by Lea the Great, vi. 193. His election confirmed at Rome, 194. Is killed in the sack of Rome by Ricimer, 217, 218.

Anthonius, pra fect of the East, character of his administration, in the minority of the emperor Theodonus the younger, v. 411, 115. Anthonius the architect, instances of his great knowledge in mechames, vo. 114. Forms the design of the church of St. Sophia at Constantmople, 117.

Anthony, St., father of the Egyptian monks, his history, vi. 241.

Anthropomorphites, among the early Christians, personifiers of the Deny, vm. 209.

Autoch taken and destroyed by Sapor king of Persia, i. 438. Honrishing state of the Christian church there, in the reign of Theodostus, 11, 361.

-, history of the body of St. Babylas, bishop of, iv 122. The cathedral of, shut up, and its wealth confiscated, by the emperor Julian, 123. Licentious manners of the enizens, 141 discontents during the residence of Julian there, 140.

-, sedition there, against the emperor Theodosius, v. (1). The city paidoned, 64.

, is taken, and ruined, by Chosroes king of Persia, vii. 313. Great destruction there by an earthquake, 117. Is again serzed by Chostoes II., viu. 220.

-, is reduced by the Saracens, and ransomed, ix. 417 covered by the Greeks, x. 90.

-, besieged and taken by the first crusaders, xi 64.

Autonina, the wife of Belisarius, her character, vii 104 | 1 xamines and convicts pope Sylverius of treachery, 235. Her activity during the siege of Rome, 241. Her secret hi tory, 201. Tounds a convent for her retreat, 108.

Antoninus, a Roman refugee at the court of Supor king of Person, stimulates him to an invasion of the Rom in provinces, (a. 203)

Autonius Pius, his character, and that of Hadijan, compactly is 12.

Is adopted by Hadrian, 122.

Antoniaus Marcas, his defensive wars, 1-13. Is adopted by Parat the instance of Halran, 123. He character, Lee Heswar against the united Germans, 381. Suspicious story of his coner in tayour of the Christians, it 415.

Aper, Arrais, practorian praefect, and father-in-law to the emperor Nunger in , is killed by Diocletian as the presumptive murcerer of that price, n. 108

Apharban, the Persian, his embassy from Naises king of Persia, to the emperor Galerius, n. 149. -

Appendix of the Scriptures, in 304, note.

Apocaucus, admiral of Constantinople, his confederacy against John Cantacuzene, xi. 374. His death, 580.

Apollourus, Dishop of Laedicea, his hy pothes of the divine incarnation of Jesus Christ, viii. 271.

Apollumus, patriarch of Alexandria, butchers his flock in defence of the Catholic doctrine of the incarnation, vin. 302.

Apollonius of Tyana, his doubtful character, ii. 37. note.

Apotheous of the Roman emperors, how this custom was introduced,

Apsimar dethrones Leontius emperor of Constantinople, and usurps his place, ix, 19.

Apulia, is conquered by the Normans, x, 262. Is confirmed to them by papal grant, 270.

Aydata, besieged by the emperor Maximin, 1, 206. Is taken and destroyed by Attila king of the Huns, vi. 124.

Aquitain, is settled by the Goths, under their king Wallia, v. 5.8. Is conquered by Clovis king of the Franks, vi. 536.

Abula, its situation, soil, and climate, ix, 219. Its division into the Sandy, the Stony, and the Happy, 222. The pastoral Arabs, 223. Their hoises and camels, 224, 225. Cities of, 226. Manners and enstoms of the Arabs, 228. Their language, 239. Their bene volence, 202. History and description of the Caaba of Mecca, 245. Religious, 249. Life and doctrine of Mahomet, 253. Conquest of, by Mahomet, 309. Character of the caliphs, 357. Rapid conquests of, 504. Limits of their conquests, x-1. Three caliphs established, x, 34. Introduction of learning among the Arabians, 41. Their progress in the sciences, 44. Their literary deficiencies, 90. Decline and fall of the caliphs, 77, 78.

Arbeito, a veteral under Constantine the Great, leaves his retirement to oppose the usin per Procopius, 19, 249.

Arlogastes, the I rank, his initiary promotion under Theodosius in Gail, and conspiracy against Valentinian the Younger, v. 77. Is defeated by Theodosius, and kills himself, v. 84, 85.

Areadins, son of the emperor Theodosius, succeeds to the empire of the Fast, v. 137. This magnificence, 373. Extent of his domimons, 374. Administration of his favourite eunich Eutropus, 576. This cruel law against treason, 383. Signs the condemnation of Tutropuis, 391. His interview with the revolters Tribiglid and Gainas, 393, 394. This death, and supposed testament, 412.

Architecture, Roman, the general magnificence of, indicated by the existing times, 1, 70

Andabarius, his expedition to Italy, to reduce the usurper John, vi. 4.
Argonauts, the object of their expedition to Colchos, vii. 321.

Arradne, daughter of the emperor Leo, and write of Zeno, her character, and marriage afterward with Anastasous, vii. 6.

Arm, a tribe of the Lygians, their terrific mode of waging war, n. 78. Armthour, is appointed general of the horse by the emperor Julian on

- his Persian expedition, iv. 162. Distinguishes himself against the usurper Procopus, 249.
- Artoristics segges two thirds of the lamb of the Sequam in Gaul, for a himself and his German followers, vi. 301
- Aristobulus, principal minister of the house of Carus, is received into confidence by diegemperor Diocletian, it. 114.
- Aristotle, his logic better adapted to the detection of error, than for the discovery of truth, x, 46.
- Asias, is excommunicated for heretical notions concerning the Trinny, in, 328. Strength of his party, did. This opinions examined in the council of Nice, 552. Account of Arian sects, 353. Council of Rimin, 513. His banishment and recal, 347, 343. His suspicious death, 518.
- ----, the Arrans persecute the Catholics in Africa, vi. 280
- Armenia, is seized by Sepor king of Persia, i. 195. Triidates restored, ii. 199. He is again expelled by the Persians 114. Is resigned to Triidates by treaty between the Romans and Persians, 194.
- ———, is rendered tributary to Persia, on the death of Tributes, in, 157. Character of Arsaces Trianus, king of, and his conduct toward the emperor Johan, iv. 157, 158. Is reduced by Sapor to a Persian province, 342.
- Romans, v, 428.
- history of Christmanty there, vin. 557, 538.
- Armies of the Eastern empire, state of, onder the emperor Maurice, viii, 203.
- Araoroa, the provinces of, form a free government independent on the Romans, v. 303. Submits to Clovis king of the Franks, vi. 322. Settlement of Butons in, 389.
- At mour, defensive, is laid uside by the Romans, and adopted by the Barbarians v. 89.
- Arnold of Brescia, his heresy, and history, xii. 271.
- Arragon, derivation of the name of that province, i. 51, note.
- Arraia, his visit to, and description of, Colchos vii, 327.
- Arsa ex Trian, v. King of Armema, his character, and disaffection to the emperor Julian, iv. 157, 158. Withdraws his troops treacherously from the Roman service, 185. His disastrous end, 312.
- Arsen as, patriarch of Constantinople, excommunicates the emperor Michael Pala ologus, xi, 527. Taction of the Arsenites, 328.
- Artaban, king of Parthia, is defeated and slain by Artaxeixes king of Persia, 1–318.
- Artaban, his conspiracy against the emperor Justinian, vii. 374. Is entrusted with the conduct of the armament sent to Italy, 378.
- Artas, res. king of Armenia, is deposed by the Persians at the instigation of his own subjects, v. 131.
- Artazasies, his revolt against the Greek emperor Constantine V. at Constantinople, ix 328.
- Attack restores the Person monarchy, a 51%. Prohibits every worship but their of Zoros (cr. 52%. His war with the Romans, 337 11; character and maxing, 541.

- Astemius, duke of Egypt under Constantius, is condemned to death under Julian, for cruelty and corruption, iv. 49.
- Arthur, king of the Britons, his history obscured by monkish fic-
- Art andus, prætorian præfect of Gaul, his trial and condemnation by the Roman senate, vi. 208.
- Ascalon, battle of, between Godfrey king of Jerusalem, and the sultan of Egypt, xi. 87.
- Ascetics, in ecclesiastical history, account of, vi. 239.
- Asclepiodatus reduces and kills the British usurper Allectus, ii. 128. Asia, summary view of the revolutions in that quarter of the world,
- i. 316.

 Asia Minor described, i. 38. Amount of its tribute to Rome, 257.

 Is conquered by the Turks, x. 370.
- Assarch, the nature of this office among the ancient Pagans, 11. 354.
- Aspar is commissioned by Theodosius the Younger to conduct Valentinian III. to Italy, vi. 4. Places his steward Leo on the throne of the Eastern empire, 191. He and his sons murdered by Leo, vii. 4.
- Assassins, the principality of, destroyed by the Moguls, xi. 417.
- Assemblies of the people abolished under the Roman emperors, i. 108. The nature of, among the ancient Germans, 362.
- Assyria, the province of, described, iv. 166. Is invaded by the emperor Julian, 164. His retreat, 193.
- Asiarte, her image brought from Carthage to Rome, as a spouse for Elagabalus, i. 235.
- Astolphus, king of the Lombards, takes the city of Ravenna, and attacks Rome, ix. 146. Is repelled by Pepin king of France, 148. Astrology, why cultivated by the Arabian astronomers, x. 48.
- Athalaric, the son of Amalasontha queen of Italy, his education and character, vii. 208.
- Athenaric the Gothic chief, his war against the emperor Valens, iv. 326. His alliance with Theodosius, his death and funeral, 432.
- Athanasius. St., confesses his understanding bewildered by meditating on the divinity of the Logos, iii, 322. General view of his opinions, $35. Is banished, $40. His character and adventures, 356. iv. 131 228. 267. Was not the author of the famous creed upder his name, vi. 291, note.
- Athanasius, patriarch of Constantinople, his contests with the Greek emperor Andronicus the Elder, x1. 359.
- Athenais, daughter of the philosopher Leontius. See Eudocia.
- Athens, the libraries in that city, why said to have been spared by the Goths, i. 434. Naval strength of the republic of, during its prosperity, ii. 257. note.
- , is laid under contribution by Alanc the Goth, v. 180.
- review of the philosophical history of, vii. 143. The schools of, silenced by the emperor Justinian, 150
- _____, revolutions of, after the crusades, and its present state, xi, 352.

Athos, mount, beatific visions of the monks of, xi. 387.

Atlantic Ocean, derivation of its name, i. 42, · Attacotts, a Caledonian tribe of cannibals, account of, iv. 298.

Actalus, prafeccot Rome, is chosen emperor by the senate, under the influence of Alaric, v. 305. Is publicly degraded, 309. His future fortune, 318.

Attalus, a noble your of Auvergne, his adventures, vi. 365.

Attila, the Hun, v. 40. Description of his person and character, 41. His compacts, 45. His treatment of his captives, 55. Imposes terms of peace on Theodosius the Younger, 61. Oppresses Theodosius by his ambassadors, 65. Description of his royal residence, 72. His reception of the ambassadors of Theodosius, 75. His behaviour on discovering the scheme of Theodosius to get him assassinated, 82. His haughty messages to the emperors of the East and West, 88. His invasion of Gaul, 107. His oration to his troops on the approach of Ænus and Theodoric, 115. Battle of Chalons, 116. His myasion of Italy, 122. His retreat purchased by Valentinian, 131. His death, 154.

Atyr and Cybele, the fable of, allegorised by the pen of Julian, iv.

A. ars, are discomfited by the Turks, vii. 289. Their embassy to the emperor Justinian, 201. Their conquests in Poland and Germany, 202. Their embassy to Justin II viii. 115. They join the Lombards against the Gepider, 119. Pride, policy, and power, of their chagan Baian, 194. Their compaests, 199. Invest Constantinople, 233.

Averroes, his religious infidelity, how far justifiable, x 51, note.

Aversa, a town near Naples, built as a settlement for the Normans, x 259.

Augury, Roman, then number and peculiar office, v. 92.

Augustin, his account of the intractes wrought by the body of St. Stephen, v. 120. Celebrates the picty of the Goths in the sacking of Rome, 313. Approves the persecution of the Donatists of Africa, vi. 17. His death, character, and writings, 22. History of his telies, vii. 185. note.

Augustulus, son of the patrician Orestes, is chosen emperor of the West, vi. 222. Is deposed by Odoacer, 221. His banishmens to the Lucullan villa in Campania, 228.

Augustus, emperor, his moderate exercise of power, i. 2. Is imitated by his successors, 4. His naval regulations, 29. His division of Gaul, 32. His situation after the battle of Actium, 95. He reforms the senate, 97. Procures a senatorial grant of the Imperial diginity, 98. Division of the provinces between him and the senate, 102. Is allowed his military command and guards in the city of Rome, 103. Obtains the consolar and tribunitian offices for life, 104. His character and policy, 114. Adopts Tiberius, 119. Formed an accurate register of the revenues and expences of after the pre, 257. Taxes instituted by him, 260. His naval establishments at Ravenna, v. 208.

Augustus and Casar, those titles explained and discriminated, i. 113.

Atiends, his character and embassy from Valentinian III. to Attila king of the Huns, vi. 130

Avignon, the holy see how transferred from Rome to that city, xii. ' 307. Return of pope Urban V. to Rome, 365.

Avitus, his embassy from Ætius to Theodoric king of the Visigoths, vi. 110. Assumes the empire, 157. His deposition and death, 166, 167.

Aurelian, emperor, his birth and services, it. 15. His expedition against Palmyra, 37. His triumph, 45. His cruelty, and death, 54, 55.

Aurengrebe, account of his immense camp, i. 333, note.

Aureolus is invested with the purple on the Upper Danube, ii. 2.

Ausonius, the tutor of the emperor Gratian, his promotions, v. 3. note.

Authoris, king of the Lombards in Italy, his wars with the Tranks, viii, 144. His adventurous gallantry, 153.

Autum, the city of stormed and plundered by the legions in Gaul, ii. 32. Auvergne, province and city of, in Gaul, revolutions of, vi. 302.

Auxiliaries, Barbarian, fatal consequences of their admission into the Roman armies, iti, 66.

Azuch, a Turkish slave, his generous friendship to the princess Anna Comnena, ix. 87. And to Manuel Comnenus, 88.

dzimuntium, the cuizens of, defend their privileges against Peter, brother of the Eastern emperor Maurice, vin. 201, 202.

Azimus, remarkable spirit shewn by the citizens of, against Attila and his Huns, vi. 63.

В

Bualbee, description of the ruins of, ix. 401.

Bubylas, St., bishop of Antioch, his posthumous history, iv. 121. Bugunda, in Gaul, revolt of, its occasion, and suppression by Maximian, ii, 120.

Baydad becomes the royal residence of the Abbassides, v. 35. Derivation of the name, 30. note. The fallen state of the caliphs of, 83. The city of, stormed and sacked by the Moguls, vi. 418.

Buhram, the Persian general, his character and exploits, viii. 181. Is provoked to rebellion, 183. Dethrones Chosroes, 186. His userpation and death, 190.

Baian, chagan of the Avars, his pride, policy, and power, vii. 104. His perfidious seizure of Sirmium and Singidanum, 197. His conquests, 190. His treacherous attempt to seize the emperor Herachus, 228. Invests Constantinople in conjunction with the Persians, 243. Retires, 245.

Bajazet I. sultan of the Turks, his reign, xi. 321. His correspondence with Tamerlane, xi. 17. Is defeated and captured by Tamerlane, 28. Inquiry into the story of the iron caue. 30. His sons. 47

Bullinus elected joint emperor with Maximus, by the senate, on the deaths of the two Gordians, 1. 291.

Baldwin, count of Flanders, engages in the fourth crusade, ix. 190.
 Is chosen emperor of Constantinople, 246.
 Is taken prisoner by Calo-John Aing of the Bulgari ins. 200.
 His death, 262.

Bathum II. emperor of Constantinople, xii. 273. His distresses and expedients, 270. This expulsion from that city, 287.

Builds in, brother of Godfrey of Bomilion, accompanies him on the first crusade, xi. 31. Founds the principality of Edessa, 63.

Lialtic Sca. progressive subsidence of the water of, i. 346, note.
How the Romans acquired a knowledge of the naval powers of, iv, 288, note.

Fuption, theory and practice of, among the primitive Christians, in. 272.

Burbary, the name of that country, whence derived, ix, 463, note. The Moors of, converted to the Mahometan faith, 303.

Barbatto, general of infantry in Gaul under Julian, his misconduct, in, 221.

Barcochelas, his rebellion against the emperor Hadrian, ii. 385. Bards, Celtic, then power of exciting a martial enthusiasm in the people, i. 374.

Bards, British, their peculiar office and duties, vi. 308.

Burdas, Casar, one of the restorers of learning, x. 457.

Bur is taken from the Saraceus, by the joint efforts of the Latin and Greek empires, v. 248.

Barlaam, a Calabrian monk, his dispute with the Greek theologians about the light of mount Thabor, xi. 588. His embassy to Rome, from Andronicus the Younger, xi. 66. His literary character, 120. Basil I, the Macedoman, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 18. Reduces the Patherans, x. 181.

Basii II comperor of Constantinople, ix, 67. His given wealth, x, 213. His inhuman treatment of the Bulg mans, 202.

Basil, archbishop of Casarea, no evidence of his having been persecuted by the emperor Valens, iv. 269. Insults his fixed Gregory Nazianzen, under the appearance of promotion, v. 19. The father of the monks of Pontus, vi. 244, 215.

Basiliscus, brother of the empress Verma, is entinsted with the command of the armament sent against the Vandals in Africa, vi. 201. His fleet destroyed by Genseric, 203. His promotion to the empire, and death, vii. 5.

Bassianus, high priest of the sun, his parentage, 1 220. Is proclaimed emperor at Emesa, ibid. See Eluzabulus.

Bassanus, brother-in law to Constantine, revolts against him, ii. 244. Bassara, its foundation and situation, ix. 308.

Baths, public, of Rome, described, v. 282.

Batnæ, reception of the emperor Julian there, iv. 1.4

Beasts, wild, the variety of, introduced in the circus, for the public games at Rome, ii. 101.

Bequisgher M de, character of his Histoire ('ritique du Manicheisme, viii. 200), note.

Beder, battle of, between Mahomet and the Koreish of Mecca, ix. 209. Bedoucens of Arabia, their mode of life, ix. 223.

Bees, remarks on the structure of their combs and cells, x. 42, note. Belisarius, his birth and military promotion, vii. 101. Is appointed by Justinian to conduct the African war, 164. Emborkation of his troops, 167. Lands in Africa, 171. Defeats Gilmer, 176. Is received into Carthage, 177. Second defeat of Gelimer, 184. Reduction of Africa, 186. Surrender of Gehmer, 191. His tilumphant return to Constantinople, 194. Redeclared sole consul. 105. He menaces the Ostrogoths of Italy, 205. He seizes Sicily. Invades Italy, 217. Takes Naples, 220. He enters Rome, 212. He is besieged in Rome by the Goths, ibid. The siege raised, 246. Causes Constantine, one of his generals, to be killed, 247. Siege of Ravenna, 253. Takes Ravenna by stratagem, 256. Returns to Constantinople, 258. His character and behaviour, 259. Scandalous life of his wife Antonina, 201. His disgrace and submission, 207. Is sent into the East to oppose Chosroes king of Persia, 315. His politic reception of the Persian ambassadors, 316. His second campaign in Italy, 500. His ineffectual attempt to raise the siege of Rome, 304. Dissuades Totila from destroying Rome, 360. Recovers the city, 370. His final recal from Italy, 372. Rescues Constantinople from the Bulgarians, 401. His disgrace and death, 407.

Benefice, in feudal language, explained, vi. $57.

Benevento, battle of, between Charles of Anjou, and Mainfroy the Sicilian usurper, x1, 330.

Beneventum, anecdotes relating to the siege of, x. 25%.

Benjamin of Tudela, his account of the riches of Constantinople, x. 112.

Berna, or Aleppo, reception of the emperor Julian there, iv. 154, Bernard, St., his character and influence in promoting the second crusade, xi. 117. His character of the Romans, xi. 270.

Berytus, account of the law school established there, in. 53. Is destroyed by an earthquake, vn. 417.

Bernier, his account of the camp of Aurengzebe, i. 333, note.

Bessurion, cardinal, his character, xii. 129.

Bessus, governor of Rome for Justinian, his rapacity during the siege of that city by Totila the Goth, vii. 302. Occasions the loss of Rome, 306.

Bezabde, is taken and garrisoned by Sapor king of Persia, iii. 210. Is ineffectually besteged by Constantius, 212.

Bindoes, a Sassanian Prince, deposes Hormouz king of Persia, viii. 184. Birthright, the least invidious of all human distinctions, 1. 271.

Bishops, among the primitive Christians, the office of, explained, in 331. Progress of episcopal authority, 335. Assumed dignity of episcopal government, 351.

______, number of, at the time of Constantine the Great, iii. 283. Mode of their election, 294. Their power of ordination, 287. The ecclesiastical revenue of each diocese how divided, 294. Their civil jurisdiction, 295. Their spiritual censures, 207. Their legislative assemblies, 307.

Bishops, rural, their rank and duties, m. 281.

Bissertile, superstitions regard to this year by the Romans, iv. 238, Bithynia, the cities of, plundered by the Goths, i. 426.

Blemmyes, their revolt against the emperor Diocletian, ii. 134.

Boccace, his literary character, xii. 123.

Boethius, the learned senator of Rome, his history, vii. 43. His imprisonment and death, 48.

Bohemond, the son of Robert Guisi and, his character and military exploits, x. 248, xi. 35. His route to Constantinople on the crusade, 43. His flattering reception by the emperor Alexius Comnenus, 49. Takes Antioch, and obtains the principality of it, 68. His subsequent transactions, and death, 103.

Bourface, St., his history, n. 183.

Boneface, count, the Roman general under Valentiman III., his character, vi. 9. Is beingyed into a revolt by Ætius, 11. His repentance, 18. Is besieged in Hippo Regius by Genseric king of the Vandals, 21. Returns to Italy, and is killed by Ætius, 24.

Baniface VIII., pope, his violent contest with Philip the Fair, king of France, and his character, xii. 306. Institutes the Jubilee, 310.

Bontlace, marquis of Montferrat, is chosen general of the tourth crusade to the Holy Land, xi. 198. Is made king of Macedoma, 249. Is killed by the Bulgarians, 203.

Bosphorus, revolutions of that kingdom, 1, 422. Is seized by the Goths, 423. The smart of, described, ii. 4.

Bosra, siege of, by the Saracens, ix 353, 388.

Botheric, the Imperial general in Thessalonica, murdered in a sedition, v. 05.

Boucteault, marshal, defends Constantinople against Bajazet, xi. 458. Boulogue, the port of, recovered from Carausius, by Constantius Chlorus, n. 127.

Bowides, the Persian dynasty of, x. 83.

Brancaleone, senator of Rome, his character, xii. 280.

Bretague, the province of, in France, settled by Britons, vi 389, note.

Britain, reflections on the conquest of, by the Romans, i. 5 Description of, 33. Colomes planted in, 58. note. A colony of Vandals settled there by Probus, ii. 83. Revolt of Carausius, 123.

Picts, 295. Is restored to peace by Theodosius, 208.

against Honorius, 228. Is abandoned by the Romans, 363. State of, until the arrival of the Saxons, 364. Descent of the Saxons on, vi. 381. Establishment of the Saxon heptarcky, 384. Wars in, 386. Saxon devastation of the country, 392. Manners of the independent Britons, 398. Description of, by Procopius, 402.

the Great, vm. 167. The doctrine of the incarnation received there, 334.

Brutasable Biogan, his colonization of Britain, now given up by intelligent historians, 1v. 201. note.

Buffon, M., his extraordinary burning mirror, vii. 114, note.

Bulgarians, their character, vii. 277, 278. Their inroads on the Eastern empire, 281. Invasion of under Zabergan, 401. Repulsed by Belisarius, 403.

-, the kingdom of, destroyed by Basil II. the Greek emperer, ix. 68, x. 202.

-----, revolt of, from the Greek empire, and submission to the pope of Rome, xi. 183. War with the Greeks under Calo-John, 257.

Bull-feast, in the Coliseum at Rome, described, xn. 421.

Burgundians, their settlement on the Elbe, and maxims of government, iv. 284. Their settlement in Gaul, v. 359. Limits of the kingdom of, under Gundobald, vi. 324. Are subdued by the Franks, 320.

Burnet, character of his Sacred Theory of the Farth, ii 306, note.

Burrampooter, somee of that river, vii. 15. note.

Busir, in Egypt, four several places known under this name, x $2,note. Busing, the philosophical preceptor of Hormouz king of Persia, his high reputation, vin. 178, note.

Byzantine historians, list and character of, vii. 255, note.

Byzantium, siege of, by the emperor Severus, i. 193. Is taken by Maximin, ii. 238. Siege of, by Constantine the Great, 200. Its situation described, iii. 3. By whom founded, 4. note. Sec Constantinople.

(

Cuaha, or temple of Mecca, described, ix. 215. The idols in, destroyed by Mahomet, 308.

Cabades, king of Persia, besieges and takes Amida, viii. 138. Seizes the straits of Caucasus, 141. Viciositudes of his reign, 208.

Cadesia, battle of, between the Saracens and the Persians, ix. 365.
Cadipali, her marriage with Mahomet, ix. 205. Is converted by him to his new religion, 282. Her death, 288. Mahomet's veneration for her memory, 328.

Cacelian, the peace of the church in Africa disturbed by him and his party, in. 300.

Cacilius, the authority of his account of the famous vision of Constantine the Great, inquired into, in. 260.

Calestian, senator of Carthage, his distress on the taking of that city by Genseric, vi. 31.

Cavar, Julius, his inducement to the conquest of Britain, i. 5. Degrades the senatorial dignity, 96, note. Assumes a place among the tutelar detites of Rome, in his life-time, 111. His address in appearing a military sedition 252, note. His prudent application of the coronary gold presented to him, iii. 96.

Casur and Augustus, those titles explained and discriminated, i. 113.
Casurs, of the emperor Julian, the philosophical table of that work delineated, iv. 139.

Cesarca, capital of Cappadocia, taken by Sapor king of Persia, 1, 439. Is reduced by the Saracens, 1x. 420.

Cahina, queen of the Moors of Africa, her policy to drive the Arabs out of the country, ix. 461.

Can oan, the city of, founded in the kingdom of Tunis, ix. 459.

Caled, deserts from the idolatrons Arabs to the party of Mahomet, 1x. 307. His gallant conduct at the battle of Muta, 314. His victories under the caliph Abubeker, 304. Attends the Saracen sarmy on the Syrian expedition, 382. His valour at the siege of Damasons, 380. Distinguishes himself at the battle of Arabadon, 3918-His cruel treatment of the refugees from Damasons, 3902. Joins in plundering the fan of Abyla, 402. Commands the Saraceus at the battle of Yermuk, 408. His death, 422.

Caledonia, and its ancient inhabitants, described, iv. 203

Caledonian war, under the emperor Severus, an account of, 1 207.

Caliphs of the Saracens, character of, 1x, 357. Then rapid conquests, 361. Extent and power of, 500. Triple division of the office, x, 34. They patronise learning, 41. Decline and fall of their empire, 78, xi, 417.

Callingum, the punishment of a religious sedition in that city opposed by St. Ambrose, v. 68.

Callinacus of Heliopolis, assists in defending Constantinople against the Saracens, by his chymical inflammable compositions, x. 14. Calmucks, black, recent emigration of, from the confines of Russia to those of China, iv. 370.

Calo-Joha, the Bulgarian chief, his war with Baldwin, the Latin emperor of the Greeks, xi. 2.7. Defeats, and takes him prisoner, 260. His savage character and death, 206.

Calocerus, a camel-driver, excites an insurrection in the island of Cyprus, in: 119.

Calpharnus, the machinery of his eclogue on the accession of the emperor Carus, it. 93.

Calvin, the reformer, his doctrine of the Eucharist, x 189. Examination of his conduct to Servetus, 191.

Camel, of Arabia, described, 1x. 225.

Camisardes of Languedoc, their enthusiasm compared with that of the Circumcellions of Numidia, in. 401

Campania, the province of, desolated by the ill policy of the Roman emperors, in. 87. Description of the Lucullan villa in, vi. 229

Canada, the present climate and circumstances of, compared with those of ancient Germany, 1, 348.

Cannon, enormous one of the sultan Mahomet II. described, xn. 197. Bursts, 211.

Canoes, Russian, a description of, x. 229.

Cantacuzene, John, character of his Greek History, xi. 361. His good fortune under the younger Andronicus, 372 ls driven to assume the purple, 376. His lively distinction between foreign and civil war, 379. His entry into Constantinople, and reign, 382. Abdicates, and turns monk, 580. His war with the Genoese factory at Pera, 394. Marries his daughter to a Turk, xii. 69. His negociation with pope Clement VI., ibid.

Cantenus's History of the Ottoman Empire, a character of, xi. 434. note. Capelianus, governor of Mauritania, deleats the younger Gordian, and takes Carthage, 1. 289.

VOL. XII.

Capitation-tax, under the Roman emperors, an account of, ni. 88.

Capito, Ateus, the civilian, his character, vini. 30.

Capital of Rome, burning and restoration of, ii. 412.

Cappadocia, famous for its fine breed of horses, in. 76.

Capraria, isle of, character of the monks there, v. 108.

Captives, how treated by the Barbarians, vi. 55, 362.

Caraculla, son of the emperor Severus, his fixed antipathy to his brother Geta, 1, 206. Succeeds to the empire jointly with him, 211. Tendency of his edict to extend the privileges of Roman cutzens to all the free inhabitants of his empire, 255. His view in this transaction, 200. Doubles the tax on legacies and inheritances, 207.

Caracorum, the Tartai settlement of, described, xi. 425.

Caravans, Sogdian, their toute to and from China, for silk, to supply the Roman empire, vii. 94.

(arausius, his revolt in Britain, ii. 123. Is acknowledged by Diocletian and his colleagues, 120.

Carbons, the Paulician, his revolt from the Greek emperor to the Saracens, x 178.

Cardinals, the election of a pope vested in them, xii, 300. Institution of the conclave, 301.

Cardhene, situation and history of that territory, ii, 134.

Carinus, the son of Caus, succeeds his father in the empire, jointly with his brother Numerian, n. 97.

Careamians, their myasion of Syria, xr 158,

Carta, ingula race of kings, commencement of, in France, ix, 151, Carmath, the Arabian reformer, his character, x, 75. His indulary exploits, 70

Carmelites, from whom they derive their pedigice, vi 240, note. Carna haar mountains, their situation, i. 315.

Carthage, the bishopric of, bought for Majormus, ii. 455, note

- - - - . the temple of Venus there, converted into a Christian chinch, v. 107. Is surprised by Genseric king of the Vandals, vi. 28.

Curthagena, an extraordinary rich silver mine worked there, for the Romans, 1, 258.

Carus, emperor, his election and character, in 91.

Cassian and Iberian gates of Mount Caucasus, distinguished, vii. 140. Cassians, the party of, among the Roman civilians, explained, viii. 32. Cassiodorus, his Gothie history, i. 387 — His account of the infant state of the republic of Venice, vi. 127. His long and prosperous life, vii. 29.

Castriot, Air rige, see Standericg.

Catalans, their service and war in the Greek empire, xi. 346.

Catholic church, the doctrines of, how discriminated from the opinions of the Platonic school, in: 322 The authority of, extended to the minds of mankind, 326. Faith of the Western or Latin Church, 312. Is distracted by factions in the cause of Athanasius, 369. The doxology, how introduced, and how perverted, 388. The revenue of, transferred to the heathen priests, by Julian, 11.

- , ediet of Theodosius, for the establishment of the Catholic faith, v. 14. The progressive steps of idolatry in, 123. Persecution of the Catholics in Africa, vr. 280. Prous frauds of the Catholic clergy, 240.
- —, how hewildered by the doctrine of the Incarnation,viii, 27). Union of the Greek and Latin chinches, 333.

- Celestine, pope, espouses the party of Cyril against Nestorius, and pronounces the degradation of the latter from his episcopal diginty, viii, 287.
- C. Itac language, driven to the mountains by the Latin, 1, 50, 61, note. Consor, the office of, revived under the emperor Decius, 1, 500. But without effect, 402.
- Coox, the manufacture of silk first introduced to Europe from that island, vii. 90.
- Cerea, the principal queen of Attila king of the Hins, her reception of Maximim the Roman ambassador, vi. 74.
- Cerinthus, his opinion of the twofold nature of Jesus Christ, viil. 2007 Ceylon, ancient names given to that island, and the imperfect know-ledge of, by the Boinaus, iv. 142. note.
- Chalcedon, the injudicious situation of this city stigmatised by proverbad contempt, in 7. A tribunal erected there by the emperor Julian, to try and punish the evil mainsters of his predicters of Constantius, 4v. 49.
- mister of the emperor Theodosius, v. 143.
- _____, is taken by Chostoes II, king of Persia, vin. 222.
- Chaleocondyles, the Greek historian, his remarks on the several nations of Europe, xn. 82.
- Chalons, battle of, between the Rom us and Attilaking of the Huns, vi. 112.
- Chamacians reduced and generously treated by Julian in 227.
- Chancellor, the original and modern application of this word compared, it. 99, note.
- Characters, national, the distinction of, how formed, iv. 341.
- Chariots of the Romans described, v. 2001, note.
- Charlemagne computers the kingdom of Lombardy 18, 150. His reception at Rome, 154. Undes fulfilling the promises of Pepin and himself to the Roman pointiff, 150. His coronation at Rome by the pope Leo III, 173. His reign and character, 174. Extension of his empire, 180. His neighbours and enemies, 185. His successors, 187. His neighbours and treaty with the Eastern

- empire, 101. State of his family and dominions in the tenth century, x. 148.
- Charles the Fat, emperor of the Romans, ix. 189.
- Charles of Anjon subdues Naples and Sicily, xi. 330. The Sicilian Vespers, 344. His character as a senator of Rome, xii. 288.
- Charles IV. emperor of Germany, his weakness and poverty, ix 213. His public estentation, 215. Contrast between him and Augustus, 216.
- Charles V. emperor, parallel between him and Diocletian, in 171.

 And between the sack of Rome by him, and that by Alaric the Goth, v. 822, 623.
- Chastity, its high esteem among the ancient Germans, i. 367. And the primitive Christians. ii. 323.
- Chemistry, the art of, from whom derived, x. 49.
- Chersonesus, Thracian, how fortified by the emperor Justinian, vii. 128.
- Chersonites assist Constantine the Great against the Goths. iii. 124.

 Are cruelly persecuted by the Greek emperor Justinian II., ix. 21.

 Chess, the object of the game of, by whom invented, vii. 307.
- Childeric, king of France, deposed under papal sanction, 1x, 152.
- Children, the exposing of, a prevailing vice of antiquity, viii. 56. Natural, according to the Roman laws, what, 67.
- China, how distinguished in ancient history, ii. 141. note. Great numbers of children annually exposed there, 347. note.
- -----, its situation, iv. 357. The high chronology claimed by the historians of, ibid. The great wall of, when erected, 301. Was twice conquered by the Northern tribes, 364.
- ——. the Romans supplied with silk by the caravaus from, vii. 03.
 ——. is conquered by the Moguls, xi. 414, 426. Expulsion of the Moguls, 427, 428.
- Chivalry, origin of the order of, xi. 36.
- Chnodomar, prince of the Alemann, taken prisoner by Julian at the battle of Strasburgh, iii. 224.
- Chosroes, king of Armenia, assassinated by the emissaries of Sapor king of Persia, i, 435.
- Chosroes, son of Tiridates, king of Armenia, his character, iii. 138.
- Chosroes I, king of Persia, protects the last surviving philosophers of Athens, in his treaty with the emperor Justinian, vii. 151. Review of his history, 200. Sells a peace to Justinian, 307. His myasion of Syria, 311. His negociations with Justinian, 337. His prosperity, 359. Buttle of Melitene, viii. 176. His death, 177.
- Chosroes II. king of Persia, is raised to the throne on the deposition of his father Hormouz, viii. 186. Is reduced to implore the assistance of the emperor Maurice, 188. His restoration and policy, 190. Conquers Syria, 219. Palestine, 221. Egypt and Asia Minor, 222. His reign and magnificence, 223. Rejects the Mahometan religion, 226. Imposes an ignominious peace on the (inperor Heraclius, 229, 230. His flight, deposition, and death, 251.
- Chozars, the horde of, sent by the Turks to the assistance of the emperor Heraclius, viii, 240.

Christ, the festival of his birth, why fixed by the Romans at the winter solstice, iv. 22, note.

· Christians, primitive, the various sects into which they branched out, . ii. 227. Ascribed the Pagan idolatry to the agency of damons, 288. Believed the end of the world to be near at hand, 300. Tee miraculous powers ascribed to the primitive church, 500. Their faith stronger than in modern times, 514. Their superior virtue and austerity, 316. Repentance, a virtue in high esteem among them, ibid. Their notions of marriage and chastity, 523 They disclaim war and government, 320. Were acrive however in the internal government of their own society, 328. Bishops, 331. Synods, 334. Metropolitans and primates, 337. Bishop of Rome, 33). Their probable proportion to the Pagan subjects of the empire before the conversion of Constantine the Great, 371. Inquiry into their persecutions, 381. Why more odious to the governing powers than the Jews, 387. Then religious meetings suspected, 594. Are persecuted by Nero, as the incendiaries of Rome, 405. Instructions of the emperor Trajan to Pliny the Younger for the regulation of his conduct towards them, 11). Remained exposed to popular resentment on public festivities, 420. Legal mode of proceeding against them, 422. The ardour with which they courted martyrdom, 137. When allowed to erect places for public worship, 448. Their persecution under Diocletian and his associates, 467. An edict of toleration for them published by Galerius just before his death, 184. Some considerations necessary to be attended to in reading the sufferings of the martyrs, 491. Edict of Milan published by Constantine the Great, in 244. Political recommendations of the Christian morality to Constantine, 247. Theory and practice of passive obedience, 248. Then loyalty and zeal, 253. The sacrament of baptism, how administered in early times, 272. Extraordinary propagation of Christianity after it obtained the Imperial sanction, 270, 277. Becomes the established religion of the Roman empire, 280. Spiritual and temporal powers distinguished, 282. Review of the episc palorder in the church, 283. The ecclesiastical revenue of each diocese, how divided, 294. Their legislative assembling, 505. Edict of Constantine the Great against heretics, 307. Mysterious doctime of the Trinity, 320. The doctimes of the Catholic church, how discriminated from the opinions of the Platonic school, 322. General character of the Christian sects, 103. Christian schools prolabited by the emperor Julian, iv. 111. They are removed from all offices of trust, 114. Are obliged to remstate the Pagan temples, 115. Their imprudent and irregular zeal against idolatry, 135.

Christians, distinction of, into rulgar and ascete, vi. 238. Conversion of the barbarons nations, 268.

Christianity, inquity into the progress and establishment of, ii. 265. Religion and character of the Jews, 207. The Jewish religion the basis of Christianity, 274. Is offered to all mankind, ibid. The sects into which the Christians divided, 277. The theology of reduced to a systematical form in the school of Alexandria, 363. Injudicious conduct of its early advocates, 377. Its persecutions, 381. First erection of churches, 148.

Christianity, the system of, found in Plato's doctrine of the Logos. in. 318.

barbarous nations, vi. 275.

. its progress in the North of Europe, x. 242.

Chrysaphius the ennuch engages Edecon to assassmate his king Attila, vi. 80.—Is put to death by the empress Pulcheria, 84.—Assisted at the second council of Ephesus, vm. 300.

Chrysocherr, general of the revolted Panheians, over-tuns and pillages Asia Minor, v. 179. His death, 181.

Chrysolorus, Manuel, the Greek envoy, his character, xii. 126. His admiration of Rome and Constantinople, 112.

Chrysopolis, battle of, between Constantine the Great and Licinius, ii. 262.

Chrysostom, St., his account of the pompous luxury of the emperor Arcadius, v. 373. Protects his fugitive patron the cunuch Eutropius, 301. History of his pronotion to the irchiepiscopal see of Constantinople, 308. His character and administration, 390, 400. His persecution, 104. His death, 410. His relics removed to Constantinople, thid. His encommum on the monastic life, vi. 247. note.

Churches, Christian, the first erection of, ii. 448. Demolition of, under Diocletian, 474. Splendom of, under Constantine the Great, in. 292. Seven, of Asia, the fate of, xi. 437.

Cibalis, battle of, between Constantine the Great and Liemius, ii. 246. Ca_{CO} , his view of the philosophical opinions as to the immortality of the soul, ii. 294. His encommon on the study of the law, viii 9. System of his republic, 27.

Cimmerian darkness, the expression of, whence derived, v. 271. note Cacameellons of Africa, Donatist schismatics, history of their revolt, in. 398. Their religious suicides, 401. Persecution of, by the emperor Honorius, vi. 16.

Circumcision of both sexes, a physical custom in Æthiopia, unconnected with religion, viii. 373.

Cacus, Roman, the four factions in, described, vii. 75. Constantinople, and the Eastern empire, distracted by these factions, 77.

Cities in the Roman empire enumerated, i. 77.

—, commercial, of Italy, rise, and government of, ix. 205, 206.

Citizens of Rome, motive of Caracalla for extending the privileges of, to all the free inhabitants of the empire, i. 255, 267. Political tendency of this grant, 269.

City, the birth of a new one, how celebrated by the Romans, iii. 15. note.

Cirilians of Rome, origin of the profession, and the three periods in the history of, vni. 23.

Civilis, the Batavian, his successful revolt against the Romans, i. 377. Claudian the poet, and panegyrist of Stilicho, his works supply the deficiencies of Instory, v. 191. Celebrates the murder of Rufinus 159. His death and character, 247. His character of the cunuon Eutropius, 379.

Chardian, emperor, chosen by the Pratorian guards, without the concurrence of the senate, 1, 110.

Clandius, emperor, successor to Gallienus, his chriacter and elevation to the throne, ii. 1

Cleander, minister of the emperor Commodus, his history, 1, 145

Clemens, Flavius, and his wife Domitilla, why distinguished as Christian martyrs, u. 410.

Clement III., pope, and the emperor Hemy III. mutually con am cach other's sovereign characters, x, 302

Clement V., pope, transfers the holy see from Romi to Avignon, xii 308.

Ciergy, when first distinguished from the larty, n. 340, m. 282 property, ibid. Then offences only cognisable by their own order, 200. Valentiman's edict to restrain the avarice of, iv, 270.

Clodion, the first of the Metovingian race of kines of the Tranks in Gail, his reign, vi. 100.

Clodius Illimus, governor of Britain, his steady fidelity during the revolutions at Rome, 1, 170 Declares himself against Julianus, 177

Clottda, mere of the king of Burgundy, is married to Clovis king of the Franks, and converts her Pagan busband, vi. 315. Exhorts her husb and to the Gothic war, 331.

Closis, king of the Franks, his descent, and reign, vi. 310.

Clustrius, his account of the objects of adoration among the autrent Germans, 1-370, note.

Cochineal, importance of the discovery of, in the arr of dyeing, viii 90 note.

Code of Justinian, how formed, via 37. New edition of, 16

Codicils, how for admitted by the Roman law respecting testaments, vii, 80.

Canobites, in monkish history, described, vi. 263.

Comage, how regulated by the Roman emperors No. 2-1.

Colchos, the modern Mingrelia, described via 54 c. Manners of the natives, 322. Revolt of, from the Roma is to the Persiaus, and repentance, 330. Colchiau war, in consequence, 354.

Coliseum, of the emperor Titus, observations on, xn. 418. I shibition of a bull-feast in, 421.

Collyridian heretics, an account of, ix. 201.

Colonies, Roman, how planted, 1, 58.

Colonna, history of the Roman family of, xii. 310

Colossus of Rhodes, some account of, ix. 425.

Columns of Hercules, their situation, 1 42

Comana, the rich tempte of, suppressed, and the revenues confisgated, by the emperors of the East, in 70.

Combat, judicial, origin of, in the Salic laws, vi. 101. The laws of according to the assize of Jeru-alem, xi. 90. Apology for the practice of, 319. note.

Comets, account of those which appeared in the reign of Justinian, vii. 412.

Commentiolus, his disgraceful warfare against the Avars, viii. 202. Commodus, emperor, his education, character, and reign, i. 137.

Comment, origin of the family of, on the throne of Constantinople, ix. 74. Its extinction, xn. 246.

Conception, immaculate, of the Virgin Mary, the doctrine of, from whence derived, 1x, 266.

Concubine, according to the Roman civil law, explained, vin. 67.
Conflagration, general, ideas of the primitive Christians concerning, ii, 305.

Conquest, the vanity of, not so justifiable as the desire of spoil, iv. 297. Is rather atchieved by art than personal valour, vi. 42, Conrad III., emperor, engages in the second crusade, xi. 105. His disastrous expedition, 113.

Conrad of Montferrat defends Tyre against Saladin, xi. 140. Is assassinated, 140.

Constance, treaty of, ix. 207.

Constans, the third son of Constantine the Great, is sent to govern the western provinces of the empire, iii. 118. Division of the empire among hire and his brothers, on the death of their father, 133. Is invaded by his brother Constantine, 146. Is killed, on the usurpation of Magnentius, 149. Espoused the cause of Athanasius against his brother Constantius, 308.

Constant II., emperor of Constantinople, ix. 13.

Constantia, princess, grand-daughter of Constantine the Great, is carried by her mother to the camp of the usurper Procopius, iv. 247. Narrowly escapes falling into the hands of the Quadi, 320. Marries the emperor Gratian, 335.

Constantina, daughter of Constantine the Great, and widow of Hannbalianus, places the diadem on the head of the general Vetramo, in. 150. Is married to Gallus, 172. Her character, 173. Dies, 179.

Constantina, widow of the Eastern emperor Maurice, the cruel fate of, and her daughters, vin. 213.

Constantine the Great, the several opinions as to the place of his birth. ii. 140. His history, 191. He is saluted emperor by the British legions on the death of his father, 194. Marries Fausta, the daughter of Maximian, 203. Puts Maximian to death, 212. General review of his administration in Gaul, 215. Undertakes to deliver Rome from the tyranny of Maxentius, 220. Defeats Maxentius, and enters Rome, 231. His alliance with Licinius, 237. Defeats Licinius, 246, 248. Peace concluded with Licinius, 240. His laws, 250. Chastises the Goths, 254. Second civil war with Licinius, 255.

notives which induced him to make Byzantium the capital of his empire, iii. 3. Declares his determination to spring from divine command, 14. Despoils other cities of their ornaments to decorate his new capital, 19. Ceremony of dedicating his new city, 29. Form of civil and military administration established there, 30. Separates the civil from the military administration, 57. Corrupted military discipline, 59. His character, 99. Account of his family, 104. His jealousy of his son Crispus, 109. Mysterious deaths of Crispus and Licinius, 111. His repentance and acts of atonement inquired into, 113. His sons and nephews, 115. Sends them to superintend the several provinces of the empire, 118. Assists the Sarmatians, and provokes the Goths, 123 Reduces the Goths to peace, 125. His death, 127. Attempt to ascertain the date of his conversion to Christianity, 230. His Pagan superstition, 242. Protects the Christians in Gaul, 243. Publishes the edict of Milan, 244. Motives which recommended the Christians to his favour, 217. Exhorts his subjects to embrace the Christian profession, 252. His famous standard the Labarum described, 257. His celebrated vision previous to his battle with Maxentius, 200 Story of the miraculous cross in the air, 26). His conversion accounted for, from natural and probable causes, 267. His theological discourses, 209. His devotion and privileges, 271. delay of his baptism accounted for, 272. Is commemorated as a saint by the Greeks, 276. His edict against heretics, 307. Favours the cause of Carcilian against Donatus, 311. His sensible letter to the bishop of Alexandria, 345. How prevailed on to ratify the Nicene creed, 347. His levity in religion, 349. Granted a toleration to his Pagan subjects, 405. His reform of Pagan Was associated with the Heathen Deities after his abuses, ilid. death, by a decree of the senate, 409. His discovery of the holy senulchre, iv. 100.

Constantine, publication of his fictitious donation to the bishops of Rome, 1x, 159. Fabulous interdiction of marriage with strangers, ascribed to him, x, 120.

Constantine II the son of Constantine the Great, is sent to preside over Gaul, in. 118. Division of the empire among him and his brothers, on the death of their father, 133. Invades his brother Constans, and is killed, 140.

Constantine III. emperor of Constantinople, 18, 10.

Constantine IV. Pogonatus, emperor of Constantinople, 18, 1%.

Constantine V. Copronymus, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 20. Fates of his five sons, 30. Revolt of Artavasdes, and troubles on account of image worship, 128, 129. Abolishes the monkish order, 130.

Constantine VI. emperor of Constantinople, ix. 31.

Constantine VII. Porphyrogenitus, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 57.

His cautions against discovering the secret of the Greek fire, x. 17.

Account of his works, 04. Their imperfections pointed out, 96.

His account of the ceremonies of the Byzantine court, 127. Justifies the margiage of his son with the princess Bertha of France, 130.

Constantine VIII. emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 59.

Constantine IX. emperor of Constantinople, ix. 67.

Constantine X. Monomachus, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 72.

Constantine XI. Ducas, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 77.

Constantine Paleologus, the last of the Greek emperors, his reign, xu, 170.

Constantine Sylvanus, founder of the Paulicians, his death, x. 175. Constantine, a private soldier in Britain, elected emperor for the sake of his name, v. 229. He reduces Gaul and Spath, 231, 342. His reduction and death, 343.

Constantine, general under Behrarius in Italy, his death, vii. 247.

Constantinople, its situation described, with the motives which induced Constantine the Great to make this city the capital of his empire, iii. 3. Its local advantages, 12. Its extent, 15. Progress of the work, 18. Principal edifices, 20. How furnished with inhabitants, 24. Privileges granted to it, 20. Its dedication, 28. Review of the new form of civil and military administration established there, 30. Is allotted to Constantine the Younger, in the division of the empire, on the emperor's death, 133. Violent contests there between the rival bishops, Paul and Maccedonius 302. Bloody engagement between the Athanasians and Arians on the removal of the body of Constantine, 300. Trumphant civily of the emperor Juhan, iv. 30. The senate of, allowed the same powers and honours as that at Rome, 54. Arrival of Valens, as emperor of the East, 242. Revolt of Procopius, 245.

during the reigns of Constantus and Valens, v. 17. Is pinged from Arianism by the emperor Theodosius, 22. Council of, 20. Is enriched by the bodies of saints and martyrs, 125. Insurrection against Gainas and his Arian Goths, 395. Persecution of the archbishop, St. Chrysostom, 404. Popular tumults on his account, 100. Earthquake there, vi. 53.

the city and Eastern empire distracted by the factions of the enems, vi. 77. Foundation of the church of St. Sophia, 110. Other churches erected there by Justiman, 122. Triumph of Belisarius over the Vandals, 194. The walls of, injured by an earthquake, 202. State of the armies under the emperor Maurice, 203. The armies and city revolt against him, 207. Deliverance of the city from the Persians and Avars, 243. Religious war about the Trisagion, 314.

prospectus of the remaining history of the Eastern empire, ix. 1. Summary review of the five dynastics of the Greek empire, 100. Tunults in the city to oppose the destruction of images, 128. Abolition of the monkish order by Constantine, 130. First siege of, by the Saracens, x. 2. Second siege by the Saracens, 8. Review of the provinces of the Greek empire in the tenth century, 99. Riches of the city of Constantinople, 112. The Imperial palace of, 114. Offices of state, 121. Military character of the Greeks, 140. The name and character of Romans supported to the last, 155. Decline and revival of literatures 156. The city menaced by the Turks, 214. Account of the Varangians, 222. Naval expeditions of the Russians against the city, 228.

churches, xi. 169. Massacre of the Latins, 180. Invasion of the Greek empire, and conquest of Constantinople by the ciusaders, 208. The city taken and Isaac Angelus restored, 217. Pair of the city burnt by the I atms, 222. Second siege of the city by the Latins, 226. Is pillaged, 251. Account of the statues destroyed. 238. Partition of the Greek empire by the French and Venetians, 213. The Greeks rise against their Latin conquerors, 258. The city retaken by the Greeks, 284. The suburb of Galata assigned to the Genoese, 300. Hostilities between the Genoese and the emperor, 394. How the city escaped the Moguls, 128 Is be segred by the sultan Amurath II., xii 56. Is compared with Rome, 141. Is besieged by Mahomet II, sultan of the Turks, 200. Is stormed and taken, 231. Becomes the capital of the Turkish empire, 243. Constantius Chlorus, governor of Dalmana, was intended to be adopted by the emperor Carus, in the room of his vicious son Curinus, n. 100. Is associated as Casar by Diocletian in his admonstration, 118. Assumes the title of Augustus, on the abilit ition of Diocletian, 186. His death, 193. Granted a teleration to the Christians, 179

Constantius, the second son of Constantine the Great, his education, m. 116. Is sent to govern the Eastern provinces of the empire, 11%. Seizes Constantinople on the death of his father 151. Conspines the death of his kinsmen, 15%. Division of the empire among him and his brothers, ibid. Restores Chostocs king of Armema, 138. Battle of Sugar (with Sapor, king of Persia, 140. Rejects the offers of Magnentins and Vetranio, on the plea of a vision, 1/2 His oration to the Illyrian troops at the interview with Vetranio, 154. Defeats Magnentus at the battle of Mursa, 100. His councils governed by eunuclis, 168. Education of his consins Gallus and Julian, 174. Disgrateg and death of Gallus, 179. Sends for Julian to court, 186. Invests him with the title of Casar, 188. Visits Rome, 191. Presents an obelisk to that cov., 195. The Quadran and Sarmatian wars, dad. His Persian negociations, 200. Mismanagement of affairs in the East, 211. Favours the Arians, 351. His religious character by Ammianus the historian, 352. His restless endeavours to establish an uniformity of Christian doctrine, 354. Athanasius driven into exile by the conneil of Autioch, 364. Is intimidated by his brother Constans, and invites Athan esius back again, 368. His severe treatment of those bishops who refused to concur in deposing Athanasius, 374. His scrupulous orthodoxy, 377. His cautious conduct in expelling Athanasius from Alexandria, 378. His strenuous efforts to seize his person, 382. Athanasius writes invectives to expose his character, 387. Is constrained to restore Liberius, bishop of Rome, 391 Supports Macedonius, bishop of Constantinople, and countenances his persecutions of the Catholics and Novatians, 396, 397. His conduct toward his Pagan subjects, 407. Enview the tame of Julian, 1v. 3. Recals the legions from Gaul, 4. Negociations between him and His preparations to oppose Julian, 32. His death Julian, 19. ىسd character، 34, 3 بر

Constantius, general, relieves the British emperor Constantine when besieged in Arles, v. 343. His character and victories, 344. His marriage with Placidia, and death, vi. 2. .

Constantius, secretary to Attila king of the Huns, his matrimonial negociation at the court of Constantinople, vi. 60. Consul, the office of, explained, i. 103. Alterations this office underwent under the emperors, and when Constantinople became the scat of empire, iii. 35. The office of, suppressed by the emperor Justiman, vii. 152. Is now sunk to a commercial agent, xii. 279. Contracts, the Roman laws respecting, viii, 84. Copts of Egypt, brief history of, viii. 360. Corenth, reviving as a Roman colony, celebrates the Isthmian games, The isthmus of, fortified by under the emperor Julian, iv. 55. the emperor Justiman, vii, 128. Cornwall, reduction of, by the Saxons, vi. 388. Coronary gold, nature of those offerings to the Roman emperors, Cor. inus, Matthias, king of Hungary, his character, xn. 167. Cosmas Indicopleustes, account of his Christian topography, vii. 100. note. viii. 343. note. Cosmo of Medicis, his character, xii. 136. Councils and Synods of Antioch, ni. 304. Arles, iii. 371. Basil, xn. 93. ('æsarea, 111. 361. Carthage, vi. 283. vii. 187. Chalcedon, v. 405. vni. 303. Clermont, vi. 8. Constance, xii. 86, 92, 375. Constantinople, v. 26, viii. 327, 333, ix. 125, xi 175, Ephesus, vnr. 288, 301. Ferrara, xii. 103. Plorence, xii. 105. Frankfort, ix. 168. Lyons, vi. 325. xi. 276. 334. Milan, 111, 372. Nice, ni. 332. ix. 164. Pısa, xi, 92. Placentia, xi. 5. Rimmi, m 343. Sardica, ni. 306. Toledo, vi. 300, 304, 378. Tyre, in. 301. Count, great difference between the ancient and modern application

Count, great difference between the ancient and modern application of this title, iii. 58. By whom first invented, ibid. Of the sacred largesses, under Constantine the Great, his office, 74. Of the domestics in the Eastern empire, his office, 77.

Courtenay, history of the family of, xi. 294.

Crescentius, consul of Rome, his vicissitudes, and disgraceful death, ix. 203.

Crete, the isle of, subdued by the Saracens, x. 58. Is recovered by Nicephorus Phocas, 86. Is purchased by the Venetians, xi. 240.

Crimes, how distinguished by the penal laws of the Romans, viii. 98.
Crispus, son of Constantine the Great, is declared Casar, ii. 240.
Distinguishes his valour against the Franks and Alemann, 253.
Forces the passage of the Hellespont, and defeats the fleet of Licimus, 260. His character, iii. 106. His mysterious death, 111.
Crispus, the patricipa process the Jensey.

Crispus, the patrician, marries the daughter of Phocas, and contributes to depose him, viii. 214. Is obliged to turn monk, 217.

Croatia, account of the kingdom of, x. 198.

Cross, the different sentiments entertained of this instrument of punishment, by the Pagan and Christian Romans, in 256. The famous standard of, in the army of Constantine the Great, described, 258. His visions of, 200, 205. The holy sepulchic and cross of Christ discovered, iv. 101. The cross of Christ undiminished by distribution to pilgrims, 102.

Crown of thorns, its transfer from Constantinople to Paris, M. 278. Crowns, mural and obsidional, the distinction between, 17, 170, note. Crosside, the first resolved on at the council of Clermont, M. 10 Inquiry into the justice of the holy war, 12. Examination into the private motives of the crusaders, 20. Departure of the crusaders, 24. Account of the chiefs, 30. Their march to Constantinople, 41. Review of their numbers, 53. They take Nice, 54. Butle of Dorylaum, 60. They take Antioch, 64. Their distresses, 69. Are relieved by the discovery of the holy lance, 73. Siege and conquest of Jerusalem, 81. Godfrey of Bouillon chosen kang of Jerusalem, 86. The second crusade, 105. The crusaders ill-treated by the Greek emperors, 109. The third crusade, 140. Siege of Acre, 142. Fourth and fifth crusades, 153. Sixth crusade, 158. Seventh crusade, 163. Recapitulation of the fourth crusade, 197. General consequences of the crusades, 288.

Ctesiphon, the city of, plundered by the Romans, 1, 334. Its situation described, iv. 178. Julian declines the stege of that city, 185.

Is sacked by the Saracens, ix. 363.

Cublat, emperor of China, his character. xi. 426.

Curopalata, his office under the Greek emperors, x. 121

Customs, duties of, imposed by Augustus, i. 201.

Cycle of indictions, the origin of, traced, and how now employed, 4 yete of indictions, the origin of traced, and now now employed in. 83. note.

Cyprium, bishop of Carthage, his history and martyldom, ii. 428.

Cyprus, the kingdom of, bestowed on the house of Lusiguan, by Richard I. of England, xi. 183.

Cyrene, the Greek colonies there finally exterminated by Chosroes II, king of Persia, vini. 222.

Cyriades, an obscure fugitive, is set up, by Sapor the Peisian monarch, as emperor of Rome, i. 437.

Cyril, bishop of Jerusalem, his pompous relation of a miraculous appearance of a celestial cross, in. 331. His ambiguous character, to 103, (G) il., patriarch of Alexandria, his life and character, vin. 276. Condemns the heresy of Nestorius, 287. Procures the decision of the council of Ephesus against Nestorius, 289. His court intrigues, 291.

Cysicus, how it escaped destruction from the Goths. 1. 428. 1s at length ruined by them, 429. The island and city of, seized by ____ the usurper Procopius, iv. 247.

D

Dacm, conquest of, by the emperor Trajan, i. 8. Its situation, 37. Is over-run by the Goths, 397. Is resigned to them by Aurelian, 11, 11.

Demons, supposed to be the authors and objects of pagan idolatry, by the primitive Christians, ii. 288.

Dagisteus, general of the emperor Justinian, besieges Petra, vii. 331. Commands the Huns in Italy under Narses, 383.

Daimbert, archbishop of Pisa, installed patriarch of Jerusalem, xi. 80. Daimatia, described, i. 36. Produce of a silver mine there, 200. note.

Dalmatius, nephew of Constantine the Great, is created Casar, in. 116. Is sent to govern the Gothie frontier, 118. Is cruelly destroyed by Constantius, 132.

Damascus, siege of, by the Saracens, ix. 385. The city reduced both by storm and by treaty, 594. Remarks on Hughes's tragedy of this siege, 397, note. Taken and destroyed by Tamerlane, xii. 29.

Damaus, bishop of Rome, edict of Valentinian addressed to him, to restrain the crafty avarice of the Roman clergy, iv. 271. His bloody contest with Ursinus for the episcopal dignity, 274.

Dames, the Arab, his gallant enterprize against the castle of Aleppo, ix. 416.

Damietta is taken by Louis IX. of France, xt. 160.

Dumophilus, archbishop of Constantinople, resigns his see, rather than subscribe the Nicene creed, v. 23.

Dandolo, Henry, doge of Venice, his character, xi. 195. Is made despot of Romania, 248.

Daniel, first bishop of Winchester, his instructions to St. Boniface, for the conversion of midels, vi. 273.

Danieles, a Greenan matron, her presents to the emperor Basil, x. 108. Her visit to him at Constantinople, 117. Her testament, 118. Danube, course of the river, and the provinces of, described, i. 35.

Daphic, the sacred grove and temple of, at Antioch, described, iv. 118. Is converted to Christian purposes by Gallus, and restored to the Pagans by Julian, 121, 122. The temple burned, 123. Data, the fortification of, by Justinian, described, vii 130. The demolition of, by the Persians, prevented by peace, 308. Is taken by Chosroes, king of Persia, vin. 175.

Davius, his scheme for connecting the continents of Europe and Asia, iii. 6.

Darkness, pra-ternatural, at the time of the passion, is unnoticed by the heathen philosophers and historians, it. 379.

Dastagard, the Persian royal seat of, plundered by the emperor Heraclius, vin. 250.

Datianus, governor of Spain, yields ready obedience to the Imperial edicts against the Christians, ii. 478.

Datius, bishop of Milan, instigates the revolt of the Ligurians to Justinian, vii. 242, 243. Escapes to Constantinople on the taking of Milan by the Burgundians, 250.

Debtors, insolvent, cruel punishment of, by the law of the twelve tables, vin. 92.

Decembers, review of the laws of the twelve tables, vin. 6. Their laws superseded by the perpetual edict, 16. Severity of, 90.

Decius, his exaltation to the empire, 1, 385, 386 Was a persecutor of the Christians, 452.

Decurions, in the Roman empire, are severely treated by the Imperial laws, in, 84.

Defication of the Roman emperors, how this species of idolatry was introduced, 1, 111.

Delators, are encouraged by the emperor Commodus, to grantly his harred of the senate, 1, 141. Are suppressed by Pertmax, 102.

Delphi, the sacred ornaments of the temple of removed to Constantinople by Constantine the Great, ni. 22, note.

Democracy, a form of government unfavourable to freedom in a large state, c 51.

Demostheaes, governor of Cæsarea, his gallant defence against, and heroit escape from, Sapor king of Petsia, i. 449

Deogratias, bishop of Carthage, humanely succours the captives brought from Rome by Genseric king of the Vandals, vi. 1.51 Drun, the Saracen, his character, ix. 389.

Desiderius, the last king of the Lombards, conquered by Charlemagne, 18, 140.

Despot, nature of that title in the Greek empire, v. 121.

Despotism originates in superstition, 1, 502, note.

Dudon assumed by Diocletian, what, n. 165.

Diamonds, the art of cutting them, unknown to the micrents, 1-202, note.

Didius Julianus, purchases the Imperial dignity at a public orction, Dioceses of the Roman empire; their number and government, in (4). Diocletian, the manner of his military election to the empire, (i, 100). His birth and character, 112. Takes Maximian for his colleague, 115. Associates as Casars, Galerius, and Constantius Chloins, 118. His triumph in conjunction with Maximan, 156. Lixes his court at the city of Nicomedia, 156. Abdicates the conjunction. Parallel between him and the emperor Charles V, 171. Passes his life in retirement at Salona, 174. His impartial behaviour toward the Christians, 458. Causes that produced the persecution of the Christians under his reign, 100.

Dion Cassius, the historian, screened from the fury of the soldiers, by the emperor Alexander Severus, 1, 250.

Moscotus, patriarch of Alexandria, his outrageous behaviour at the second council of Ephesus, vm. 301 — Is deposed by the council of Chalcedon, 306.

Disabul, great khan of the Turks, his reception of the ambassadors of Justiman, vii. 295.

Divorce, the liberty and abuse of, by the Roman laws, viii. 60. Limitations of, 63.

Docctes, their peculiar tenets, iii. 319. vini. 265. Derivation of their name, iii. 320. note.

Dominic, St. Loricatus, his fortitude in flagellation, xi. 17.

Dominus, when this epithet was applied to the Roman emperors, ii. 163. Domitian, emperor, his treatment of his kinsmen Flavius Sahinus, and Flavius Clemens, ii. 415.

Domitian, the Oriental profect, is sent by the emperor Constantius to reform the state of the East, then oppressed by Gallus, in. 170. Is put to death there, 177.

Donatus, his contest with Caecilian for the see of Carthage, iii. 309. History of the schism of the Donatists, 311. 398. Persecution of the Donatists by the emperor Honorius, vi. 16.

Dorykeum, battle of, between sultan Soliman and the first crusaders, xi. 60.

Doxology, how introduced into the church-service, and how perverted, in. 388.

Diamatic representations at Rome, a character of, v. 285.

Dreams, the popular opinion of the preternatural origin of, favourable to that of Constantine previous to his battle with Maxentius, iii, 202.

Dromedary, extraordinary speed of this animal, it. 12. note.

Dromones of the Greek empire, described, x. 137, 138.

Druids, their power in Gaul suppressed by the emperors Tiberius and Claudius, 1. 52.

Druses of Mount Libanus, a character of, x. 380, note.

Duke, derivation of that title, and great change in the modern, from the ancient, application of it, iii. 58.

Durazzo, siege of, by Robert Guiscard, x. 288. Battle of, between him and the Greek emperor Alexius, 294.

\mathbf{R}

Earthquake, an extraordinary one over great part of the Roman empire, iv. 338. Account of those that happened in the reign of Justinian, vii. +17.

East India, the Roman commercial intercourse with that region, i. 88. Commodities of, taxed by Alexander Severus, 262. Ebionites, account of that sect, ii. 279.

fathers, to be a particular object in the writings of St. John the Evangelist, iii. 318.

Ecclesiastes, the book of, why not likely to be the production of king Solomon, vii. 195, note.

Ecclesiastical and civil powers, distinguished, by the fathers of the Christian church, in 282.

Exchicites, son of the emperor Avitus, his gallant conduct in Gail, vi. 207.

Tethesis of the emperor Heraclaus, vin. 331

Edda, of Iceland, the system of mythology in, 1, "90, Fdecon, is sent from Atula king of the Huns, as his ambassador to the emperor Theodosius the Younger, v. 68. Engages in a proposal to assassinate Atula, 80. His son Onoacer, the first Barbi-rian king of Italy, 221.

Edessa, the purest dialect of the Syriac Linguage spok in the (c.) [3] anote. The property of the Christians there could street by the emptyor Julian, for the diorderly conduct of the Arreis (v. 12). Revolt of the Roman troops there, vin 20). Account of the school of, 339. History of the famous image there, ix 11s. The city and principality of, serzed by Buldwin the crusialer, [3, 63]. Is retaken by Zenglu, 122. The counts of, 249.

Edict of Milan, published by Constantine the Great, in 2014.

Edicis of the prators of Rome, under the repuldic, then reduce and tendency, vin. 13.

Edom, why that name was appried to the Roman empire by the Jews, it, 387, note.

Educates, the Stracen dynasty of, ∞ , $\gamma \gamma_0$

 $Edward\ {\rm I}^{-}$ of England, his crusade to the Holy Land, vi. 165.

Egobas, his character, and revolt in Goul, vi. 15). The son Syaginus, 312

Egypt, general description of, i. 40. The supersistion of, with difficulty tolerated at Rome, (2) Amount of its revenue, 257. Public works executed there by Probus, it 80. Combust of Diorletian there, 154. Progress of Christianny there, 365.

- , edict of the emperor Valens, to restrain the number of reclice monks there, iv. 270.

 —, the worship of Serapis, how introduced there, is a 6 Hertemple, and the Alexandrian library destroyed by his hop Theophilus, 111, 112 Origin of monkish in triumous m, yr 244 —, great supplies of wheat furnished by, for the eny of Con Europele, in the time of Justinent, vir. 50. Tech are real in tory ol, vm. 500

Administration of 443 Description of by Annon Arc.

-, the Egyptians take Jerusalem from the Purks, xi. 77. Texpt conquered by the Turks, 42%. Government of the Manadakes there, 104.

Eligabilitis, is declared emperor by the troops at Inne (10.22). Was the first Roman who wore garrients of pure silf, vii. 60.

Elephants, inquiry into the mainter of, brought ento the field by the antient princes of the East, i. 547, note. With what view introduced in the Circus at Rome in the hise Prince war, in 1403.

Eleustrian mysteries, why tolerated by the competor V deaton in 5, 2074.

Ehrzabeth, quaen of Engkaid, the political in c the mode of the netronal pulpits in, 3 (), note

VOL. XII

Emigration of the ancient northern nations, the nature and motives of, examined, i. 360.

Emperors of Rome, a review of their constitutions, viii. 10. Their legislative power, 18. Their rescripts, 19.

of Germany, their limited powers, ix. 208. Of Constantinople, their pomp and luxury, x. 113. Officers of the palace, state, and army, 121. Adoration of the emperor, mode of, 124. Then public appearance, 126. Their despotic power, 134. Their navy, 136. They retain the name of Romans to the last, 135.

Empire, Roman, division of, into the East and West empires by Valentinian, iv, 242. Extinction of the Western empire, vi. 224.

Encampment, Roman, described, i. 25.

Euroslius, the servile flatterer of Theodoric the Ostrogoth king of Haly, is made bishop of Pavia, vii. 16. note.

Epagathus, leader of the mutinous practorians, who murdered then practed Ulpian, punished by the emperor Alexander Severus, 1, 250.

Ephraus, the famous temple of Diana at, destroyed by the Goths, 1, 132. Council of, vii. 288. Episcopal riots there, 291.

Epicurus, his legacy to his philosophical disciples at Athens, vii, 140 Epirus, despots of, on the dismemberment of the Greek empire, xi. 25).

Equirus, master general of the Illyrian frontier, is defeated by the Sarmatians, iv 930.

Erasmus, his ment as a reformer, x. 192.

Essentans, their distinguishing tenets and practices, it. 362.

Eucharist, a knowly subject to the first reformers, x. 189.

I udes, duke of Aquitam, repels the first Saracen invasion of France, x. 20. Implores the aid of Charles Martel, 24. Recovers his dukedom, 27.

Endocia, her birth, character, and marriage, with the emperor Theodosius the Younger, v. 421. Her disgrace and death, 425.

Eudoxia, her marriage with the emperor Arcadius, iii. 148. Stimulates him to give up his favourite Entropius, 390. Persecutes St. Chrysostom, 405. Her death and character, 411.

Eudoxia, the daughter of Theodosius the Younger, is betrothed to the young emperor Valentinian III. of the West, vi. 7. Her character, 140. Is married to the emperor Maximus, 149. Invites Genseite, king of the Vandals, to Italy, 150.

Fudoxus, bishop of Constantinople, baptises the emperor Valens, iv. 265.

Lugenius, the rhetorician, is made emperor of the West by Arbogastes the Frank, v. 78. Is defeated and killed by Theodosius, 84.

Eugenius IV., pope, his contest with the council of Basil, xii. 93. Proones a re-union of the Latin and Greek churches, 111, 112. Forms a league against the Turks, 154. Revolt of the Roman ottzens against him, 378.

Eumenius the orator, some account of, ii. 182. note.

Eunapius the sophist, his character of monks, and of the objects of their worship, v. 123, 124.

- Eunomians, punishment of, by the edict of the emperor Theodosius against heretics, v. 33.
- Eunachs, enumerated in the list of eastern commodities imported and taxed in the time of Alexander Severus, 1, 262. They infest the palace of the third Gordian, 307.
- ------, their ascendancy in the court of Constantius, ii. 108. Why they favoured the Arians, 350, note. Procure the banishment of Laberius bishop of Rome, 390.
- ——, a conspiracy of, to disappoint the schemes of Ruhous, and many the emperor Arcadius to Endoxia, v. 147. They distract the court of the emperor Honorius, 301. And govern that of Arcadius, 375. Scheme of Chrysaphius to assassinate Attda king of the Huns, vi. 80.
- , the bishop of Seez and his whole chapter custiated, xii. 265, note.
- Eure, king of the Visigoths in Gaul, his conquests in Spain, vi. 206. Is vested with all the Roman conquests beyond the Alps by Odoacer king of Italy, 308.
- Europe, evidences that the climate of, was much colder in ancient than in modern times, i. 346. This alteration accounted for 347.
- ——, final division of, between the western and caston coupness, v. 197. Is ravaged by Attila king of the Huns, vi. 52. Is now one great republic, 411.
- Eusebia, empress, wife of Constantius, her steady frond-hip to Juhan, in. 183, 185. Is accused of arts to deprive Juhan of children, 190.
- Exceluse, his character of the followers of Artemon, in 373. His own character, 490. His story of the miraculous appearance of the cross in the sky to Constantine the Great, in 204, 200.
- Entropius the eunuch, great chamberlain to the emperor Areadius, concerts his marriage with Endoxia, in opposition to the views of Rufinus, v. 147. Succeeds Rufinus in the emperor's confidence, 160. His character and administration, 370. Provides for his own security, in a new law against treason, 383. Takes sanctuary with 5t. Chrysostom, 501. His death, 393
- Eutyches, his opinion on the subject of the incumation supported by the second council at Ephesus, viii, 300.—And adhered to by the Armemaas, 358.
- Eurine Sea, description of the vessels used in navigating, 1-423.
- Exaltation of the cross, origin of the annual festival of, vin 250.
- Exarch, under the Greek empire, the office and rank of, ix. 153. Of Ravenna, the government of Italy settled in, and administered by, vii. 398, viii. 145.
- Excise duties imposed by Augustus, i. 202.
- Excommunication from Christian communion, the origin of, n. 338, iii. 298.
- Exide, voluntary, under accusation and conscious guilt, its advantages among the Romans, vin. 107.

Fuith and its operations defined, u. 315.

Falcandus, Hugo, character of his Historia Sicula, x. 325. note. His lamentation on the transfer of the sovereignty of the island to the emperor Henry VI., 326.

Fathers of the Christian church, cause of their austere morality, it Fausta, empress, wife of Constantine the Great, causes of her being put to death, in. 113.

Faustina, wife of Marcus Antonnus, her character, 1. 135.

Faustina, the widow of the emperor Constantius, countenances the revolt of Procopius against the emperor Valens, iv. 247.

Festivals, Pagan, great offence taken at, by the primitive Christians, ii. 293.

Feudul government, the radiments of, to be found among the Scythians, iv. 351, 355.

Figures, numeral, occasion of their first public and familiar use, x, 8. Finances of the Roman empire, when the seat of it was removed to Constantinople, reviewed, ni. 81.

Fingal, his questionable history, whether to be connected with the invasion of Caledonia by the emperor Severus, i. 209.

Fire, Greek, the Saracen fleet destroyed by, in the harbour of Constantinople, x. 11.—Is long preserved as a secret, 17.—Its effects not to be compared with gunpowder, 110.

Firmus, an Egyptian merchant, his revolt against the emperor Aurelian, ii. 45.

Firmus the Moor, history of his revolt against the emperor Valentiman, iv. 304.

Flamens, Roman, their number, and how proportioned, xi. 18, Flamens, Roman, their number, and peculiar office, v. 93.

Flaminian way, its course described, vii. 381. note.

Flavian, archbishop of Constantinople, is killed at the second council of Ephesis, viii, 302.

Fleece, golden, probable origin of the fable of, vii. 321.

Florence, the foundation of that city, v. 216, note. Is besieged by Radagaisus, and reheved by Stilicho, 217, 218.

Florentius, practorian praefect of Gaul under Constantius, his character, in 233, iv. 7. Is condemned by the tribunal of Chalcedon, but suffered to escape by Julian, 48.

Floranus, brother of the emperor Tacitus, his eager usurpation of the Imperial dignity, ii. 70.

Fu/tr is consectated hishop of Rome, to supersede Liberius, who was exited, in: 390. He is violently expelled, and his adherents slaughtered, 392.

Felix, an African bishop, his martyrdom, n. 473.

Fornuation, a doubtful plea for divorce, by gospel authority, viii. 65. note.

France, modern, computation of the number of its inhabitants, and the average of their taxation, in. 91.

- France, the name of, whence derived, vi. 362. Derivation of the French language, 872, note.
- , Childeric deposed, and Pepin appointed king, by papal sanction, ix 152. Reign and character of Charlemagne, 174. Invasion of, by the Saracens, x. 18.
- b) mg.pam. Censio, his profane violation of the persons of pope Gelisius II, and his college of cardinals, xii. 207. Derivation of his Lumby mane, 316.
- Franks, their origin and confederacy, 1, 412. They invade Gud, and ravage Spain, 414, 415. They pass over into Afric (417) Bold and successful return of a colony of, from the sec of Pontus, by sea, n. 85.
- ——, they over-run and establish themselves at Toxandria in Germany, in, 214.
- the Metovingian race of their kings, vi. 98. How converted to Christianty, 272. Reign of their king Clovis, 410. Linal establishment of the French monarchy in Gaul. 359. Their laws, 343. Give the name of France to their conquests in Gaul. 302. They degenerate into a state of anarchy, 372.
- -----, they invade Italy, vii. 249, 303, ------, their inditary that ictor, x. 147.
- Travetta the Goth, his character, and deadly quartel with his countryman Printf, by. 442. His operations against Gamas, v. 329.
- Fredora 1, emperor of Germany, his tyranny in Italy, 18, 207. Engages in the third crusade, vi. 105. His disastrons expedition, 113–144. Sacrifices Arnold of Bresen to the pope xii 275. This reply to the Roman umbassadors, 203.
- Frederic II., is driven out of Italy, ix. 208. His disputes with the pope, and reductant crusade, xi. 155. Exhorts the European princes to unite in opposing the Tartus, 427.
- Tred to III, the list emperor crowned at Rome, xn. 379.
- Freemen of Laconia, a count of, 8, 107.

 Freegeria, the Cothic chief, extricates limited from the hard of Lapicinus, governor of Thrace, iv 353. Defeats him, 390. Bauli of Salices, 397. His strength normin i by the accession of new tribes, 399. Negociates with Valens, 196. Bauli, of Hadrianople, 403. The innon of the Gothic tribes broken by his death, 196.
- Freedmen, among the Romans, their rank in society, vin, 50.
- Framentus was the first Christein missionary in Abyssina, in: 279. Fulk of Neully, his ardour in preaching the fourth crusade, xi.188 against the revolter Tribigild, 389. Joins him, 393. His flight and death, 396.

Gala, probable derivation of the term, x. 126. note.

Galata, the suburb of, at Constantinople, assigned to the Genoese, x1, 300.

Galerius is associated in the administration, as Casar, by the emperor Diocletian, ii. 118. Is defeated by the Persians, 144. Surprises and overthrows Narses, 147. Assumes the title of Augustus, on the abdication of Diocletian, 180. His jealousy of Constantine, 102. Decins it prudent to acknowledge him Casar, 195. His unsuccessful invasion of Italy, 202. Invests Liemius with the purple on the death of Severus, 208. His death, 212. From what causes he entertained an aversion to the Christians, 103. Obtains the countenance of Diocletian for persecuting them, 465. Publishes an educt of toleration just before his death, 184.

Galillans, two-fold application of that name in the infancy of Christianty, n. 411. Why the emperor Julian applied this name to the Christians, iv. 100.

Gaillienus, son of the emperor Valerian, is associated by him in the Imperial thione. 1, 141. Prohibits the senator, from exercing military employments, 419. Character of his administration after the captivity of his father, 442. Names Claudius for his successor, 1, 4. Layouted the Christians, 453.

Gallies of the Greek empire described, x. 138.

Gallus elected emperor, on the minority of Hostilianus, the son of Decius, i. 405.

Gallie, nephew of Constantine the Great, his education, iii. 171. Is invested with the title of Ciesar, 172. His cruelly and imprudence, 173. His disgrace and death, 179. Embraced the doctine, but neglected the precepts, of Clinistianity, iv. 66. Converts the grove of Dapline, at Antioch, to a Christian binial-place, 121.

Games, public, of the Romans, described, 1. 312 415, v. 284. Account of the factions of the circus, vii. 75. Ganges, source of that river, xii. 15. note.

Gaudentius, the notary, is condemned to death under the emperor Julian, iv. 49.

Gaul, the province of, described, i. 31. The power of the Druds suppressed there by Tiberius and Claudius, 52. Cities in, 78. Amount of the tribute paid by that province to Rome, 257. Is defended against the Franks by Posthumus, 414. Succession of usurpers there, ii. 29. Invasion of, by the Lygians, 78. Revolt of the Ragaudæ suppressed by Maximian, 120. Progress of Christianity there, 307.

proportion of the capitation-tax levied there by the Roman emperors, ii. 88. Is invaded by the Germans, 213. The government of, assigned to Julian, 215. His civil administration, 232. Is invaded by the Alemanni, under the emperor Valentinian, 7v. 277. And under Gratian, 101.

----, destruction of 1dol, and temples there, by Martin bishop of Tours, v. 105. Is over-run by the barbarous troops of Rada-gaisus, after his defeat by Stilicho, 224. Is settled by the Goths, Burgundians, and Franks, 359. Assembly of the seven provinces m, 360 Reign of Theodoric king of the Visigoths in, vi. 9 -Origin of the Merovingian race of kings of the Franks in, 98. Invasion of, by Attila, king of the Huns 107. Buttle of Chalons, 112. Revolutions of, on the death of the emperor Majorian, 206. Conversion of, to Christianity by the Franks 205. Representation of the advantages it enjoyed under the Roman government, 300. Conquests and prosperity of Finne king of the Visigoths, 308. Character and reign of Clovis, 310 The . Alemanni conquered, 317 Submission of the Armeric ais, and the Roman troops, 322. Final establishment of the Treuch monarchy in Gaul, 339. History of the Salic laws, 313 lands of, how claimed and divided by the Barbarian conqueror of, 353. Domain and benefices of the Meroyingian princes 356. Usurpations of the Seniors, 358. Privileges of the Romans in, 369, Gedrosia, revolutions of the sea-coast of, r 350, note

Goldaga arra of the Turks, when settled, v. 507

Gelascus, pope, his zeal against the celebration of the felicit of Lupercalia, vi. 199. Deplores the miserable decay of Italy, 275.

Gelasius II., pope, his rough treatment by Censio Vrangipain. xii 207.

Gelimer deposes Hilderic the Vandal king of Africa, and using the government, vii. 157. Is defeated by Belisanus, 176. His final defeat, 184. His distressful flight, 189. Surrenders himself to Belisarius, 192. Graces his triumph, 194. This peaceful retriement, 196.

General of the Roman army, his extensive power, 1 9%

Generosity, Arabian, striking instances of, ix. 242.

Gennadeus, the monk, his denunctation against a Greek union with the Latin church, xii. 207.

Genueral, the Roman general, under the emperor Honoria , his character, v. 300.

Genoise, their inercantile establishment in the suburb of Pera at Constantinople, xi. 390. Their was with the emperor Cantacuzenus, 395.

Genseric, king of the Vandals in Spain, his character, vi. 12. Goes over to Africa on the invitation of count Bondace. 14. This successes there by the assistance of the Donalists, 15. Devastation of Africa by histroops, 20. Besieges Bondace in Hippo Regins, 21. His treacherous surprisal of Carthage, 28. Strengthens limited by an alliance with Attila king of the Hins. 49. His brutal treatment of his son's wife, daughter of Theodoric, 97. Raises a not of force, and invades Italy, 147. His sack of Rome, 151. Destroys the flect of Majorian, 181, 182. His nix d depredations on Italy.

187. His claims on the Lastern empire, 159. Destroys the Roman fleet under Pasihous, 209. Was an Arian, and persecuted his Catholic subjects, 280.

Gentleman, ctymology of the term, xt 30 'nou.

Geoponics of the emperor Constantine Porphyrogenitus, account of x. 96.

George of Cappadocia supersedes Athanasius in the see of Alexandiia, in. 380. His scandalous history, and tragical death, iv. 127. Becomes the tutelar saint of England, 129.

Gepula, then increachments on the Eastern empire checked by the Lombards, vii. 273. Are reduced by them, viii. 121, Germanus, nephew of the emperor Justiman, his character and promotion to the command of the army sent to Italy, vii. 379. The death, 380.

Germann, the rude institutions of that country the original principles of Taroquan laws and manners. 1, 511. Its ancient extent, 345. How peopled, 349. The natives unacquainted with letters in the time of Tacitus, 352. Had no cines, 354. Manners of the ancient Germans, 357. Population, 359. State of liberty among them, 301. Authority of their magistrates, 304. Conjugal faith and chastity, 307. Their religion, 570. Arms and discipline, 375. Their leads, 380. General idea of the German tribes, 582. Probus carries the Roman arms into Germany, 11, 79. A frontier wall built by Probus, from the Rhine to the Danube, 81.

-----, myasions of Gaul by the Germans, m. 213. iv. 277.

——, state of, under the emperor Charlemagne, ix. 183. The Imperial crown established in the name and nation of Germany, by the first Otho, 191. Division of, among independent princes, 208. Formation of the Germanic constitution, 211. State assumed by the emperor, 215.

Gerontius, count, sets up Maximus as emperor in Spain, and loses his life in the attempt, v. 342, 343.

Geta and Caracalla, sons of the emperor Severus, their fixed antipathy to each other, i. 206.

Ghebers of Persia, Instory of, v. 383.

Gibraltar, derivation of the name of, v. 368.

Gildo the Moor, his revolt in Africa, v. 162. His defeat and death, 171.

Gladiators, desperate enterprise and fate of a party of, reserved for the triumph of Probus, it. 88. The combats of, abolished by the emperor Honorius, v. 205.

Glyceius is first emperor of Rome, and then bishop of Salona, vi. 210, 220. Morders Julius Nepos, and is made archbishop of Milan, 221.

Gnostics, character and account of the sect of, it. 282. Principal sects into which they divided, 256. Then peculiar tenets, in. 319, viii, 206.

Godfrey of Bouillon, his character, and engagement in the first crusade, M. 50. His route to Constantinople, 41, 46. Is elected king of Jerusalem, 80. Compiles the Assize of Jerusalem, 93. Form of his administration, 95.

Gog and Magog, the famous rampart of, described, via 142.

Goisvintha, wife of Leovigild, king of Spain, her pious cruelty to the princess Ingundis, vi. 200.

Gold of affliction, the tax so denominated in the Eastern empire, abolished by the emperor Anastanis, vo. 101.

Golden horn, why the Bospherus obtained this appellation in remote untiquity, m. 7.

Gordianus, proconsul of Africa, his character and elevation to the cumpute of Rame, (282). His son associated with him in the Imperial dignity, 284.

Gordian, the third and youngest, declared Casar, 1, 201. Is declared emperor by the army, on the morder of Maximus and Bulbinus, 500.

- Gaths of Scandarvia, their origin, 1, 587. Their religion 589, The Goths and Vandals supposed to be originally one great people, 302. Their emigrations to Prissia and the Variant 305. They invade the Roman provinces, 305. They reterise tribute from the Romans 505. They subdue the Bosphora 123. Plun for the cities of Bulvina, 420. They ravage Greece, 150. Conclude a treaty with the emperor Amelian it 18. They ravage Illyricum, and are the used by Concentration the Great, 254.
- their war with the Sarmatians, in, 123. Are again routed by Constantine, 124. Gothic war under the emperors Valentine mand Valens, iv, 322. Are deteated by the Huns, 574. They implore the protection of the emperor Valens, 379. They are received into the empire, 582. They are oppressed by the Roman governors of Thrace, 385. Are provoked to hostilities, and defeat Lapremus, 590. They ravage Thrace, 391. Battle of Salices, 397. They are strengthened by fresh awains of their countrymen, cos. Battle of Hadranople, 408. Scour the country from Hubamopik to Constantinople, 414. Massacre of the Gothic vonth in Astr. 118. Their formidable union broken by the death of Fritizein, 131. Death and funeral of Athanaic, 432. Invasion and defeat of the Ostrogoths, 135. Are settled in Thrace, by Theodosius 136. Then hostile sentiments, 440.
- ——, revolt of, under Honorius, v. 176. They ravage Greece, under the command of Alaric, 170. They invade Italy, 1965. The sack of Rome by, 310. Death of Alaric, 320. Victories of Walha in Spain, 507. They are settled in Aquitain, 358. See Gaid, and Theodoria. Conquest of the Visigoths in Gaid and Spain, vi. 206. How the Goths were converted to the Curi tian religion, 208, 209.

——, reign of Theodoric king of the Ostrogoths, vn. 2.—The Goths in Italy, extinguished, 300.

Government, civil, the origin of, 1, 302

Governors of provinces, under the emperors, their great power and influence, in, 56.

Gravian was the first emperor who retured the pontifical robe, in 400 note. Marries the princess Constantia, and succeeds to the empire, iv. 335. Defeats the Alemania in Gaul, 402. Invests Theodosius with the empire of the Last, 420.

, his character and conduct, v. 1. His flight from Maximus, and death, 8. Overthrew the ecclesiastical establishment of Paganism, 95.

Greece, is ravaged by the Goths, i. 430. Is over-run by Alaric the Goth, v. 179. Is reduced by the Turks, xii. 249.

Greek church, origin of the schism of, xi. 169. xii. 111. 145.

Greek empire. See Constantinople.

Greeks, why averse to the Roman language and manners, 1, 161. The Greek becomes a scientific language among the Romans, 63. Character of the Greek language of Constantinople, xii, 11. When first taught in Italy, 120.

Greek learning, revival of, in Italy, xii. 119.

Gregory the Great, pope, his pions presents to Recared king of Spam, vi. 301. Exhorts Theodelinda, queen of the Lombaids, to propagate the Nicene faith, ibid. His enuity to the venerable buildings and learning of Rome, vin. 160. His birth and early profession, 162. His elevation to the pontificate, 101. Sends a mission to convert the Britons, 167. Sanctifies the usurpation of the emperor Phocas, 211.

Gregory II., pope, his epistles to Leo III. emperor of Constantinople, ix. 134. Revolts against the Greek emperor, 138.

Gregory VII., pope, his ambitious schemes, ix. 100. His contest with the emperor Henry III., x. 301. His retreat to Salerno, 304, xii. 206.

Gregory, præfect of Africa, history of him and his daughter, ix. 150, 451.

Gregory Nazuazen, his lamentation on the disgraceful discord among Christians, iii, 403. Loads the memory of the emperor Julian with invective, iv. 63. Censures Constantius for having spaced his life, 79, note.

—, is presented to the wretched see of Sasina, by his friend archbishop Basil, v. 19, 20. His mission to Constantinople, 20 Is placed on the archiepiscopal throne by Theodosius, 21. His resignation and character, 30.

Grumbates, king of the Chionites, attends Sapor king of Persia, in his invasion of Mesopotamia, in. 201. Loses his son at the siege of Amida, 205. Returns home in grief, 209.

Guardianship, how vested and exercised, according to the Roman civil laws, vin. 68.

Gubazes, king of Colchos, his alliance with Chosroes king of Persia, vii. 330. Returns to his former connexion with the emperor Justiman, 331. Is treacherously killed, 330.

Guelphs and Ghibelines, the parties of, in Italy, ix. 208, xii. 322. Guilt, the degrees of, in the penal laws of the Romans, viii. 98.

Gaiscard, Robert, his birth and character, x, 270. Acquires the dukedom of Apulia, 274. His Italian conquests, 277. Besteges Darazzo, 287. Defeats the Greek emperor Alexius there, 294, 295. Engages in the cause of pope Gregory VII., 302. His second expedition to Greece, and death, 504.

Gundobald, king of the Burgundians, is reduced by Clovis king of the Franks, vi. 326. His mode of justifying the judicial combat, 352.

Gunpowder, the invention and use of, xii. 62.

Guy of Lusignan, king of Jerus dem, his character, xi. 134. Is defeated and taken prisoner by Saladin, 135.

Guarus, a small island in the Ægean sea, an instance of its poverty, 1 259.

11

Hadrum, emperor, relinquishes the castern conquests of Trajan.

1. 11. Then characters compared, 12. His character contrasted, with that of Autonius Pius, dist. His several adoptions of successors, 121. Founds the city of "Eha Capitolina on Mount Ston, 11, 278.

Hadrianople, battle of, between Constanting the Great and Lieraus, 1, 258. Is meffectually besteged by Friegern the Goth, 493. Battle of, between the emperor Values and the Goths, 408.

Hukem, caliph of the Saracens, assumes a divine character to supplant the Mahometan faith, x 570

Humadanetes, the Stracen dynasty of, in Mesopotomia, x, 82.

Hamibal, review of the state of Rome when he besieged that cuv, (x,2)

Hannibulianus, nephew of Constantine the Great, is dignified with the inde of king, in 116. Provinces assigned to him for a kingdom, 118. Is cruelly destroyed by Constantins, 132.

Happiness, instance how little it depends on power and in sginficence, x, 39.

Harmozan, the Persian satrap, his interview with the caliph Omar, 48, 374.

Hurp cs, an ancient mythologic history. Le Clerc's conjecture concerning, in prima Hurun al Rashid, caliph, his friendly correspondence web the emperor Charlemagne, 18, 489. This wars with the Greek empire, 8, 59.

Hassan, the Saracen, conquers Carthage, 1x 461.

Hawking, the art and sport of, introduced into Italy by the Louibards, viii, 152

Hegira, the æra of, how fixed, ix 280.

Helena, the mother of Constantine, her parentage as estamed, a. 190. Was converted to Christianity by her son, or 242 mater

Helena, sister of the emperor Constantus, married to Julian, in 186 Is reported to be deprived of children by the arts of the empress Eusebia, 190. Her death, iv. 19.

Heliopolis taken by the Saiacens, ix 100.

Hell, according to Mahomet, described, ix, 250.

 Hellespont described, in. 9.
 Helk etta, amount of its population in the time of Casar, 1, 359 note Hengist, his arrival in Britain, with succours for Vortigeria, against the Caledonians, vi. 382. His establishment in Kent, 383, 387.

Henoticon of the emperor Zeno, character of, viii, 311.

Henry succeeds his brother Baldwin as emperor of Constantinople, M. 263. His character and administration, 265.

Henry III., emperor, his contest with pope Gregory VII., x, 301. Takes Rome, and sets up pope Clement III., 302.

Henry VI., emperor, conquers and pillages the island of Sicily, x, 529.

Henry the Fowler, emperor of Germany, defeats the Turkish invaders, N. 215.

Hepturchy, Saxon, establishment of, in Britain, vi. 384. Review of the state of, 305.

Herachan, count of Africa, retains that province in obedience to Honorius, v. 308. His cruel usage of the refugees from the sack of Rome by Alaric, 321.1 His revolt and death, 339, 340.

Hera leonas, emperor of Const intimople, ix, 10.

Herachus, deposes the eastern usurper Phocas, and is chosen emperor, vm. 216. Conquests of Chosroes II, king of Persia, 219. His distressful situation, 227. Accepts an ignomimous peace from Chosroes, 230. His first expedition against the Persians, 233. His second Persian expedition, 236. Strengthen himself by an alliance with the Turks, 240. His third Persian expedition, 248. His treaty of peace with Persia, 255. His triumph and pregrimage to Jerusalem, 256. His theological enquire, 330.

Heractius marries his nicce Martina, 18, 9.—Leaves his two sons joint successors to the empire, 10.—Invasion of his provinces by the Saracens, 388—Thes from Syria, 420.

Heraclius the prafect, his expedition against the Vandals in Africa, vi. 199.

Heraclus the eunuch, insugates the emperor Valentiman III, to the murder of the patrician Erius, vi. 138. His death, 141.

Herbelot, character of his Bibliothèque Orientele, ix 503, note, Hercyman forest, the extent of, unknown in the time of Cosar, i, 547, Heresy in religion, the origin of, traced, ii. 284. Ldict of Constantine the Great, against, iii. 507.

Hermani ic king of the Ostrogoths, his conquests, iv. 319. His death, 376.

Hermonegild prince of Boetica, his marriage with Ingunds princess of Austrasia, and conversion to the Nicene faith, vi. 297. Revolt and death, 298.

Hermits of the East, their mortified course of life, vi. 264. Miracles performed by them and their relics, 200.

Hermodorus, the Ephesian, assists the Romans in compiling then twelve tables of laws, vin. 6.

Hermogenes, master general of the cavalry, is killed in the attempt to banish Paul, bishop of Constantinople, in. 294.

Hero and Leander, the story of, by whom controverted and defended, in. 9, note.

Herodian, his life of Alexander Severus, why preferable to that in the Augustan history, i. 254, note.

Herodes Atticus, his extraordinary fortune and munificence, 1, 72, Herodotas, his character of the Persian worship, a 322.

Herali, of Germany and Poland, then character, vii, 21.

Hilarion, the monk of Palestine, account of, vi. 244.

Hilarr, Inshop of Ponters, his remarkable observations on the diversity of Christian doctrines, in, 533—This exposition of the term Homorousion, 344.

Homorousion, 344, $H_0 h \phi$, page, considers the empotor Anthemous for his tolerating principles, vi. 196.

Hilderne the Vandal king of Africa, his indulgence to his Catholic subjects displeases both the Arrans and Athanasians vir. 196, 197, 44 June 1986.

Hindoos of the Past, not the disciples of Zoroaster, ix 102 note.

Hindostan, conquest of, by Tamerlane, xu-13.

Hippo Regues, siege of, by Genseric king of the Vandals, vi. 12.

History, the principal subjects of, 1, 583.

Holy war, the justice of it enquired into, xi. 12.

Homicide, how commuted by the Salic laws, vi. 346

Homoonston, origin and use of that term at the council of Nice, in. 923 And Homoiousion, the distinction between, 541.

Honain, war of, 18 509.

Honoratus, archibshop of Milan, is, with his clergy, driven from his see, by the Lombards, viii, 127.

Honoria, prince s, sister of the emperor Valentinian III., her history, vi. 103.

Howarry, son of Theodosus the Great, is declared emperor of the West, by his dying father, v. 86. Marries Maria, the dan lifer of Sulficho, 172, 173. The character, 174. Thes from Milan on the myasion of Italy by Alaire, 196. His minimphant energy into Rome, 204. Abolishes the combass of glidiators, 207. Fixes his residence at Rayemia, 210. Orders the death of Sulficho 242. His impolitic measures and cruelty unite his bribarian oldiers against him under Alaire, 252. His councils ¹ treated by the cumichs, 501. His diper overtures to Anabis and Maria, 307. His list sets, and death, 340. His treample for the rebistion of Spain by Wallist the Goth, 255. Is suspected of meet with his sister Placidia, vi. 2, 3. His presectation of the Donarists in Africa, 40.

Howar, the new rankvof, introduced in the cuy of Constantinople, in [34, 8, 449]

Hormisdas, a fugitive Person prince in the course of the emperor Constantias, his remarks on the enty of Rome, in, 194 one. His Instory, and station under Julian, iv, 197

Hormoux, the son of Chostoes, Eurg of Per a his accession, vin. 178. His character, 179. Is deposed, and at length killed. 184-2486.

Horses of Arabia, their peculiar qualities, ix. 221.

Hoselu, the son of Ah, his tragical death, ix. 313,

Hospitallers, kinglits, of St. John of Jerus dem popularity and character of the order of, xi. 22

Hostilianus, the minor son of the emperor Decius, elected emperor, under the guardianship of Gallus, 1, 405.

Hugh, king of Burgundy, his marriage with Marozia, and expulsion from Rome by Alberic, 1x. 201.

Hugh, count of Vermandois, engages in the first crusade, xi. 32. Is shipwrecked, and made captive by the Greek emperor Alexis Commenus, 4... His return, 72.

Human nature, its natural propensities, in 320%

Hume, Mr., his natural history of religion, the best commentary on the polytheism of the ancients, i. 46, note. His difficulty, as to the extent of the Imperial palace at Rome, resolved, 212, note. Charges the most refined and philosophic sects with intolerancy, 328, note.

Hungary, establishment of the Huns in, vi. 38. State of, under the emperor Charlemagne, ix. 181. Terror excited by their first approach to Europe, x. 203. Their character, 209.

Hunrades, John, firs exploits against the Turks, xii. 157. His defence of Belgrade, and death, 167.

Hunneric, the son of Genseric, king of the Vandals, persecutes his Catholic subjects, vi. 280. His cruelty to the Catholics of Tipasa, 203.

Huns, their original seat, and their conquests, iv. 350. Their decline, 304. Their emigrations, 367. Their victories over the Goths, 371, 377.

Huns, they drive other barbarous tribes before them, upon the Roman provinces, v. 212. Their establishment in Hungary, vi. 38. Character of their king Attila, 41. Their invasion of Peisia, 47. The unpine of, extinguished by the death of Attila, 135.

Hunting of wild beasts, when a virtue, and when a vice, 1, 151. Is the school of war, iv 350.

Hypatia, the female philosopher, murdered in the church at Alexandria, vni. 581.

Hypatius, sedition of, at Constantinople, vn. 85.

Land J

Jacobites of the East, history of the sect of, viii. $50.

James, St., his legendary exploits in Spain, ii. 368.

Janizaries, first institution of those troops, xi. 110.

Iberian and Caspian gates of Mount Caucasus, distinguished, vii. 140. The Iberian gates occupied by Cabades king of Persia, 141.

Idutius, his account of the misfortunes of Spain by an irruption of the barbarous nations, v. 352.

Idolatry ascribed to the agency of da mons, by the primitive Christians, ii. 288. Derivation of the term, and its successive applications, iii. 410. note.

Jerom, his extravagant representation of the devastation of Fannonia by the Goths, iv. 417. His influence over the widow Paula, vi. 248.

Jerusalem, its situation, destruction, and profanation, iv 99. Pilgrimages to, and curious relies preserved there, 100. Abortive attempts of the emperor Julian to rebuild the temple, 103.

-, a magnificent church erected there to the Virgin Mary by Justinian, vn. 123 The vessels of the temple brought from Africa to Constantinople by Belisarius, 1/4 Is conquered by Chosroes II, king of Persia, vm. 220. Insurrection of the monks there, 310.

-, the city conquered by the Saracens, ix 411. Great resort of pilgrims to, x. 376. Corquest of, by the Turks, 383.

-, is taken from the Turks by the Egyptians, xi. 77. Is taken by the crusaders, 84. Is erected into a kingdom under Godfrey of Boudlon, 87. Succession of its Christian princes, 154 Is pillaged by the Catizmians, 158

Jerusalem, New, described according to the ideas of the primitive Christians, in 302.

Jesuits, Portuguese, persecute the eastern Christians, vin 348. Then labours in, and expulsion from Abyssinia, 373

Jews, an obscure, unsocial, obstinate race of men, n. 268 of their history, 270. Their religion the basis of Christianity, 274. The promises of divine favour extended by Christianity to all mankind, 274. The immortality of the soul not inculcated in the law of Moses, 200. Why there are no Hebrew gospels extant, 357. Provoked the persecutions of the Roman emperors, 384, those of a more liberal spirit adopted the theological system of Plato, m. 316. Then condition under the emperors Constantine and Constantius, iv 97. Abortive attempt of Julian to rehadd the temple of Jerusalem, 103.

-, miraculous conversion of a number of, at Minorca, v. 132 note.

Persecution of, in Spain, vi. 302.

-, are persecuted by the Catholics in Italy, vii, 40. And by Cyril at Alexandria, viii, 279. How plagued by the emperor Justinian, 322.

-, those in Arabia subdued by Mahomet, ix, 302 Assist the Saracens in the reduction of Spain, ix 476

-, massacres of, by the first crus ab rs, xt 25, 20. Jezdegerd, king of Persia, is said to be left guardian to Theodosius the Younger, by the emperor Arculus, v. 413. His war with Theodosius, 126. Igilium, the small island of, serves as a place of refuge for Romans who flew from the sack of Rome by Marie, v. 520.

Ignatius, hishop of Antioch, the Christian fortitude displayed in his epistles, n. 437.

Ikshidites, the Saracen dynasty of, x 82.

Illustrious, the title of, how limited in the times of Roman simplicity, and how extended when Constantinople became the scat of empire, in. 34.

Illyricum described, 1. 35.

Images, introduction of, into the Christian church, ix. 113 worship of, derived from Paganism, 115.. Are condemned by the council of Constantinople, 126. The adoration of, justified by pope Gregory II., 131. And sanctified by the second council of Nice, 105.

CENERAL INDEX

Imperator, in the Roman history, explained, i. 00. note. The Imperial prerogatives, 106. The court, 110. The sense of this appellation altered by long use, n. 163.

Incarnation, theological history of the doctrine of, vin. 201.

Incest, natural, and arbitrary, distinguished, vin. 66.

India, account of the Christians of St. Thomas in, viii, 346. Persecution of, by the Portuguese, 347.

Inductions, the memorable æra of, whence dated, ii. 229, note. The name and use of, in the middle ages, whence derived, iii, 83.

Indulgences, in the Romish church, the nature of, explained, xi. 10, 17, Ingundis, princess of Austrasia, is married to Hermenegild prince of Beetica, and cruelly treated by his mother Gossvintha, vi. 297.

Inheritance, paternal, subject to parental discretion among the Romans, 1, 264. The Roman law of, viii. 74. Testamentary dispositions of property, 77. The Voconian law, how evaded, 81.

Injuries, review of the Roman laws for the redress of, vin. 87.

Innocent III., pope, enjoyed the plenitude of papal power, xi. 152. Inquisition, the first erection of that tribunal, xi. 152.

Institutes of Justinian, an analysis of, viii. 47.

Interest of money, how regulated by the Roman law, vin. 80.

Joan, pope, the story of, fictitious, ix. 197. note.

John, principal secretary to the emperor Honorius, usurps the empn e after his death, vi. 4.

John, the almsgiver, archbishop of Alexandria, relieves the Jewish refugees when Jerusalem was taken by the Persians, wiii, 221, His extraordinary liberality of the church treasure, 36%.

John, bishop of Antioch, arrives at Ephesus after the inceting of the council, and, with his bishops, decides against Cyril, viii, 291, Coalition between him and Cyril, 293.

John, of Apri, patriarch of Constantinople, his pride, and confederacy against John Cantacuzene, xi, 375.

John, of Brienne, emperor of Constantinople, xt. 273.

John, of Cappadocia, pratorian præfect of the East, under the emperor Justinian, his character, vn. 100. Is disgraced by the empress Theodora, and becomes a hishop, 110. Opposes the African war, 159. His fraud in supplying the army with bread, 169.

John Comnenus, emperor of Constantinople, 1x, 80.

John Damascenus, St., his history, ix. 129. note.

John of Lycopolis, the hermit, his character, and oracular promise to the emperor Theodosius the Great, v. 79.

John, the Monophysite bishop of Asia, is employed by the emperor Justinian to root out pagans and heretics, viii. 321.

John XII., pope, his flagitious character, ix. 198.

John XXIII., pope, his profligate character, xii. 375.

John, St. the Evangelist, reveals the true sense of Plato's doctrine of the Logos, in. 318.

John the Sangninary, serzes the Gothic treasures in Picenum, and obliges Vitiges to raise the siege of Rome, vir 244.

John Zimines, muiders the Greek empero, Nicephorus, and succeds him, 18, 05. His eastern victories, A. 85. Defeats Switoslaus czar of Russia. 230.

Jona, one of the Hebride islands, its ancient monastic eminence, vi. 246.

Jonus, renegado of Damascus, story of, ix. 397.

Jordan, character of his work, De Originibus Sciancis, x. 197. note. Joseph the Carizmian, governor of Berzem, kills the sultan Alp Arslan, x. 362.

Josephus, the mention of Jesus Christ in his history, a forgery, it. 40s. note. His opinion, that Plato derived knowledge from the Jews, controverted. iii 314. note.

Ju, tan is elected emperor by the troops of Julian, on their retreat from Assyria, iv. 205. His treaty with Sapor king of Persia, 209. His death, 233.

Jor unis and Herculians, new bodies of guards instituted to supersocie the practorian bands, ii. 161.

Jormian of Verona, his punishment by a Roman syriod, for heresy,

Joynus reduces the Alemanni, who had invaded Gaul, iv. 270, 280 account of his revolt against the emperor Honorius in Germany, v. 347.

Jorans, practorian praefect under the emperor Honorius, succeeds Olympius as his confidential minister, v. 200. His negotiations with Alaric obstructed, 301 — Desoits Honorius, and goes over to Alaric, and the new emperor Attalus, 307.

Irene, her marriage with the Greek emperor Leo, ix 31. Her ambition, and barbarity to her son Constantine, 32. Restores images to public devotion, 104.

Ireland was first colonized from Scotland, iv 244. Derivation of the range of its turclar saint, Patrick, vi. 224. note

Isaac L., Commenus, emperor of Constantinople, 18 71

Isaac II., Lingelas, emperior of Constantinople, r., 109 - His charater and reign, w 181. Is depused by his brotaer Alexius, 100

Is restored by the crusaders, 217 - His death, 228 Isaac, archbishop of Armema, his apology for the vices of lang

Attasites, v. 430.

Isaaria, the rebellion there against the emperor Gallienus, i. 143

Isoarians, reduction of, by the eastern emperors, vir 150 Isodore, cardinal, his all treatment in Russia, vir 14 Receives a

Isidore, cardinal, his all freatment in Fidesis, via 190 act of umon from the Greek clergy at Constantino dec. 200 Isocrates, his price for the totton of his pupils, via 140 is reduced by Theodoric the Ostrogoth, vii. 15. His adiamstration, 17. Government of, according to the Roman law, by Theodoric, 26. Its flourishing state at this time, 33. How you xii.

Haly, the dominion of, under Odoacer, succeeds the extraction of the Western empire, vi 224. Its inserable start at this ara, 2% Conversion of the Lombards of, to the Nicene faith, 301.

supplied with silk from China, 91. History of Amalasontha, queen of Italy, 206. Invasion of, by Belisarius, 217. Siege of Rome by the Goths, 224. Invasion of Italy by the Franks, 249. Revolt of the Goths, 353. Expedition of the eunuch Narses, 381. Invasion of, by the Franks and Alemanni, 303. Government of, under the exarchs of Ravenna, 398. Conquests of Alboin king of the Lombards in, vin. 126. Distress of, 142. How divided between the Lombards and the exarchs of Ravenna, 145.

Italy, growth of the papal power in, ix. 131. Revolt of, against the Greek emperors, 138. The exarchate of Ravenna granted to the pope, 156. Extent of the dominions of Charlemagne there, 182. The power of the German Casars destroyed by the rise of the commercial cities there, 204. Factions of the Guelphs and Ghibelins, 208. Conflict of the Saucens, Latins, and Greeks in, x. 247.

Italy, revival of Greek learning in, xii, 119. Authors consulted for the history of, 394. note.

Jubilee, popish, a revival of the secular games, i. 312. note. xii, 310. The return of, accelerated, 312.

Jude, St., examination of his grandsons before the tribunal of the procurator of Judaza, ii, 114.

Judgments of God, in the Salic laws, how determined, vi. 310.

Judgments, popular, of the Romans, displayed, viii. 101.

Julia Domna, wife of the emperor Severus, her character, i. 205-Her death, 228.

Julian, the nephew of Constantine the Great, his education, in. 171. His dangerous situation on the death of his brother Gallus, 181. Is sent to Athens, where he cultivates philosophy, 183 — Is recalled by Constantius, 180. Is invested with the fitle of Casar, 188. Is appointed to the government of Gaul, 215. His first campaign, 217. Battle of Strasburg, 222. Reduces the Franks at Tox india, 226. His three expeditions beyond the Rhine, 228. Restores the cities of Gaul, 250. His civil administration, 232. His account of the theological calamities of the empire under Constantius, 398. Constantius grows pealous of him, iv. 3. The Gaulish legions are ordered into the East, 4. Is saluted emperor by the troops, 11. His embassy and epistle to Constantius, 15. His fourth and fifth expeditions beyond the Rhine, 17. Declares war against Constantius, and abjures the Christian religion, 22. His march from the Rhine into Hlyricum, 25. Enters Sirmium, 21. Publishes apologies for his conduct, 29. His triumphant entry into Constantinople on the death of Constantius, 36. His private life and civil government, 37. His reformations in the Imperial palace, 41. Becomes a sloven to avoid foppery, 45. Erects a tribunal for the trial of the evil ministers of Constantius, 46. Dismisses the spies and informers employed by his predecessor, 50. His love of freedom and the republic, 52. His kindnesses to the Grecian cities, 55. His abilities as an orator, 58. And as a judge, 59. His character, ibid. His apostacy accounted for, 64. Adopts the Pagan mythology, 07. His theological system, 72. His initiation into the Eleusiman mysteries, and his fanaticism, 75. His hypocritical duplicity, 78.

Writes a vindication of his apostacy, 81. His edict for a general toleration, 83, 84. His Pagan superstitious zeal, 85. His circular letters for the reformation of the Pagan religion, 88. His industry in gaining proselytes, 94 His address to the Jews, 97. History of his attempt to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, 103. Transfers the revenues of the Christian church to the Heathen priests, 110. Prohibits Christian schools, 111. Obliges the Christians to remstate the Pagan temples, 115. Restores the sacred grove and temple of Daphne, 121. Punishes the Christians of Annoch for burning that temple, 123. His treatment of the cities of Edess and Alexandria, 129. Banishes Athanasius, 133. The philosophical fable of his Casars, delineated, 144. Meditates the conquest of Persia, 143. Popular discontents during his residence at Autoch, 146. Occasion of writing his Misopagan, 150. His march to the Emphrates, 154. He enters the Persian terrnories, 161 Invades Assyria, 169. His personal conduct in this emerprise, 174. His address to his discontented troops, 176 - His successful passage over the Tigris, 180 Burns his fleet, 183 His remeat and distress, 193. His death, 202. His functal, 223

Julian, count, offers to betray Spain into the hands of the Arabs, 1x, 167. His advice to the victorious Pirks, 175

Julian, the papal legate, exhorts Ladislaus, king of Hungary and Poland, to breach of faith with the Turks, xu. 1 et Bis doub and character, 165.

Julius, master-general of the troops in the Eastern empire, concerts a general massacre of the Gothic youth in Asia, iv. 410 Jurisprudence, Roman, a review of, vin. 1. Was polished by Greenan philosophy, 20. Abuses of, 129.

Justin the elder, his military promotion, vii. 31. His elevation to the empire, and character, 50. His death, 61.

Justin II, emperor, succeeds his uncle Justinian, vin. 11%. His firm heliaviour to the amhassadors of the Avars, 110. His abducation, and investiture of Tiberius, as his successor, 135

Justin Martyr, his decision in the case of the Florentes, it 250. His extravagant account of the progress of Christianty (3a9). Occassion of his own conversion, 372.

Justina, the popular story of her marrage varletne emperor Valentiman examined, iv. 354. Her infant son Valentiman II invested with the Imperial ensigns, on the death of his father, 336. Her contest with Ambrose archbishop of Milan, v. 40 Fires from the invasion of Maximus, with her son, 48

Justinian, emperor of the East, his borth and premotion, vii 54. His orthodoxy, 59. Is invested with the diadem by his uncic Justin, 00. Mairies Theodora, 70. Pationises the blue faction of the circus, 74. State of agriculture and manufacture in his provinces, 88. Introduces the culture of the silk-worm, and manufacture of alk, into Greece, 97. State of his revenue, 101. His avarice and profusion, 102. Taxes and menopolics, 105, 106. His ministers, 109. His public buildings, 113 Pounds the church of St. Sophia at Constantinople, 116. His other public works 122. His European fortifications, 125. His Asiatic fortifications, 133. He suppresses the schools of Athens, 113. And the consular dignity. 152 Purchases a peace from the Persians, 156, 307. Undertakes to restore Hilderic king of Carthage, 158. Reduction of Africa. 186. His instructions for the government of, 187. His acquisitions in Spain, 203. His deceitful negociations in Italy, 210. Weakness of his empire, 270. Receives an embassy from the Avars, 291. And from the Turks, 203, Persian war, 315. His negociations with Chosroes, 337. His alliance with the Abyssimans, 343. Neglects the Italian war under Belisarius, 362. Settles the government of Italy under the Exarch of Ravenna, 398. Disgrace and death of Belisarms, 107. His death and character, 409. Comets and calamities in his reign, 412. His Code, Pandects. and Institutes, viii. 1. His theological character and government, 317. His persecuting spirit, 320. His orthodoxy, 324. Died a heretic, 528.

Justinian II., emperor of Constantinople, ix. 17.

Justinian, the son of Germanus, his conspiracy, with the empress Sophia, and successes against the Persians, vin. 137, 138.

Jutenal, his remarks on the crowded state of the inhabitants of Rome, v. 288.

K

Khan, import of this title in the northern parts of Asia, iv. 353, v. 212.

King, the title of, conferred by Constantine the Great on his nephew Hannibalianus, iii, 11b.

Kindred, degrees of, according to the Roman civil law, vin. 75.

Knighthood, how originally conferred, and its obligations, xi, 57.

Koran of Mahomet, account and character of, ix. 207.

Koreish, the tribe of, acquire the custody of the Caaba at Mecca, 1x, 246. Pedigree of Mahomet, 253. They oppose his pretensions to a prophetical character, 286. Flight of Mahomet, 288. Battle of Beder 299. Battle of Ohud, 801. Mecca surrendered to Mahomet, 307.

L

Labarum, or standard of the cross, in the army of Constantine the Great, described, iii. 258.

Labeo, the civilian, his diligence in business and composition, vin.

25. His professional character, 50.

Lactantius, difficulties in ascertaining the date of his Divine Institutions, in. 238. note His flattering prediction of the influence of Christianity among mankind, 248. Inculcates the divine right of Constantine to the empire, 250.

Ladislaus, king of Hungary and Poland, leads an army against the Turks, xii. 157. His breach of faith with them, 158.

Ladislaus, king of Naples, harasses Rome during the schism of the papacy, xu. 372.

Lattus, prætorian præfect, conspires the death of Commodus, and confers the empire on Pertinax, i. 156, 157.

Latty, when first distinguished from the clergy, u. 310.

Lampadius, a Roman senator, holdly condomns the treaty with Alaiic the Goth, v. 258.

Lance, Holy, narrative of the miraculous discovery of, xi 73.

Land, how assessed by the Roman emperors, in 85. How divided by the Barbartans, vi 333. Allodial, and Salie, distinguished, 357. Of Italy, how partitioned by Theodoric the Ostrogoth, vii 17.

Landucea, its ancient splendour, i an.

Lascaris, Theodore, establishes an empire at Nice, vi. 253. His character, 308.

Luscaris, Theo lore II. his character, x1 -12.

Lascaris, Janus, the Greek grammarian, his character, xii 130.

Latin church, occasion of its separation from the Greek church, vi. 169 Corruption and schism of, xii, 92 Re-union of, with the Greek church, 111. The subsequent Greek schism, 135

Latium, the right of, explained, (58

Laura, in monkish history, explained, vi. 233.

Law, review of the profession of, under the emperors, in 53

Laws of Rome, review of, viii, 1. Those of the kings, 4. Of the twelve tables, 6. Of the people, 11. Decrets of the senate, and edicts of the practors, 13. Constitutions of the emperors, 10. Their rescripts, 19. The three codes of, 29. The forms of, ibid. Succession of civil I wyers, 23. Reformation of, by Justiman, 33. Abolition and revival of the penal laws, 94.

Lazz, the terbe of, in Colchos, account of, vii. 327.

Le Care, character of his ecclesiastical history, viii 200 note.

Legaetes and inheritances taxed by Augustus, 1, 265 How regulated by the Roman law, viii, 79.

Legion, in the Roman army under the emperors, described, i. 19 General distribution of the legions, 27. The size of, reduced by Constanting the Great, in. 62.

Leo of Thrace is made empetor of the East, by his master Aspar, vi. 1/4. Was the first Christian potentiate who was crowned by a priest, 192. Confers the empire of the West on Anthemus, 195. The armament against the Vandals in Africa, 199. Murders Aspar and his sons, vii. 4.

Leo III, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 2) His edicts against images in churches, 124. Revolt of Irdy, 138.

Let IV., emperor of Constantinople ax. 2).

Leo V. emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 17.

Leo VI., the philosopher, emperor of Constantinople 1x, 15. Extinguishes the power of the senate x 131

Lea, biskop of Rome, his character and embassy from Valentinian III to Attila king of the Hous, vi. 151. Intercedes with Genseric king of the Vandals for element v. to the city of Rome, 151. Utils the council of Chalcedon, vii. 503

Let III., pope, his miraculous recovery from the assault of assausins, ix. 172. Crowns Charlemagns emperor of the Romans, 173.

Leo IV., pope, his reign, x, 64. Founds the Leonine city, 66.

Leo IX., pope, his expedition against the Normans of Apulia, x. 207. His treaty with them, 270.

Leo, archbishop of Thessalonica, one of the restorers of Greek learning, x. 157.

Leo, general of the Eass, under the emperor Arcadius, his character, v. 388.

Leo Pilatus, first Greek professor at Florence, and in the West, his character, xii. 124, Leo, the Jew proselyte, history of his family, xii. 315.

Leonas, the questor, his embassy from Constantius to Julian, iv. 21.
Leonine city at Rome founded, x, 66.

Leontrus is taken from pisson, and chosen emperor of Constantinople, on the deposition of Justinian II., ix, 18.

Leorigild, Gothic king of Spain, his character, vi. 296. Revolt and death of his son Hermenegild, 298.

Letters, a knowledge of, the test of civilization in a people, 1. 352.

Lea is the Pious, emperor of the Romans, 1x. 188.

Lens II., emperor of the Romans, ix. 189. His epistle to the Greek emperor, Basil I., x. 248.

Libanius, his account of the private life of the emperor Julian, iv. 38. And of his divine visions, 77. Applauds the dissimulation of Julian, 70, 80. His character, 151. His eulogium on the emperor Valens, 411.

Liberius, bishop of Rome, is banished by the emperor Constantius, for refusing to concur in deposing Athanasius, ii. 375, 370.

Liberty, public, the only sure guardians of, against an aspiring prince, Lucanus is invested with the purple by the emperor Galerius, ii. 208. His alliance with Constantine the Great, 237. Defeats Maximin, 238. His cruelty, 239. Is defeated by Constantine at Cibalis, 246. And at Mardia, 247. Peace concluded with Constantine, 249. Second civil war with Constantine, 255. His humiliation, and death, 263.

lishing the edict of Milan, 214. Violated this engagement by oppressing the Christians, 252. Carchiu's account of his vision, 261.

Lieutenant, Imperial, his office and rank, i. 101.

Lightning, superstition of the Romans with reference to persons and places struck with, ii. 97.

Limigantes, Sarmatian slaves, expeltheir masters, and usur p possession of their country, iii. 126. Extinction of, by Constantius, 198.

Leterature, revival of, in Italy, xii, 119. Ancient, use and abuse of, 138.

Lathuania, its late conversion to Christianity, x. 243.

Luorius, count, is defeated and taken captive in Gaul by Theodoric, vi. 96.

Liutprand, king of the Lombards, attacks the city of Rome, ix.

Liutprand, bishop of Cremona, ambassador to Constantinople, ceremony of his audience with the emperor, x, 125.

Logos, Plato's doctrine of, in, 515. Is expounded by St. John the Evangelist, 318. Athanasius confesses himself unable to comprehend it, 322. Controversies on the eternity of, 328.

Logothete, Great, his office under the Greek emperors, v. 122.

Lombardy, ancient, described, i. 33. Conquest of, by Charlemagne, ıx. 150.

Lumbards, derivation of their name, and review of their history. va. 274. Are employed by the emperor Justinian to check the Gepidae, 276. Actions of their king Alboin, vin. 117. They reduce the Gepide, 121. They over-tun that part of Italy now called Lombardy, 126. Extent of their kingdom, 117. Language and manners of the Lombards, 148. Government and laws, 153, Longinus, his representation of the degeneracy of his age, 1,94. Is put to death by Aurelian, ii. 43.

- is sent to supersede Naises, as exarch of Ravenna, viii. 1.25 Receives Rosamond, the fuguive queen of the Lombards, 132

Lothuire L. emperor of the Romans, ix (8).

Louis VII, of France is rescued from the treachery of the Greeks by Roger, king of Sicily, x. 316. Undertakes the second crusade, xi. 105. His disastrons expedition, 113.

Louis IX, of France, his crusades to the Holy Land, xt 158. His Procured a valuable stock of relics from Constitutideath, 165 nople, 278.

Lucian, the severity of his satire against the heathen mythology, accounced for, i. 19.

Lucian, count of the East, under the emperor Arcadius, his cruel treatment by the præfect Runnus, v. 146, Lucian, presbyter of Jerusalem, his miraculous discovery of the body of St. Stephen, the first Christian martyr, v. 128

Lucdina, governor of Illyricum, is surprised, and kindly treated by Juli m, iv. 28. His death, 232

Lucilla, sister of the emperor Commodus, her attempt to get him assassinated, 1, 140, 141.

Lucius II, and III., popes, their disastrous reigns, xii. 269

Lucrine lake described, with its late destruction, v. 270, 271 note. Lucullar villa in Campania, its description and history, vi 223

Lupercalia, the feast of, described, and continued under the Christian emperors, vi. 197.

Lupicinus, the Roman governor of Thrace oppresses the Gothic emigrants there, iv 385 Rashly provokes them to ho tilities, 580 Is defeated by them, 390.

Lustral contribution in the Roman empire, explained, in. 94.

Luther, Martin, his character, as a reformer, x. 189.

Luxury, the only means of correcting the unequal distribution of property, 1 57.

Lygians, a formidable German nation, account of. ii. 78.

Lyons, battle of, between the competitors Severus and Albinus, i.
102.

М

Macedonius, the Arian bishop of Constantinople, his contests with his competitor Paul, in. 393. Fatal consequences on his removing the body of the emperor Constantine to the church of St.Acacus, 395. His cruel persecutions of the Catholics and Novatians, 397. His exile, vii. 316.

Macrianus, practorian praefect under the emperor Valerian, his character, i. 436.

Macrianus, a prince of the Alemanni, his steady alliance with the emperor Valentinian, iv. 286.

Macrinus, his succession to the empire predicted by an African. 1. 222. Accelerates the completion of the prophecy, ibid. Purchases a peace with Parthia, 332.

Madayn, the capital of Persia, sacked by the Saracens, ix. 308.

Maonius of Palmyra assassinates his uncle Odenathus, ii. 35.

Massa, its situation, i 37.

Maga, the worship of, in Persia, reformed by Artaxerves, i. 318. Abridgment of the Persian theology, 320. Simplicity of their worship, 322. Ceremonies and moral precepts, 323. Their power, 325.

Magic, severe prosecution of persons for the crime of, at Rome and Antioch, iv. 252.

Magnentius assumes the empire in Gaul, iii, 148. Death of Constant, 149. Sends an embassy to Constantius, 151. Makes war against Constantius, 157. Is defeated at the battle of Mursa, 159. Kills himself, 160.

Muhmud, the Gaznevide, his twelve expeditions into Hindostan, x. 335. His character, 338.

Mahomet, the Prophet, his embassy to Chosroes II. king of Persia, viii. 226.

Mahomet 11., sultan of the Turks, his character, xii 182. His reign. 185. Indications of his hostile intentions against the Greeks, 1-7. He besieges Constantinople, 200. Takes the city by storm, 2°2 His entry into the city, 239. Makes it his capital, 243. His death, 254.

Mahometism, by what means propagated, ix, 481. Toleration or Christianity under, 388.

Majorium, his history, character, and elevation to the Western empire, vi. 167. His epistle to the senate, 169. His salwar, laws, 171. His preparations to invade Africa, 177. The fleet destroyed by Genseric, 181. His death, 185.

Malaterra, his character of the Normans, v. 201.

Malek Shah, Sultan of the Turks, his prosperous reign, x 567. Reforms the Eastern calendar, 300. He death, 307

Mallius Theodorus, the great civil honours to which he attained, in. 54. note.

Manualukes, then origin and character, xi. 102. Their establishment in Egypt, 161.

Mamaa, mother of the young emperor Alexander Severus, acts as regent of the empire, v. 241. Is put to death with him, 277 Her conference with Origon, it 419.

Mango, an Armenian noble, his history, n. 141

Man, the only animal that can accommodate himself to all climates, 1. 349. note.

Mancipium, in the Roman law, explained, vin. 72.

Manichanus are devoted to death, by the edict of Theodosius against herence, v 35.

Manuel Commenus, emperor of Constantinople, 1x 58. He repulses the Normans, x. 317. But tails in his scheme of subdoing the Western empire, 321. His ill-treatment of the crusadors, xt. 109.

Maogamalcha, a city of Assyria, reduced and destroyed by the emperor Julian, iv. 171.

Harbe, the four species of, most esteemed by the Romois, (28%

Marcellinus, count of the sacred largesses under the emperor Const us in Gaul, assists the usurpation of Magnenius in, 148. His embassy to Constantius, 151. Was killed in the battle of Mursa, 406, Marcellinus, his revolt in Dalmatia, and character, vi. 185 . Joins the emperor Anthemus, and expels the Vandals from Sardinia, 200. His death, 205.

Murcellinus, son of the prafect Maximu, his treacherous murder of Gabinus king of the Quadi, iv. 329

Marcellus, the centurion, martyred for desertion, it 464

Marcellus, hishop of Rome, exiled to restore peace to the city, ii. 181. Marcellus, bishop of Apamea in Syria, loses his life in destroying the Pagan temples, v. 106, 107.

Marcia, the concubine of the emperor Commodus, a patrone .. of the Christians, in 440.

Marcian, senator of Constantinople, marries the empress Pulcheria, and is acknowledged emperor, vi. 85. His temperate refusal of the demands of Attila the Hun, 87.

Marcianapolis, the city of, taken by the Goths, i. 398.

Marcomanni are subdued and punished by Marcus Antoninus, i. 381. Alliance made with, by the emperor Gallienus, 420.

Marcus elected hishop of the Nazarenes, ii. 279.

Mardia, battle of, between Constantine the Great and Licinius, ii. 247.

Margus, battle of, between Diocletian and Carinus, ii. 110.

Margus, bishop of, betrays his episcopal city into the hands of the Huns, vi. 51.

Maria, daughter of Eudamon of Carthage, her remarkable adventures, vi. 31.

Mariana, his account of the misfortunes of Spain, by an irruption of the barbarous nations, v. 352.

Macraus, a subaltern officer, chosen emperor by the legions of Macra, i. 985.

Marius the armourer, a candidate for the purple among the competitors against Gallienus, his character, i. 446.

Mark, bishop of Arethusa, is cruelly treated by the emperor Julian, 1v. 116.

Manonga, engagement there between the emperor Julian and Saporking of Persia, iv. 194.

Maronites of the East, character and history of, viii. 354.

Marozia, a Roman prostitute, the mother, grandmother, and greatgrandmother, of three popes, ix. 198.

Marriage, regulations of, by the Roman laws, viii, 57. Of Roman critizens with strangers, proscribed by their jurisprudence, v. 129.

Martel, Charles, duke of the Franks, his character, x. 23. His pointer conduct on the Saracen invasion of France, 21, 25. Defeats the Saracens, 26. Why he was consigned over to hell flames by the clergy, 27.

Martin, bishop of Tours, destroys the idols and Pagan temples in Gaul, v. 100. His monkish institutions there, vi. 245.

Martina marries her uncle, the emperor Heraelius, 1x. 9. Endeayours to share the Imperial dignity with her sons, 10. Her fate, 12. Martinianus receives the title of Cæsar from the emperor Licinius, ii, 261.

Martyrs, primitive, an inquiry into the true history of, ii. 381. The several inducements to martyrdom, 435. Three methods of escaping it, 440. Marks by which learned Catholics distinguish the relics of the martyrs, 427. note. The worship of, and their relics, introduced, v. 123

Mary, Virgin, her immaculate conception, borrowed from the Koran, ix. 200.

Mascazel, the persecuted brother of Gildo the Moor, takes refuge in the Imperial court of Honorius, v. 106. Is intrusted with troops to reduce Gildo, 107. Defeats him, 170. His suspicious death, 172.

Master of the offices, under Constantine the Great, his functions, in 50.

Materinis, his revolt and conspiracy against the emperor Commodus.

1. 144.

Matthew, St., his gospel originally composed in Hebrew, n. 357, note, vni, 263, note.

Maurice, his birth, character, and promotion to the Eastern empire, vin. 140. Restores Chostoes II. king of Persia, 189. His war against the Avais, 200. State of his armies, 200. His abdication and death, 209, 210.

Maur.tania, ancient, its situation and extent, i. 41 Character of the native Moois of, vi. 15.

Maxentius, the son of Maximian, declared emperor at Rome, it 2001. His tyranny in Italy and Africa, 216. The imbiary force he had to oppose Constantine, 221. His defeat and death, 232. His politic humanity to the Christians, 481.

Maximum, associate in the empire with Diocletian, his character, in. 115. Triumphs with Diocletian, 156. Holds his court at Milan, 158. Abdicates the empire along with Diocletian, 171. He resumes the purple, 200. Reduces Severus, and puts him to death, 202. His second resignation, and unfortunate end, 210. 212. His aversion to the Christians accounted for, 405.

Maximilianus, the African, a Christian martyr, n. 401

Maximin, his birth, fortune, and elevation to the empire of Rome, i. 273. Why deemed a persecutor of the Christians, 4 %.

Maximin is declared Casar, on the abhication of Diocletian, ii. 189.

Obtains the rank of Augustus from Galerius, 208. His deleat and death, 298, 239. Renewed the persecution of the Christians after the toleration granted by Galerius, 487.

Maximin, the cruel minister of the emperor Valentinian, promoted to the pra-fecture of Gaul, iv. 258.

Maximon, his embassy from Theodosius the Younger, to Attla king of the Huns, vi. 08.

Maximus and Balbinus elected joint emperors by the senate, on the deaths of the two Gordians, 1, 290.

Maximus, his character and revolt in Britain, v. 8. His treaty with the emperor Theodosius, 12. Persecutes the Priscillianists, 34. His invasion of Italy, 47. His defeat and death, 52.

Maximus, the Pagan preceptor of the emperor Julian, initiates him into the Eleusman mysteries, iv. 70. Is honourably invited to Constantinople by his Imperial pupil, 62. Is corrupted by his residence at court, 93.

Maximus, Petronius, his wife ravished by Valentinian III., emperor of the West, vi. 140. His character and elevation to the empire, Mebodes, the Persian general, ungratefully treated by Chosroes,

Mecca, its situation and description, ix 227. The Caaba or temple of, 245. Its deliverance from Abrahab, 254. The docume of Mahomet opposed there, 286. His escape, 288. The city

- of, surrendered to Mahomet, 307. Is pillaged by Abu Tahei, x. 77.
- Medma, reception of Mahomet there, on his flight from Mecca, ix. 200.
- Megalesia, the festival of, at Rome, described, i. 145, note.
- Meletians, an Egyptian sect, persecuted by Athanasius, iii. 360,
- Melitem, battle of, between the Eastern emperor Tiberius and Chosioes king of Persia, viii. 176.
- Melo, citizen of Barr, invites the Normans into Italy, x. 258.
- Memphis, its situation and reduction by the Saracens, ix. 429.
- Meroringian kings of the Franks in Gaul, origin of, vi. 98. . Then domain and benefices, 350.
- Mercan, caliph of the Saracens, and the last of the house of Omning ah, his defeat and death, x, 31, 32.
- Mesopotamia, invasion of, by the emperor Julian, iv. 162. Described by Xenophon, 103, 164.
- Messala, Valerius, the first præfect of Rome, his high character, iii. 46. note.
- Messiah, under what character he was expected by the Jews, in 275. His birth-day, how fixed by the Romans, iv. 22. note.
- Metals and money, their operation in improving the human mind, 1, 350.
- Metellus Numidicus, the censor, his invective against women, i. 241.
- Metus Falconus, his artful speech to the emperor Tacitus in the senate on his election, n. 61
- Metrophanes of Cyzicus, is made patriarch of Constantinople, xii. 147
- Metz, cruel treatment of, by Attila king of the Huns, vi. 108.
- Michael I., Rhangabe, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 35.
- Michael II, the Stammerer, emperor of Constantinople, 1x, 40.
- Muchael III., emperor of Constantinople, ix. 45. Is defeated by the Panherans, x, 179.
- Michael IV., the Paphlagonian, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 71.
- Michael V., Calaphates, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 72.
- Michael VI., Stratioticus, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 73.
- Michael VII., Parapinaces, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 78.
- Milan, how the Imperial court of the Western empire came to be transferred from Rome to that city, ii. 158.
- -----, tamous educt of Constantine the Great in favour of the Chilstians, published there, in. 244.
- , St. Ambrose elected archbishop of that city, v. 37. Tumults occasioned by his refusing a church for the Arian worship of the empress Justina and her son, 40.
- ----, revolt of, to Justiman, vii. 242, 243. Is taken and destroyed by the Burgundians, 250.
- ----, is again destroyed by Frederic I., ix. 207.
- Military force, its strength and efficacy dependant on a due proportion to the number of the people, 1, 167.

Military officers of the Roman empire at the time of Constantine the Great, a review of, m of Millennium, the doctrine of, explained, n. 301.

Mingrelia, See Colches.

Minority, two distinctions of, in the Roman law, v. 151 note

Miracles, those of Christ and his apostles, escaped the notice of the heather philosophers and historians, it. 378, 379. Account of those wrought by the body of St. Stephen, v. 129

Minuculous powers of the primitive church, an inquiry into, ii 309 Misitheus, chief minister and father-in-law of the third Gordian, his character, i. 307.

Misopogon of the emperor Julian, on what occasion written, is 150, Missorium, or great golden dish of Adolphus king of the Visigoths, history of, v. 336.

Moawiyah, assumes the title of caliph, and make war against Ali, ix, 398. His character and reign, 941. Lays siege to Constantinople, x. 3.

Modar, prince of the Amali, seduced by the emperor Theodesius, turns his arms against his own country men, iv. 132

Moguls, primitive, then method of treating their completed commes, vi. 54. Reign and conquests of Zingis, xi. 102. Conquests of his successors, 413. Sec Tamerlane

Moguntiacum, the city of, surprised by the Alemanni, iv 281

Mokawkas the Egyptian, his treaty with the Saraccii Amiton, ix. ix. 432.

Monarchy defined, i. 95. Hereditary, ridiculous in theory, but salutary in fact, 270. The peculiar effects of cruelty and of avained under, 111. 82.

Monastic institutions, the seeds of, sown by the primitive Christians, 11. 325. Origin, progress, and consequences of, vi 2%s.

Money, the standard and computation of, under Constantine the Great, and his successors, in, 89, note Monks have embellished the sufferings of the primative marty is by fictions, ii. 423.

---, character of, by Emapius, v. 123, 1.4 By Rutdius, 168. Origin and history of, vi. 239. Then industry in making proselytes, 248. Their obedience, 250. Then dress and habitations. Then diet, 254. Then manual labour, 2 to. Then riches, 258. Then solitude, 260. Then devotion and visions, 261. Their division into the classes of Canobites and Anachorets, 263

-, suppression of, at Constantinople, by Constantine V., ix. 180, Monophysites of the East, history of the sect of, vin. 350.

Monothelite controversy, account of, vin. 330 Montesquieu, his description of the military government of the Roman empire, i. 310. His opinion that the degrees of freedom in a state are measured by taxation, controverted, in, 82

Montius, quæstor of the palace, is sent by the emperor Constantius, with Domitian, to correct the administration of Gallus in the East, in. 176. Is put to death there, 177.

Moors of Barbary, their miserable poverty, vii. 190. Their invasion of the Roman province punished by Solomon the Eunich, 203.

Morea is reduced by the Turks, xii. 248.

Morosmi, Thomas, elected patriarch of Constantinople by the Venetians, M. 246.

Moscilana, an Arabian chief, endeavours to rival Mahomet in his prophetical character, ix. 356.

Moses, the doctime of the immortality of the soul not inculcated inhis law, ii. 2 iii. His sanguinary laws compared with those of Mahomet, ix. 2 is.

Mosheim, character of his work De rebus Christianis ante Constantinum, viii. 200. note.

Moslemah, the Saracen, besieges Constantinople, x. 10.

Motassen, the last caliph of the Saracens, his wars with the Greek emperor Theophilus, x. 67. Is killed by the Moguls, xi. 418.

Mourzoutle, usups the Greek empire, and destroys Isaac Angelus, and his son Alexius, xi. 225. Is driven from Constantinople by the Latins, 230. His death, 252.

Mousa, the son of Bajazet, invested with the kingdom of Anatolia, by Tameriane, xii. 31. His reign, 49.

Mozarabes, in the history of Spain, explained, ix. 497.

Municipal cities, their advantages, 1, 58.

Muratori, his literary character, xii. 394, note.

Mursa, battle of, between the emperor Constantius, and the usurper Magnentius, in. 159.

Musa the Saracen, his conquest of Spain, ix. 478. His disgrace, 483. His death, 486.

Mustapha, the supposed son of Bajazet, his story, xii. 47.

Muta, buttle of, between the forces of the emperor Heraclius and those of Mahomet, ix. 313.

Mygdonius, river, the course of, stopped by Sapor king of Persia, at the siege of Nisibis, iii. 144.

N

Narbonne is besieged by Theodoric, and relieved by count Litorius, vi. 95.

Nacoragan, the Persian general, his defeat by the Romans, and cruel fate, vii. 335.

Naissus, battle of, between the emperor Claudius and the Goths, m, 12

Naples is besieged and taken by Belisarius, vii. 218 Extent of the duchy of under the Exarchs of Ravenna, viii. 146.

Narses, his embassy from Sapor king of Persia to the emperor Constantius, in. 201.

Naises, king of Persia, prevails over the pretensions of his brother Hormuz, and expels Tiridates king of Armenia, ii. 243. "Overthrows Galerius, 144. Is surprised and routed by Galerius, 147. Articles of peace between him and the Romans, 153.

Narses, the Persian general of the emperor Maurice, restores Chosroes II, king of Persia, vin. 189. His revolt against Phocas, and cruel de uh. 219.

Noves, the Eunneh, his military promotion, and dissention with Behsarius, vii 247. His character and expedition to hady, 301. Battle of Tagina, 385. Takes Rome, 385. Reduces and kills Tetas, the last king of the Goths, 391. Deteats the Franks and Alemann, 395. Governs Italy in the capacity of Exarch, 398. His disgrace, and death, viii. 124.

Naulobatus, a chief of the Heruli, enters into the Roman service, and is made consul, i. 431.

Na: y of the Roman empire described, 1 28

Nazarene church at Jerusalem, account of, n. 277.

Nazarius, the Pagan orator, his account of min ordina appearances in the sky in favour of Constantine the Great, in 201

Nebralius, pra torian praefect in Gaul, is manned and soperseded, by his industrict opposition to the troops of Julian, iv. 24

Negrors of Africa, evidences of then intellectual interiority to the rest of mankind, iv. 311.

Necturius is chosen archbishop of Constantinople, v. 30.

Acannus, his account of the arrival of the Saxons in Britain, different from that of Gildas, Bede, and Wittkind, vi. 381, note.

Nepos, Julius, is made emperor of the West by Leo the Great, vi. 219.

Nepotran, account of his revolt in haly, in, 162

Nerv persecutes the Christians as the incendiaries of Rome, ii 405 Nerva, emperor, his character, and prudent adoption of Trajur, i 120

Nestorius, archbishop of Constantinople, his character, vin. 283. His heresy concerning the incarnation, 215. His dispute with Cvill of Alexandria, 286. Is condemned, and degraded from his epistopal dignity, by the council of Ephesis, 291. Is evided, 247. His death, 290. His opinions still retained in Persia, 339. Missions of his disciples in the East Indies, 343.

Nevers, John, count of, disastrous fate of him and his party at the battle of Nicopolis, at. 451.

Nue becomes the capital residence of sultan Soliman, x 573 Siego of, by the first crusaders, xi. 57.

Nucephorus I., emperor of Constantinople, ix 35. His wars with the Saracens, x, 54. His death, 200.

Nicephorus II., Phocas, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 62. His military enterprises, x. 80.

Nicephorus III., Botoniates, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 80 Was raised to the throne by sultan Soliman, x. 371.

Necetas, senator of Constantinoph, his flight, on the capture of the city by the Latins, xi. 235. His brief history, 236. note. His account of the statues destroyed at Constantinophe. 238

 Nicholas, patriarch of Constantinople, opposes the fourth marriage of the emperor Leo the philosopher, 18, 57.

Nicholas V., pope, his character, xii. 134. How interested in the fall of Constantinople, 200.

Nicomedia, the court of Diocletian held there, and the city embellished by him, it. 159. The church of, demolished by Diocletian, 467. His palace fired, 472.

Nicopolis, battle of, between sultan Bajazet, and Sigismond king of Hungary, xi. 450.

Nika, the sedition of, at Constantinople, vii. 84.

Ninevel, battle of, between the emperor Heraclius, and the Persians, vin. 248.

Nisibis, the city of, described, and its obstinate defence against the Persians, iii. 142. Is yielded to Sapor by treaty, iv. 211.

Nizam, the Persian vizit, his illustrious character, and unhappy fate, x. 307.

Noah, his ark very convenient for resolving the difficulties of Mosaic antiquarians, 1, 350.

Nobilissimus. a title invented by Constantine the Great to distinguish his nephew Hanmbalianus, iii. 110.

Norwam described, i. 50.

Normans, their settlement in the province of Normandy in France, x. 257 Their introduction to Italy, 258. They serve in Siedy, 261. They conquer Apulia, 202. Their character, 264. Their treaty with the pone, 269.

Notations are exempted by Constantine the Great, in a particular cdict, from the general penalties of heresy, in, 308. Are cruelly persecuted by Macedonius bishop of Constantinople, 397.

No. els of Justinian, how formed, and their character, vin. 46.

Noureddin, sultan, his exalted character, xi. 122.

Nubia, conversion of, to Christianity, vin. 368.

Numerian, the son of Carus, succeeds his father in the empire, in conjunction with his brother Carinus, in 97.

Numidia, its extent at different aras of the Roman history, 1 41.

0

Oasis, in the deserts of Lybia, described, v. 382. note. Three places under this name pointed out, vin. 298. note.

Obedience, passive, theory and practice of the Christian doctrine of, ni. 248.

Obelisks, Egyptian, the purpose of their erection, in, 194.

Oblations to the church, origin of, ii. 341.

Obligations, human, the sources of, viii. 82. Laws of the Romans respecting, 83.

Odenathus, the Palmyrene, his successful opposition to Sapor king of Persia, i. 440. Is associated in the empire by Gallienas, 449. Character and fate of his queen Zenobia, ii. 32.

Odin, the long reign of his family in Sweden, i. 302. note." His history, 390.

Odoncer the first Barbarian king of Italy, vi. 224. His character and reign, 252. Resigns all the Roman conquests beyond the Alps to Euric king of the Visigoths, 308. Is reduced and killed by Theodoric the Ostrogoth, vii. 13.

Ohnd, battle of, between Mahomet and Abu Sophian prince of Mecca, 13, 301.

Olga, princess of Russia, her baptism, x. 239.

Olive, its introduction into the Western world, i. 80.

Olybraus is raised to the Western empire by count Ricimer vi. 215

Olympic games compared with the formaments of the Goths Xt. 39. Olympicolorus, his account of the magnificence of the city of Rome, v. 202. His account of the marriage of Adolphus king of the Visigoths with the princess Placidia, 334.

Olympius, favourite of the emperor Honorius, alaims hen with unfavourable suspicious of the designs of Stilicho, v. 250. Causes Stilicho to be put to death, 242. His disgrace, and ignoriumous death, 249.

Omar, caliph of the Saracens, ix. 332. His character, 359. His pourney to Jerusalem, 412.

Omnigati, elevation of the house of, to the office of caliph of the Saraceus, ix. 541. Why not the objects of public favour, x 28 Destruction of, 51.

Oracles, Heathen, are silenced by Constantine the Great, in 406 Orchan, cour of the Ortomans, his reign, xi 454. Marries the daughter of the Greek emperor Cantacuzene, 410 Ordination of the clergy in the early ages of the church, an account of, nr. 257.

Orestes is sent ambassador from Arila king of the Hons, to the emperor Theodosius the Younger, vi. 68. His history, and promotion under the Western emperors, 221. His son Augustulus, the last emperor of the West, 222.

Orester, practor of Egypt, is insulted by a monkish mob in Alexandina, vin. 280.

Origen declares the number of primitive martyrs to be very inconsiderable, it. 427. His conference with the curpress Mannia it. 449. His memory persecuted by the emperor Justinian and his clergy, viii. 325.

Orleans besteged by Attila king of the Huns, and ich ved by Final and Theodoric, vi. 108.

Osius, bishop of Cordova, his great influence with Constituting the Great, in: 208. Prevails on Constantine to ratify the Nicene Creed, 347. Is with difficulty prevailed on to concur in deposing Athanasius, 376.

Osthorne, the small kingdom of, reduced by the Romans, 1, 334.

Osthorne, the small kingdom of, reduced by the Romans, 1, 334.

Osthorn, his poems, whether to be connected with the invasion of Caledoma by the emperor Severus, 1, 209. Is said to have disputed with a Christian missionary, 11, 370 note.

Ostia, the port of, described, v. 303.

Othman, ealiph of the Sarceus, 18, 333

VOL. XIL

Othman, the father of the Ottomans, his reign, xi. 432.

Otho I., king of Germany, restores and appropriates the Western empire, ix. 190. Claims by treaty the nomination of the pope of Rome, 196. Defeats the Turks, x. 216.

Otho II. deposes pope John XII. and chastises his party at Rome, ix 202.

Otho, bishop of Frisingen, his character as an historian, xii. 290. note.

Ottomans, origin and history of, xi. 431. They obtain an establishment in Europe, 443.

Orid is banished to the banks of the Danube, iii. 121. Oxyrinchus, in Egypt, monkish piety of that city, vi. 243.

Ł

Pucatus, his encomium on the emperor Theodosius the Great, v. 58. Paderasty, how punished by the Scatmian law, viii, 100. By Justinian, 102.

Pagan, derivation and revolutions of the term, ni. 410, note.

Paganism, the ruin of, suspended by the divisions among the Christians, iii. $10. Theological system of the emperor Julian, iv. 72——, general review of the ecclesiastical establishment and jurisdiction of, before it was subverted by Christianity, v. 92. Is renounced by the Roman senate, 100. The pagan sacrifices prohibited, 103. The temples demolished, 105. The ruin of, deplored by the sophists, 123. Pagan ceremonies revived in Christian chuiches, 133.

Pulvologus, Constantine, Greek emperor, his reign, xii. 175. Is killed in the storm of Constantinople by the Turks, 230.

Palwologus, John, emperor of Constantinople, xi. 372. Mairies the daughter of John Cantacuzene, 382. Takes up arms against Cantacuzene, and is reduced to flight, 385. His restoration, 386. Discord between him and his sons, 454. His treaty with pope Innocent VI., xii. 72. His visit to pope Urban V, at Rome, 74.

Pateologus, John II, Greek emperor, his zeal, xii. 90. His voyage to Italy, 95.

Palaologus, Manuel, associated with his father John, in the Greek empire, xi. 454. Tribute exacted from him by sultan Bajazet, 457. His treates with Soliman and Mahomet, the sons of Bajazet VI., xii. 54. His visits to the courts of Europe, 77. Private motives of his European negotiations explained, 88. His death, 89.

Palwologus, Michael, emperor of Nice, his brief replies to the negotiations of Baldwin II., emperor of Constantinople, xi. 283. His family and character, 315. His elevation to the throne, 318. His return to Constantinople, 324. Blinds and banisnes his young associate, John Lascaris, 325. He is excommunicated by the patriarch Arsenus, 327. Associates his son Andronicus in the curpire, 330. His union with the Latin church, $31. Instigites the revolt of Sicily, 342.

Pulatines and Porderers, origin and nature of these distinctions in the Roman troops, 111. 60.

Pulermo taken by Belisarius by stratagem, vir. 212.

Palestine, a character of, 1, 39.

Palladium of Rome, described, v. 93. note.

Paliadius, the notary, sent by Valentinian to Africa to inquire into the government of count Romanus, connives with him in oppressing the province, iv. 302.

Palmyra, description of, and its destruction by the emperor Aurelian, 11. 39.

Panettus was the first teacher of the Stoic philosophy at Rome, vin. 24. note.

Pandects of Justinian, how formed, vin. 37.

Panhypersebastos, import of that title in the Greek empire, x. 120.

Pannonia, described, 1, 36.

Puntheon at Rome, by whom erected, i. 71. note. Is converted into a Christian church, v. 107.

Pantomimes, Roman, described. v. 285

Paper, where and when the manufacture of, was first found out. ix. 379.

Papinian, the celebrated lawyer, created Protonan project, by the emperor Severus, r. 201. His death, 217.

Papirius, Caius, reasons for concluding that he could not be the author of the Jus Papirianum, vin. o. note.

Papists, proportion their number bore to that of the Protestims in England, at the beginning of the last continy, in, 273, note Para, Ling of Armenia, his history, iv. 316. Is treacherously killed by the Romans, 319.

Parabolani of Alexandria, account of, vin. 278, note,

Paradise, Mahomet's, described, ix. 282.

Paris, description of that city, under the government of Infian in. 235. Situation of his palace, iv. 10. nove.

Parthia, subdued by Artaxerxes king of Persia, 1, 32 stitution of government similar to the feudal system of Purope, ibid. Recapitulation of the war with Rome, 331

Paschal II., pope, his troublesome pontificate, xii. 207.

Pastoral manners, much better adapted to the fierceness of war, than to peaceful innocence, iv. 342.

Paternal authority, extent of, by the Roman laws, visi, 51. Succes-Patras, extraordinary deliverance of, from the Sclavonians and sive limitations of, 55.

Patricians, the order of, under the Roman republic, and under the emperors, compared, m. 39. Under the Greek empire, their Datrick, the tytelar saint of Ireland, derivation of his name, vi. 229. rank explained, ix. 153. note.

Paria, massacre of the friends of Stilicho there, by the instigations of Olympius, v. 240. Is taken by Albom King of the Lombards, who fixes his residence there, vio. 128.

Paul of Samosata, bishop of Antioch, his character and history, 11, 454.

Paul, archbishop of Constantinople, his fatal contest with his competitor Macedonius, iii. 393.

Paula, a Roman widow, her illustrious descent, v. 257. Was owner of the city of Nicopolis, 263. Her monastic zeal, vi. 248.

Paulicians, origin and character of, x. 108. Are persecuted by the Greek emperors, 175. They revolt, 177. They are reduced, and transplanted to Thrace, 181. Their present state, 184.

Paulina, wife of the tyrant Maximin, softens his ferocity by gentle counsels, 1, 280, note.

Paulinus, master of the offices to Theodosus the Younger, his crime, and execution, v. 424.

Paulinus, bishop of Nola, his history, v. 320.

Paulinus, patriarch of Aquileia, flies from the Lombards with his treasure, into the island of Grado, viii. 127.

Pegasians, the party of, among the Roman civilians, explained, vin. 32.

Pekin, the city of, taken by Zingis the Mogul emperor, xi. 109.
Pelagian controversy agitated by the Latin clergy, v. 220. And in Britain, 369.

Pella, the church of the Nazarenes settled there, on the destruction of Jerusalem, ii. 278.

Peloponnesus, state of, under the Greek empire, x. 105. Manufactures, 181.

Penul laws of Rome, the abolition and revival of, viii. 94.

Pendragon, his office and power in Britain, v. 309.

Penitentials, of the Greek and Latin churches, history of, xi. 16.

Pepin, king of France, assists the pope of Rome against the Lombards, ix. 148. Receives the title of king by papal sanction, 152. Grants the exarchate to the pope, 156.

Pepin, John, count of Minorbino, reduces the tribune Rienzi, and testores aristocracy and church government at Rome, xii. 355.

Pepper, its high estimation and price at Rome, v. 295, note.

Perennis, minister of the emperor Commodus, his great exaliation and downfal, 143.

Perisabor, a city of Assyria, reduced and burned by the emperor Julian, iv. 170.

Perozes, king of Persia, his fatal expedition against the Nepthalites, vii. 186.

Persecutions, ten, of the primitive Christians, a review of, if, 443. Perseus, amount of the treasures taken from that prince, i. 250.

Persia, the monarchy of, restored by Artaxerxes, i. 318. The ichgion of the Magi reformed, ibid. Abridgment of the Persian theology, 320. Simplicity of their worship, 322. Ceremonics and moral precepts, $25. Every other mode of worship pohibited but that of Zoroaster, 328. Extent and population of the country, 330. Its military power, 342. Account of the audience given by the emperor Carus to the ambassadors of Varanes. in 94. The throne of, disputed by the brothers Naises and Hois muz, 143. Galerius defeated by the Persians, 144. Naises overthrown in his turn by Galerius, 148. Articles of peace agreed on between the Persians and the Romans, 153.

GLALRAL INDEX.

Person, was between Sapor, king of, and the emperor Constantons, 10, 139. Battle of Surgara, 140. Sapor invades Mesopotamia, 204 The Persian territories invaded by the emperor Julian, iv. 101. Passage of the Tigris, 180. Julian huassed in his tetre 0, 194. Treaty of peace between Sapor and the emperor Joyran, 209. Reduction of Armenia, and death of Sapa, 313. 315.

----, the silk trade, how carried on from China through Perso for the supply of the Roman empire, vir 94. Death of Pero es in an expedition against the white Huns, 136. Review of the reigns of Cabades, and his son Chostoes, 208. Anarchy of, after the death of Chosroes II., vm. 201 - Feelesiasheal Instory of 339.

-, invasion of, by the caliph Abubeker, ix 364 Butle of Cadesia, 365. Sack of Ctesiphon, 368. Compact of by the Saracens, 372. The Magian religion supplanted by Withomerism, 193. The power of the Arabs crushed by the dynasty of the Bowides, x, 83. Persia subdued by the Tinks, (4) conquest of, by the Moguls, vi. 110. By Tamerline, xn. 7, Pertinar, his character, and exaltation to the Imperial throne t. 157. His funeral and apotheosis, 157

Pescennus Niger, governor of Syria, assumes the Imperial dignity on the death of Pertmax, 1 178.

Petaents, character of his Dogmata The dogwa, von 2003 note

Peter, brother of the Eastern emperor Maurice, he impurious areas ment of the citizens of Azimuntinia, and them from theore,

Peter L, cz u of Russia, his conduct towards his son, contra tel with that of Constantine the Great, in, 112

Peter of Arragon, assumes the kingdom of Sauly, xr 344

Peter, Battholomew, his mir a nlow discovery of the Holy I mee. xi, 73. His strange death, 76.

Peter of Courtenay, emperor of Constantinople, vi 268

Peter the Hermit, his character and scheme in recover the Holy Land from the infidels, xi. i. Leads the first crusulers, 24

Petra, the city of, taken by the Persians, vii. 330. Is besinged by Failure of his zeal, 72. the Romans, 531. Is demolished, 355.

And lustery, Petrdreh, his studies and literary character, xii. 121 324. His account of the rum of the ancient baildings of Rome 417.

Ifeffel, character of his history of Germany, ix. 212. note.

Phalanx, Grecian, compared with the Roman legion, 1, 21.

Pharamond, the actions, and foundation of the French monarchy by him, of doubtful authority, v. 360.

Pharas commands the Heruli, in the African war, under Belisarius, vii. 165. Pursues Gelimer, 180. His letter to Gelimer, 191.

Pharisees, acrount of that sect among the Jews, u. 200.

Phasis, river, its course described, vii. 310.

Pheasant, derivation of the name of that bud, vn 321.

Philelphus, Francis, his character of the Greek language of Constantinople, xn. 115.

Philip I, of France, his limited dignity and power, xi, 8.

Philip Augustus, of France, engages in the third crusode, xi. 143. Philip, praeforian praefect under the third Gordian, raised to the corpure on his death, i. 309. Was a favourer of the Christians, ii. 451. Philip, practorian praefect of Constantinople, conveys the bishop Paul into banishment clandestinely, ii. 394.

Philippicus, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 23.

Philippopolis taken and sacked by the Goths, 1, 200.

Philo, a character of his works, iii. 317.

Philosophy, Grecian, review of the various sects of, i. 48.

Phineus, the situation of his palace, ni. 5.

Phocaa is settled by Genoese, who trade in alum, xii, 52.

Phocas, a centurion, is chosen emperor by the disaffected troops of the Lastern empire, viii, 200. Murders the emperor Maurice, and his children, 200. His character, 212. His fall, and death, 216. Pharactar described, 1, 39.

Photrus, the son of Antonina, distinguishes himself at the siege of Naples, vii. 201. Is exiled, 203. Betrays his mother's vices to Belisarius, 204. Turns monk, 207.

Photius, the patrician, kills himself to escape the persecution of Justinian, vin. 522.

Photius, patijarch of Constantinople, character of his Library, x. 158. His quartel with the pope of Rome, xi. 173.

Phranza, George, the Greek historian, some account of, xn. 88. note. His embassies, 176. His fate on the taking of Constantinople by the Turks, 235.

Picardy, derivation of the name of that province, xi. 1. note, Prilate, Pontrus, his testimony in favour of Jesus Christ, much improved by the primitive fathers, ii. 445.

Pilpay's fables, history and character of, vii. 306.

Pinnu marina, a kind of silk manufactured from the threads spun by this fish, by the Romans, vii. 93.

Ptpa, a princess of the Marcomanni, espoused by the emperor Galhenus, i. 420.

Piso, Calphurmus, one of the competitors against Gallienus, his illustrious family and character, 1, 447.

Pityus, the city of, destroyed by the Goths, i. 424.

Placedia, daughter of Theodosius the Great, her history and marriage with Adolphus king of the Goths, v. 934. Is injuriously treated by the usurper Singeric, after the death of her husband, $55. Her marriage with Constantius, and retical to Constantinople, vi. 2, Her administration in the West, as guardian of her son the emperor Valentinian III., 8. History of her daughter Honoria, 103. Her death and burnd, 138, note.

Plague, origin and nature of this disease, vit. 418. Great extent and long duration of that in the reign of Justinian, 423, Plato, his theological system, in, 314 Is received by the Alexanduan Jews, 316. And expounded by St John the Evangelist, 318. The theological system of the emperor Julian, iv. 72.

Platonic philosophy introduced into Italy, vii. 133 Platonets, new, an account of, ii. 182. Unite with the heather priests to oppose the Christians, 402.

Plantianus, practorian pra fect under the emperor Severis, his history, 1, 201.

Plebetans of Rome, state and character of, v. 278.

Plane the Younger, examination of his conduct toward the Christrans, n. 417.

Poet laureat, a ridiculous appointment, xii. 326 n de

Poggius, his reflections on the rum of ancient Rome, xit 345

Portiers, battle of, between Clovis king of the Franks, and Alm king of the Goths, vi 335.

Pollentia, battle of, between Stilicho the Roman general and Alara the Goth, v. 198.

Polytheism of the Romans, its origin and effects, 1 46. How ac counted for by the primitive Christians, n. 2- . Scepticism of the people at the time of the publication of Christianity, 355, The Christians why more odious to the Pagan, than the Jew . 387.

-, the rum of, su-pended by the divisions among Chirt-am. in, 110. Theological system of the emperor Johan, iv. 71 -, review of the Pagan coclesiastical establishment, v. 12.

Revival of, by the Christian monks, 130.

Pompetanus, practect of Rome, proposes to drive Alaric from the walls by spell-, v. 202.

Pompetanus Ruricius, general under Maxentius, defeated and killed by Constantine the Great, ii. 227.

Pompey, his discretional exercise of power during his command in the East, 1, 100. Increase of the tributes of Asia by his conquests, 257.

Pontiffs, Pagan, then jurisdiction, v. 92.

Pontiter Maximus, in Pagan Rome, by whom that office was exer-

Popes of Rome, the growth of their power, 1x 151. Revolt of, from the Greek empetors, 137. Origin of their temporal donnnion, 155. Publication of the Decretals, and of the fictatious · donation of Constantine the Great, 159. Authority of the German emperors in their election. 195. Violent distractions in their election, 197.

Popes, foundation of their authority at Rome, xii. 260. Then mode of election settled, 299. Schism in the papacy, 307. They acquire the absolute dominion of Rome, 387. The ecclesiastical government, 391.

Population of Rome, a computation of, v. 2st.

Porcuro, Stephen, his conspiracy at Rome, xii. 383.

Posthumus, the Roman general under the comperor Gallienus, defends Gaul against the menrsions of the Franks, 1, 411. Is killed by his mutinous troops, 11, 222.

Power, absolute, the exercise of how checked, v. 135.

Profect of the sacred bed-chamber, under Constantine the Great, his office, iti. 60.

Profects of Rome and Constantinople, under the emperors, the nature of their offices, in. 45. The office revived at Rome, xii. 282.

Protextatus, præfect of Rome under Valentinian, his character, iv. 275.

Protorian bands in the Roman army, an account of, i. 108. They sell the empire of Rome by public auction, 171. Are disgraced by the emperor Severus, 180. A new establishment of them, 199. Authority of the praetorian praefect, 200. Are reduced, their privileges abolished, and their place supplied, by the Jovians and Herculeans, n. 161. Their desperate courage under Maxentins, 232. Are totally suppressed by Constantine the Great, 235.

Pretorium præfect, revolutions of this office under the emperors, ni. 42. Then functions when it became a civil office, 44.

Prators of Rome, the nature and tendency of their edicts explained, viii. 13.

Preaching, a form of devotion unknown in the temples of Paganism, in. 301. Use and abuse of, 302.

Predestruction, influence of the doctrine of, on the Saracens and Turks, ix. 296.

Presbyters, among the primitive Christians, the office explained, ii, 331.

Prester John, origin of the romantic stories concerning, vii. 314. Priests, no distinct order of men among the ancient Pagans, ii. 354.

in. 281.

Priestley, Dr., the ultimate tendency of his opinions pointed out, x. 193. note.

Primogeniture, the prerogative of, unknown to the Roman law.

viii. 75.

Prince of the waters, in Persia, his office, vii. 303. note.

Priscillian, bishop of Avila in Spain, is, with his followers, put to death for heresy, v. 34.

Priscus, the historian, his conversation with a captive Greek, in the camp of Attila, vi. 59. His character, 67. note.

Priscus, the Greek general, his successes against the Avars, viii. 203.

Proba, widow of the prafect Petronius, her flight from the sack of Rome by Alaric, v. 321.

Probus assumes the Imperial dignity in opposition to Florianus. 11 70 His character and history, 72

Probas, pratorian practice of Hlyricum, preserves Summum from the Quada, iv 330.

Probas, Sicorius, his embassy from the capperor Diocletian to Narses, king of Persia, it. 151.

Proceda, John of, instigates the revolt of Sicily from John of Aujon, XI, 344.

Proclus, story of his extraordinary brazen mirror, vii, 11%.

Proclus, the Platonic philosopher of Athens, his superstition, vo. 149.

Proconsuls of Asia, Achaia, and Aliica, their office, m. 18

Procoped, wife of the Greek emperor Michael L. her martial inclinations, 18, 30.

Procopeus, his history, and revolt against Valens, emperor of the 1-st iv. 243. Is reduced, and put to death, 250. His account of the testament of the emperor Arcadius, v. 112. His account of Britain, vi. 401. Character of his histories, vii. 01. Accepts the office of secretary under Belisarius, 162. His referice of the Roman archers, 165. His account of the desolation of the Afri can province by war, 353.

Proculians, origin of the sect of, in the Roman civil law, viii 30, Proculus, his extraordinary character, and his rebellion against Probus in Gaul, n. 87.

Produgics in ancient history, a philosophical resolution (d. ii) 203 Promises, under what circumstances the Roman law culoiced the fulfilment of, viii. 83.

Promotus, master-general of the infantry under Theodosius, is ruined by the ennety of Rufinus, v. 140.

Property, personal, the origin of, vin. 70. How a certained by the Roman laws, 71. Testamentary dispositions of, how introduced, 77 Prophets, their office among the primitive Christians, it 530

Propontis described, in. 8. Protectus, patriatch of Alexandria, his in situal episcopacy, a cl violent death, vin. 310.

Protestants, their resistance of oppression, not consistent with the practice of the primitive Christians, in, 249. Proportion of their number to that of the Catholics, in I mee, at the beginning of the last century, 253, note. Estimate of their reformation of Protosebastos, import of that title in the Greek empire. v. 420.

Proxerbs, the book of, why not likely to be the projuction of king

Procuses of the Roman empire described, (30). Distinction between Latin and Greek provinces, 60. Account of the tributes received from, 257. Then number and government after the scat of copire was removed to Constantinople, in. 50.

Prusa, conquest of, by the Ottomans, xt. 434

· Prussia, emigration of the Goths to, 1 302.

Pulcheria, sister of the emperor Theodosius the Younger, her cha racter and administration, v. 110. Her lessons to her brother, 119.

Her contests with the empress Eudocia, 424. Is proclaimed empress of the East, on the death of Theodosius, vi. 84. Her death and canonization, 190.

Purple, the royal colour of, among the ancients, far surpassed by the modern discovery of cochineal, vii. 90, note.

Pygmies of Africa, ancient fabulous account of, iv. 310.

Q

Quadi, the inroads of, punished by the emperor Constantins, m. 196. Revenge the treacherous murder of then king Gabinius, iv. 330.

Quastor, historical review of this office, in. 71.

Question, criminal, how exercised under the Roman emperors, in 70. Quantition brothers, Maximus and Condianus, their history, 1, 142

Quantilius, brother of the emperor Claudius, his meffectual effort to succeed him, ii. 15.

Quintus Curtius, an attempt to decide the age in which he wrote, 1, 306, note, Quintes, the effect of that word when opposed to saldiers, 1. 252.

R.

Radaguisus, king of the Goths, his formidable invasion of Italy, v. 213. His savage character, 217. Is reduced by Stilicho, and put to death, 220.

Radiger, ling of the Varni, compelled to fulfil his matrimonial obligations by a British heroine, vi. 402.

Rumadan, the month of, how observed by the Turks, ix. 270.

Rando, a chieftain of the Alemanni, his unprovoked attack of Moguntiacum, iv. 281.

Ratenna, the ancient city of, described, v. 207. The emperor Honorius fixes his residence there, 210. Invasion of, by a Greek fleet, ix. 140. Is taken by the Lombards, and recovered by the Venetians, 146. Final conquest of, by the Lombards, 147. The exarchate of, bestowed by Pepin on the pope, 150.

Raymond of Thoulouse, the crusader, his character, xi. 33. His route to Constantinople, 43. His bold behaviour there, 51.

Raymond, count of Tripoli, betrays Jerusalem into the hands of Saladin, xi. 135.

Raynul, abbé, mistaken in asserting that Constantine the Great suppressed Pagan worship, in. 404.

Rebels, who the most invoterate of, x. 177.

Recared, the first Catholic king of Spain, converts his Gothic subjects, vi. 299.

Reformation from popery, the amount of, estimated, x. 188. A secret reformation still working in the reformed churches, 192.

Rein-deer, this animal driven northward by the improvement of climate from cultivation, 1. 347.

Relies, the worship of, introduced by the monks, v. 124. A valu able cargo of, imported from Constantinople by Louis IX, of France, xt. 280.

Regugius, bishop of Rheims, converts Clove, king of the Franks, vi. 319.

Repentance, its high esteem, and extensive operation, among the $^{\circ}$ primitive Christians, n. 316.

Resurrection, general, the Mahometan doctrine of, ix 277

Retailing, the mode of his combat with the securor, in the Roman amphillestic, i. 1 4.

Receives of the primitive church, how distributed in (45 m 20) Of the Roman empire, when removed to Constantinople, a review

Rhateon city of, its simulion, in, 11.

Rhar a described, 1/35.

Rhazates, the Person general, defeated and killed by the emperor Herichus, vin. 249.

Rhetoric, the study of, congenial to a popular state, vir 141, Rhaw, the banks of, fortified by the emperor Valentinian, (v. 28) Rhodes, account of the colossus of, (x. 42). The knights of, xi 4 38.

Rubard I of England, engages in the third cruside, xi 115. Bestorys the island of Cyprus on the house of Lusignan, 183. His reply to the exhortations of Fulk of Neudly, 158.

Richard, monk of Circuccster, his Interary character, v. 365 note Ricimer, count, his history, vi 105. Permits Majorrin to assume the Imperial dignity in the Western empire, 169 Enjoys supremi power under cover of the name of the emperor labous Severus, Marites the daughter of the emperor Anthennas, 175, Sacks Rome, and kills Anthemius, 217. His death, 218.

Runzi, Nicholas di, his birth, character, and history, Nu. 351

Roads, Roman, the construction and great extent of, i. 81.

Robert of Courtenay, emperor of Constantinople, xi. 270.

Robert, count of Flanders, his character and engagement in the hist crusade, xi. 32.

Robert, dake of Normandy, his character and engagement in the first crusade, xt. 32. Recalled by the censures of the church, 74. Roderic, the Gothic king of Spain, his deleat and death by Tank the Rodugune, probable origin of her character, in Rowe's Roy of Con-

Roger, count of Sicily, his exploits, and conquest of that island, x, vert, vi. 402, 403, note.

Roger, son of the former, the first king of Sicily, ∞ (i.s.) His military atchievements in Africa and Greece, 311.

Roger de Flor, engages as an auxiliary in the service of the Greek emperor Andromeus, M. 347. His assassination, 350, · Romanus 1., Lecapenus, emperor of Constantinople, 1x. 58.

Romanus II., emperor of Constantinople, (x. 01.

Romanus III., Argytus, emperor of Communituople. ix. 69.

Romanus IV. Diogenes, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 78.—Is defeated and taken prisoner by the Turkish sultan Alp Arslan, x. 356.—His treatment, deliverance, and death, 358.

Romanus, count. governor of Africa, his corrupt administration, is 301.

Romanus, governor of Bosta, betrays it to the Saraceus, ix. 384, 385.

Rome, the three periods of its decline pointed out, i. Preface. Its prosperous circumstances in the second century, 1. The principal conquests of, atchieved under the republic, 2. Conquests under the emperors, o. Military establishment of the emperors, 14, Naval force of the empire, 28. View of the provinces of the empire, 30. Its general extent, 41. The union and internal prosperity of the empire, in the age of the Antonines, accounted for, 15. Treatment of the provinces, 56 Benefits included in the freedom of the city, 50. Distinction between the Latin and Greek provinces, 60. Prevalence of the Greek, as a scientific language, 6%. Numbers and condition of the Roman slaves, Populousness of the empire, 68. Unity and power of the government, 69. Monuments of Roman architecture, 70. The Roman magnificence chiefly displayed in public buildings, 75. Principal cities in the empire, 77. Public roads, 81. Great improvements of agriculture in the western countries of the empire, 81. Arts of luxury, 87 Commerce with the East, 85. Contemporary representation of the prosperity of the empire, 90, Decline of courage and genius, 91, 92. Review of public affairs after the battle of Actium, 95. The Imperial power and dignity confirmed to Augustus by the senate, 98. The various characters and powers vested in the emperor, 103. General idea of the Imperial system, 109. Abortive attempt of the senate to resume its rights after the murder of Calignia, 116. The emperors associate their intended successors to power, 110. The most happy period in the Roman Instory pointed out, 126. Their peculiar misery under their tyrants, 129. The empire publicly sold by auction by the pratorian gnaids, 171. Civil wars of the Romans, how generally decided, 192. When the army first received regular pay, 256. How the citizens were relieved from taxation, ibid. General estimate of the Roman revenue from the provinces, 200. Miseries flowing from the succession to the empire being elective, 271. A summary review of the Roman history, 313. Recapitulation of the war with Parthia, 331. hivasion of the provinces by the Goths, 397. The office of censor revived by the emperor Decius, 100. Peace purchased of the Goths, 106. The emperor Valerian tiken prisoner by Sapor, king of Persia, 436. The popular conceit of the thirty tyrants of Rome investigated, 144. Famme and pestilence throughout the empire, 455. The city fortified against the introads of the Alemanni, ii. 27. Remarks on the alleged sedition of the officers of the mint under Aurelian, 50. Observations on the peaceful interregnum after the death of Aurelian, 59. Colonies of Barbarians introduced into the provinces by Probis, 82. Exhibition of the public games by Carinus, 100 Treaty of peace between the Persians and the Romans, 153. The last triumph celebrated of Rome, 156. How the Imperial courts came to be transferred to Milan and Neomedia, 108. The practorian lends supersiden by the Joven, and Hereade in guards, 161. The power of the sense annihilated, 162. I om divisions of the empire enter four conpunct primes, tos. Their expensive entible bareass cal for more horstensome taxes (6). Diocle (ur and Verymon) of he of the empire, 170. Six emperors existing at one time, 200. The senate and people apply to Consideration to deliver them from the (ve univ of Maxentois, 220). Constanting enters the covey of to (169), $\hat{\mathcal{Q}}^{\mathrm{PG}}$. Laws of Constantine, $\hat{\mathcal{Q}}^{\mathrm{PG}}$. Constantine (carrier) obcorporor, 2014. History of the progress and establishment of Christianity, 205. Pretensions of the to-hop of Rome, whence deduced, 330. State of the church at Rome at the turn of the persecution by Nero, 504. Narrative of the fire of Rober in the reign of Nem 463. The Christian persecutof a the meaningties, 400. The memorable edicts of Dioch has and he account. against the Christians, 198

Reme, account of the hudding and establishment of the rival city of Constantinople, in: 4. New forms of idministration (stablishment) of the empire among the sons of the instantine 133. Establishment of Christianity as the national religion, a strumults excited by the rival bishops, Laberius and Labix, our Pagamism restored by Juhan, iv. 84. And Christianity by Joyaan 227. The empire divided into the Eost and Best, by the empired Valentinian, 242. Civil institutions of Valentinian, 233. Bloody contest of Danasis, and Ursmus to the bishoping of Rome, 274. Great carthquake, 338.

--- The emperor Theodosius visits the city, v -> highly into the cause of the corruption of morals in his reign, 87. Review of the Pagan establishment, 92 The Pagan religion renounced by the senate, 100. Sacrifices prohibined, tree. The Pagan rehgion probibited, 116. Triumph et Honorius and Sulicho over Alarie the Goth, 204. Alarie encamps under the wills of the city, 255. Retrospect of the state of the cuty when histoged by Hammbal, ibid. Wealth of the mobiles and magnificence of the city, 202. Character of the nobles of, by Ammeuris Maccelhnus, 267. State and character of the common people, 278, Public distributions of bread &c.,250 Public baths 25% Games and spectacles, 284. Attempts to ascertain the population of thi city, 280. The citizens suffer by Forance 2 o Plague, 202 The retreat of Alaric purchased by a consom, 200 Is again besieged by Alaric 303. The senate unites with hom in election Attalus emperor, 50%. The city serzed by Alacie, and plundered, 311. Comparison between this event and the sack of Rome by the emperor Charles V 322. Alanc quits Rome and ivages Italy, 325. Laws passed for the rehef of Rome, and Italy, 337. Trumph of Honorius for the reduction of Spain by Wallia, 258. Is preserved from the hands of Attida by a ransom, vi. 131. Indications of the rum of the empire, at the death of Valentinian III., 142. Sack of the city by Genseire king of the Vandals, 151. The public huildings of, protected from depredation by the laws of Majorian, 174. Is sacked again by the patrician Ricimer, 217. Augustulus, the last emperor of the West, 222. The decay of the Roman spirit remarked, 231. History of monastic institutions in, 244. General observations on the history of the Roman empire, 405.

Rome,—Italy conquered by Theodoric the Ostrogoth, vp. 13. Prosperity of the city under his government, 29. Account of the four factions in the circus, 76. First introduction of silk among the Romans, 91. The office of consul suppressed by Justiman, 152. The city receives Belisarius, 224. Siege of, by the Goths, that. Distressful siege of, by Totila, the Goth, 362. Is taken, 366. Is recovered by Belisarius, 370. Is again taken by Totila, 370. Is taken by the cunuch Naises, 388. Extinction of the senate, 389. The city degraded to the second tank under the exarchs of Ravenna, 400. A review of the Roman laws, win. I. Extent of the dutchy of, under the exarchs of Ravenna, 146. Miscrable state of the city, 158. Pontificate of Gregory the Great, 104.

—, The government of the city new modelled under the popes, after their revolt from the Greek emperors, ix. 142. Is attacked by the Lombards, and delivered by king Pepin, 146. The other and rank of exarchs and patricians explained, 153. Reception of Charlemagne by pope Adrian I., 154, 155. Origin of the temporal power of the popes, 156. Mode of electing a pope 195. Is menaced by the Saracons, x. 61. Prosperous pontificate of Loo IV., 64. Is besieged and taken by the emperor Hemy III., 202. Great part of the city burns by Robert Guiscard, in the cause of pope Gregory VII., 304.

by the Tinks, xii. 250. French and German emperors of, 258. Authority of the popes, 200. Restoration of the republican form of government, 277. Office of senator, 255. Wars against the neighbouring cities, 297. Institution of the jubilee, 310. Revolution in the city, by the tribune Richzi, 331. Calamities flowing from the schism of the papacy, 369. Statutes and government of the city, 380. Porcaro's conspiracy, 383. The ecclesiastical government of, 391. Reflections of Poggius on the rum of the city, 395. Four principal causes of its rum specified, 400. The cohseum of Titus, 418. Restoration and ornaments of the city, 428.

Romida, the betrayer of Friuli to the Avars, her cruel treatment by them, vni. 227.

Rosumond, daughter of Cunimund king of the Gepidæ, her marmage with Albom king of the Lombards, vin. 419. his minder, 129 Her flight and death, 131, Conspues

Roum, the Seljukian kingdom of, formed, $\propto 372$

Rudbeck, Olaus, summary abridgment of the argument in his Atia-Rufinus, the confidential immister of the emperor The closus the Great, stimulates his cruelty against These donnea, v. 66. His character and administration, 13) His deade 157, 158

Ragicus, the Hun his settlement in Hungary, vi 55

Runic characters, the antiquity of, traced, 1, 352, or

Russia, origin of the monarchy of, v 219. Geography and macof, 223. A wal expeditions of the Russians against Coastanti-nople, 228. Reign of the Czar Swato-Lus, 2005. The Russ stans converted to Christianny, 228. Is compared by the Moguls, xr. 420.

Rustan, a Persian nobleman, a saying of his, expressive of the donger of living under despots, 1, 12),

Rutilius, his character of the monks of Capitana, v. 107, 198

s

Subellius the heresiarch, his opinions afterward adopte 1 by his intagoinsts, in. 237. His doctrme of the Timity 331. The Sabelhans unite with the Tritheists at the conneil of Nice to overpower the Arrans, 371.

Saluans, their astronomical mythology, ix. 219.

Sabruan obtains the command of the eastern provinces from Constantius, in. 211.

Sabinian, general of the East, is defeated by Theodoric the Ostro goth, king of Italy, vir 24

Sabinians, origin of the sect of, in the Roman civil law, vin 30

Suddieces, account of that seet among the Jews, it 200 Saladar, his birth, promotion, and character, xr 12 r Cone r and kingdom of Jerisalem, 136. His metherfiel siege of Tyre, 146 Stege of Acre, 142. His negonations with Richard L of Fig. land, 149. His death, 151

Salerno, account of the medical school of, v. 275

Salic laws, history of, vi. 345.

Sallust, the profect, and friend of the emperor Julian, decline the offer of the diadem on his death, iv 201. Declines it as into on the death of Joylan, 235. Is retained in his employmene by the emperor Valentinian, 241.

Sallust, the historian, by what finds he hased his polace on the Quirinal bill, v. 315, note.

Salona, the retreat of the emperor Diocletian described, u. 177

Salvian, his account of the distress and rebellion of the Bag indic, Vi. 144. note.

Samunides, the Saracen dynasty of, x, 51

Samaratans, persecution and extinction of by the emperor Justinian.

Samuel the prophet, his ashes conveyed to Constantinople, v. 125, 196

Sapor, king of Persia, procures the assassination of Chosroes, king of Armenia, and seizes the country, 1, 435. Defeats the emperor Valerian, and takes him prisoner, 436. Sets up Cynades as successor to Valerian in the Roman empire, 437. Over-runs Syria, Cilicia, and Cappadocia, 133. His death, ii. 41.

Supor, the son of Hormonz, is crowned king of Persia before his birth, in, 135. His character and early heroism, 136. Harasses the eastern provinces of the Roman empire, 130. Battle of Singara against the emperor Constantius, 140. His son brintally killed by Constantius, 142. His several attempts on Nisibes, ibid. Concludes a trace with Constantius, 115. His haughty propositions to Constantius, 201. Invades Mesopotamia, 201. Reduces Amida, 208. Returns home, 210. His peaceful overtimes to the emperor Juhan, iv. 143. His consternation at the successes of Juhan, 186. Harasses the retreat of the Romans, 194. His treaty with the emperor Jovian, 209. His reduction of Armema, and death, 311, 315.

Saracen, various definitions of that appellation, ix. 233, note.

Saraceus, successions of the caliphs of, ix. 352. Then rapid conquests, 361. Conquest of Persia, 372. Siege of Damaceus, 385. Battle of Yermuk, and conquest of Syria, 400. Of Egypt, 425. Invasions of Africa, 448. Their military character, x. 111.

Sarbar, the Persian general, joins the Avars in besieging Constantinople, vm. 243. Revolts to the emperor Herachus, 247.

Sardiner, expulsion of the Vandals from, by Marcellinus, vi. 200. Is conquered by Zano, the brother of Gelimer, king of the Vandals, viii, 181. Is surrendered to Bolisarius, 180.

San mattans, memorable defeat of, by the emperor Carus, a. 93. Then manners described, in, 119. Buck history of, 122. They apply to Constantine the Great for assistance against the Goths, 123. Are expelled their country by the Liningantes, 120. Are restored by Constantius, 200.

Sarage manners, a brief view of, 1, 556. Are more uniform than those of civilized nations, in, 341.

Sarus, the Goth, plunders the camp of Stilicho, and drives him into the hands of the emperor at Ravenna, v. 242. Insults Alaric, and occasions the sacking of Rome, 310. Is killed by Adolphus king of the Visigoths, 348, 349.

Saturninus, one of the competitors for empire against Gallienus, his observation on his investiture, 1, 418.

Saturnius, lieutenant under the emperor Probus in the East, is driven into rebellion by his troops, it 80.

Sqrons, ancient, an account of, iv 2so. Then piratical confederations, 288. Their invasions of Gaul checked by the Romans; 290. How converted to Christianity, vi 272. Descent of the Saxons on Britain, 381. Their brutal desolation of the country, 392.

Scanderbeg, prince of Albama, his history, xir. 198.

Scatimum law of the Romans, account of, vin. 100,

Scaurus, the pattician family of, how reduced under the emperors. 111. 40. note.

Schism in religion, the origin of, traced, it. 284.

Science reducible to four classes, x. 45.

Sclavonians, their national character, vii. 278. Their barbarous inroads on the Eastern empire, 283. Of Dahnatia, account of, x. 198.

Scots and Picts, the nations of how distinguished, iv 2 (2, 23). Invasions of Britain by, 29%.

Scytheans, this name vaguely applied to mixed tribes of Barbaraus, Their pastoral manners, iv. 341 Extens and homerous 1, 132 of Scythia, 355. Revolutions of, v. 210. Then mode of war, vi 53.

Schastian, master-general of the infantry under the emperor Valens, his successful expedition against the Goths, iv. 405. Is killed in the battle of Hadiranople, 411.

Sebastian, the brother of the usurper Jovinus, is associated with him in his assumed Imperial dignities, v. 348, Schustocrator, import of that title in the Greek empire, v 11).

Secz, in Normandy, the bishop, and chapter of, all cismuck, xii. 205, note Segestan, the princes of, support then independency obtainedy against Artaxeixes, 1, 330 nore.

Segred, emperor of Abyssima, is with his whole court converted by the Jesuits, vin. 373.

Seiden, his sententious character of transubstantiation, ix 312 rate

Seleucia, the great city of, runed by the R crims, 1-535

Selencus Nicutor, number of cities founded by him. 1-321 mile Seljuk, Turkish dynasty of the house of, x. 344. Division of their empire, 308.

Serieant, legal and military import of that term, xr 211, r

Severus, Septemans, general of the Pannoman begrous, is one the purple on the death of Pertinas, 1 1st. His conduct towards the Christians, ii. 447

Senate of Rome is reformed by Augustus, i 97. Its legislative and judicial powers, 109. Abortive attempt of to resume its rights after the murder of Caligula, 116 Its legal jurisdiction over the emperors, 100. Is subjected to unlitary despotism by Severus, 201. Women excluded from this assembly by a solemn law, 212. Measures taken to support The form of a secret meeting, 287 the authority of the two Gordians, 285. The senate elect Maximus and Balbinus emperors on the deaths of the Gordians, 200. They drive the Alemann out of Italy, 41°. The senators forbid to exercise military employments by trallienus, 419. Flort Tacitus, the father of the senate, emperor, n. 63. Prerogatives gained to the senate, by this election, 65. Their power and authority annihilated by Diocletian, 160.

2 L VOL. XII.

- Senate, amount of the coronary gold, or customary free gift of to the emperors, ii. 96. The claim of Julian to the empire admitted, iv. 51.
- ——, protions of, to the emperors, for the restoration of the altar of victory, v. 96. The Pagan religion renounced, 100. Debates of, on the proposals of Alain, the Goth 236. Genealogy of the senators, 257. Passes a decree for putting to death Sciena the widow of Stilicho, 296. Under the influence of Alaire, elects Attalus emperor, 305. Trial of Arvandus, a Practorian pracfect of Gard, vi. 208. Surrenders the sovereign power of Italy to the emperor of the East, 227.

-----, extraction of that illustrious assembly, vii. 389.

- restoration of, in the twelfth century, xir. 277. The assembly resolved into single magistrates, 285.
- Serapion, his lamentation for the loss of a personified deity, viii. 269.
- Scraps, history of his worship, and of his temple at Alexandria, v. 108. The temple destroyed, 111.
- Serena, niece of the emperor Theodosius, married to his general Stilicho, v. 152. Is cruelly strangled by order of the Roman senate, 200.
- Sections, St., encourages Odoacer to assume the dominion of Italy, vi. 225. His body, how disposed of, 231, note.
- Secons is declared Cosar on the abdication of Diocletran and Maximum, it. 189. His defeat and death, 202.
- Secretar is appointed general of the cavalry in Gaul under Julian, iii. 320.
- Shepherds and warriors, their respective modes of life compared iv. 312, 313
- Shitter, a sect of Mahometans, then distinction from the Sonnites, xi, 554
- Siberia, extreme coldness of the climate, and miserable state of the natives of, iv. 359. Is seized and occupied by the Tartars, xi. 423.
- Sicily, reflections on the distractions in that island, 1, 451. Is conquered by the Saraceus, 8, 50. Introduction of the silk mannifacture there, 110. Exploits of the Normans there, 200. Is conquered by Count Roger, 251. Roger, son of the former, made king of, 508. Reign of William the Bad, 324. Reign of William the Good, 326. Conquest of, by the emperor Henry VI. 320. Is subdued by Charles of Anjou, xi. 338. The Sicilian Vespers, 344.
- Sidonius Apollivaris the poet, his humorous treatment of the capitation tax, iii. 90. His character of Theodoric king of the Visigoths in Gaul, vi. 158. His panegyric on the emperor Avitus, 164. His panegyric on the emperor Anthemius, 195.
- Sigismond, king of the Burgundians, murders his son, and is canonised, vi. 328. Is overwhelmed by an army of Franks, 329.
- Silentiarius, Paul, his account of the various species of stone and marble employed in the church of St. Sophia at Constantinople, vii. 120, note.

GENER INDEX

Silk, first manufactured in China, and then in the small torsion island of Ceos, vii. 20. A peculial kind of silk procured from the pmn i marina [92]. The silk-worm, how introduced to Greece, 97

Progress of the manufacture of, in the tenth centiny, x. 110.

Simeon, persecutor of the Paulierius, becomes a proselyte to the acopimons, x. 175.

Simeon, king of Bulgaria, his exploits, v. 200.

Someon Stylites, the hermit, his extraordinary mode of life, vi. 265.

Samony, an early instance of, ii. 150, note.

Simplicities, one of the last surviving Pagan philosophers of Athens, his writings, and character, vn. 151, 152, Singara, battle of, between the emperor Constantins, and Sapor king of Persia, in. 110. The city of, reduced by Sapor, 210. Is vielded to him by Jovian, iv. 211.

Singeric, brother of Sarus, is made king of the Goths, v. 374.

Singidunum is perfidiously taken by Baian chagan of the Avais, vin. 197.

Strmium is perfidiously taken by Baian chagan of the Avar-, viu.

Strong deposes and murders his father Chostoes II, king of Persia, viu, 253 His treaty of peace with the emperer Heraches, 255, Sizebut, a Gothic king of Spain persecutes the Jews there, vi. 303

Sectus V., pope, Character of his administration, 5n 392

Slave, strange perversion of the original sense of that appell from Slaves, among the Romans, who, and their condition described.

Slavery, personal, imposed on captives by the bubarous nations, vi. 559.

Sleepers, seven, narrative of the legendary tale of, vi 102

Smyrna, cupture of, by Tamerlane, xu. 29.

Society philosophical, reflections on the revolution of, vi. 117

Soffarides, the Saracen dynasty of, x, 50,

Soldiers, Roman, their obligations and discipline, i. 1). When they first received regular pay, 2 ab.

Soleman, sultan, conquers Asia Minor, x 571 11xe- his residence at Nice, 373. Nice taken by the mist crusiders, M. 18. Battle Soliman, the son of Bajazet, his character, vit 4). His alliance with the Greek emperor Manuel Pala ologus, 51, Solomon, king of the Jews, not the author of the book which bears the name of his Wisdom, in. 310. Re sons for supposing he did not write either the book of Ecc. s. istes of the Proceeds, en. 195.

Solomon the ennuch relieves the Roman province in Africa from the depredations of the Moots, vir 200. Revolt of his troops at Carthage, 348. Is defected and killed by Antalus the Moon, Solyman, caliph of the Saraccus, undertake, the siege of Constantinople, x. 8. His enormous appetite, and death, 11.

GENERACINDEX

Sonnites, in the Mahometan religion, then tenets, ix. 334

Soputor, a Syrian philosopher, beheaded by Constantine the Great, on a charge of binding the wind by magic, in. 364, note.

Sophia, the widow of Justin II. her conspiracy against the emperor Tiberius, viii. 137.

Sophia, St., foundation of the church of, at Constantinople, vii. 116. Its description, 118. Is converted into a mosch, xiv. 240.

Sophian, the Arab, commands the first siege of Constantinople, x. 3. Sophronia, a Roman matron, kills herself to escape the violence of Maxentius, ii. 217. note.

Sortes Sanctorum, a mode of Christian divination, adopted from the Pagans, vi. 333. note.

Soul, uncertain opinious of the ancient philosophers as to the immortality of, ii. 294. This doctrine more generally received among the barbarous nations, and for what reason, 298. Was not taught by Moses, ibid. Four different prevailing doctrines as to the origin of, viii. 264, note.

Sozopetra destroyed by the Greek emperor Theophilus, x. 67.

Spain, the province of, described, i. 30. Great revenues raised from this province by the Romans, 258. Is ravaged by the Frank, 415.

—, Review of the history of, v. 350. Is invaded by the barbarous nations, 352. The invaders conquered by Wallia, king of the Goths, 357. Successes of the Yandals there, vi. 12. Expedition of Theodoric king of the Visigoths into, 101. The Christian religion received there, 296. Revolt and martyrdom of Hermenegild, 207, 208. Persecution of the Jews in, 302. Legislative assembles of, 375.

----, Acquisitions of Justinian there, vii. 203.

----, State of, under the emperor Charlemagne, ix. 181. First introduction of the Arabs into the country, 467. Defeat and death of Roderie the Gothic king of, 474. Conquest of, by Musa, 478. Its prosperity under the Saracens, 486. The Christian faith there, supplanted by that of Mahomet, 387. The throne of Cordova filled by Abdalrahman, 34.

Stadium, Olympic, the races of, compared with those in the Roman circus, vii. 75.

Stauracius, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 35.

Stephen, a freedman of Domitilla, assassinates the emperor Domitian, ii. 416.

Stephen, count of Chartres, his character, and engagement in the first crusade, x1. 32. Deserts his standard, 72.

Stephen, St., the first Christian martyr, miraculous discovery of his body, and the miracles worked by it, v. 128.

Stephen the Savage, sent by the Greek emperor Justinian II. to exterminate the Chersonites, ix. 22.

Stephen III., pape, solicits the aid of Pepin king of France, against the Lombards, under the character of St. Peter, ix. 48. Growns king Pepin, 152.

GENERAT, INDEX.

Stelector, the great general of the Western empire under the emperor Honorus, his character, v. 150. Puts to death Rulmos the tyrannical prafect of the East, 157. His expedition against Alaric in Greece, 184. His diligent endeavours to check his progress in Italy, 194. Defeats Alaric at Pollentia, 199. Drivew. him out of Italy, 203. His triumph at Rome, 204. His preparations to oppose the invasion of Radagaisus, 215. Reduces and puts him to death; 220. Supports the claims of Alaric in the Roman senate, 236. Is put to death at Ravenna, 243. His memory persecuted, 241.

Stoza heads the revolted troops of the emperor Justinian in Africa, Strusburg, battle of, between Julian and the Alemanni, in. 223. Successianus defends the Roman frontier against the Goths, Succe, the origin and renown of, i. 416,

Suicide applianded and pitted by the Romans, vin. 107, 108,

Sulpicius, Servius, was the highest improver of the Roman purspiudence, vin. 25.

Sultan, origin and import of this title of Eastern sovereignty. x. 335

Summet, description of the Pagoda of, in Guz irat, and its destruction by sultan Mahmud, x. 337.

Sun, the worship of, introduced at Rome by the emperor Elagabetic, 1, 233. Was the peculiar object of the devotion of Constantine the Great, before his conversion, in 242. And of Julian, after his apostacy, iv. 85.

Susa, the city of, taken by Constantine the Great, ii. 224.

Swatoslaus, czar of Russia, his reign, x. 233.

Swiss Cantons, the confederacy of, how far smular to that of the ancient Franks, i. 414.

Sword of Mars, the sacred weapon of the Huns, history of, vi 15 Syagraus, king of the Franks and Burgundians, his character, vi Is conquered by Clovis, 314

Sylla the Dictator, his legislative character, vin. 90.

Syllanus the Consul, his speech to the senate, recommending the election of the two Gordians to their approbation, 1, 287.

Sylvania, sister of the præfect Rubius, her uncommon sanctive, Sylvanus, general in Gaul under Constantius, is ruined by treachery, Sylverius, pope, is degraded and sent into exile by Behnarius for an attempt to betray the city of Rome to the Goths, vii. 239. His Symmachus, his account of the Pagan conformity of the emperor Constantius, during his visit to Rome, iii. 412. Pleads in behalf of the ancient Pagan religion of Rome, to the emperor Valenti-

Synessus, bishop of Ptolemais, excommunicates the president Andremicus, iii. 299. His extraordinary character, ibid. note. His advice to the Eastern emperor Arcadius, v. 187.

Synods, provincial, in the primitive churches, institution of, ii. 331

Nature of those assemblies, iii. 303. See Councils.

king of Persia, vni. 219. General description of, ix. 402. Is conquered by the Saracens, 406. Invasion of, by Tamerlane, xii. 20.

Syrrac language, where spoken in the greatest purity, i. $35. note.
Syrranus, duke of Egypt, surprises the city of Alexandria, and expels Athanasius the primate of Egypt, in. 379.

T

Tubari, the Atabian historian, account of his work, IN. 362, note. Tubenne, the island of, in Upper Thebais, is settled with mouks, by Pachomius, vi. 243.

Table of emerald, in the Gothic treasury in Spain, account of, v. 337.

Tuentus, emperor, his election and character, ii. 63.

Tacitus, the historian, his character of the principles of the Portico, i. 125, note. The intention of his episodes, 315. His character as a historian, 341. His account of the ancient Germans, 352. His history, how preserved and transmitted down to us, n. 62, note. His account of the persecution of the Christians as the incendiances of Rome, 404, 405.

Tactics of Leo and Constantine, character of, x. 98. Military character of the Greeks, 140.

Tagina, battle of, between the eunuch Naises, and Totila king of the Goths in Italy, vii. 385.

Takerites, the Saracen dynasty of, x. 80.

Tamerlane, his birth, reign, and conquests, xin. 3. His letter to Bajazet, 17. His conference with the doctors of the law, at Aleppo, 22. Defeats and takes Bajazet prisoner, 28. How kept out of Europe, 37. His triumph at Sanarcand, 40. Dies on a march to China, 42. His character, ibid.

Tancred the crusader, his character, xi. 35. His bold behaviour at Constantinople, 51.

Tarassus, secretary to the empress Irene, made patriarch of Constantinople, ix. 164. Presides at, and frames the decrees of, the second council of Nice, 165.

Tarik, the Arab, his descent on Spain, ix. 472. Defeats and kills Roderic the Gothic king of, 474. His disgrace, 480, 186.

Tarragona, the city of, almost destroyed by the Franks, i, 415.

Tartars. See Scythians.

Tartary, Eastern, conquest of, by Tamerlane, xii. 9. .

Tatian, and his son Proculus, destroyed by the base arts of Rufinus, the confidential minister of the emperor Theodosius, v. 141.

Taurus the consul, is banished by the urbunal of Chalcedon, iv. 48.

Tazer, how the Roman cutzens were exonerated from the burden of, i. 256. Account of those minuted by Augustus, 201. How raised under Constitutine the Great, and his successor, in, 83.

Tayef, siege of, by Mahomet, ix. 310.

Trius, the last king of the Goths, deteated and killed by the canack "Narses, vii. 88).

Telemachus, an Asianic monk, loser his life at Rome, in an artempt to prevent the combat of the gladiators, v. 200.

Tempic of Jerusalem, burned, n. 112. History of the emperor Juhan's attempt to restore it, iv. 103. Tempin. See Zingis.

Tephrice is occupied and fortified by the Panheisus, v. 17.

Tertullian, his pions exultation in the expected damastion of all the pagan world, 0, 307. Suggests desertion to Christian soldier, 307, note. His suspirious account of two edicts of Theories and Marco Automaus, in favour of the Christians, 344.

Testaments, the Roman laws for regularing vin. 77 — Cocords so Terrorays, assumes the empire in Goud, at the instigation of Victoria, i.o. Betrays his legions into the hands of Auralian, id.—15 led in trump h by Auralian, 47.

Thabor, Mount, dispute concerning the light of Xi est

Thanet, the island of, granted by Vortigeria, as a scale action to be Saxon anythrius, vi 382

Theatrical entertainments of the Romans de embed, v. 2-3.

Thel can be gion, the martyidom of apocryphal, ii (165, 164) goes $Tr_{\rm eff}$ the Roman laws relating to viii, 88, 91, 92.

Themes, or multary governments of the Greek campire, account of N. 101.

Thematers, the orator, his encommun on religious oderation aver differentiates, his built and electron to the throat of brites yie 216. His origina (full treaties with the emperor diffusion, one revolt against them, 214. His deposition and death, 222.

Theodebert, king of the Franks or Austraser poins the Goths in the steprand die runtion of Milan, vol. 24 (Invodes Indys. 25). He death [252]

Theodomic, a Gothac prince of Spain, eeps, of his treaty of submission to the Saraceus, tw. 151.

The alora, empress her limit, and early bistory, via fil. The mortisage with Justiman, 65. Her viamity, 74. Her vitues, 75. Her forting daining the Nika sedicing, 56. Mercount of her palace and garden of Hermu, 1.24. Her priors concern for the convertion of Nilona, vit. 567.

Theodora, wife of the Greek emperor Theodolas, her lastory, tv 14 Restored the worship of morges, non—Procoses the Pauls crans to rebellion, N. 178.

Theodora, daughter of the Greek emperor Coss more IX, her has Theodora, Theodora, willow of Baldwin III king of Leps dear, he e silventials as the concubine of Austronous Comments, 18, 201.

GENERATUNDEX.

Theodore Angelus, despot of Epirus, seizes Peler of Courtenay, emperor of Constantinople, prisoner, xi. 26%. Possesses himself of Thessalomea, 271.

Theodoric acquires the Gothic sceptre by the murder of his brother. Torismond, vi. 158. His character by Sidonius, ibid. His expedition into Spain, 161.

Theodoric, the son of Alaric, his prosperous reign over the Visigoths in Gaul, vi. 94. Unhappy fates of his daughters, 97. Is prevailed on by Ætius to join his forces against Attila, 111. Is killed at the battle of Chalons, 117.

Theodoric the Ostrogoth, his birth and education, vii. 2. Is forced by his troops into a revolt against the emperor Zeno, 7. He undertakes the conquest of Italy, 11. Reduces and kills Odoacc. 15. Is acknowledged king of Italy, 16. Review of his administration, 17. His visit to Rome, and care of the public buildings, 30. His religion, 36. His remove, and death, 50.

Theodosiopolis, the city of, in Armenia, built, v. 429.

Theodosius the Great, his distinction between a Roman prince and a Parthan monarch, iii. 98. note. The province of Mæsia preserved by his valour, iv. 331. Is associated by Gratian as emperor of the East, 422. His birth and character, 161d. His prudent and successful conduct of the Gothic war, 429. Defeats an invasion of the Ostrogoths, 435.

, his treaty with Maximus, v. vii. His baptism, and edict to establish orthodox faith, 14. Purges the city of Constantinople from Arianism, 22. Enforces the Nicene doctrine throughout the East, 24. Convenes a council at Constantinople, 26. His edicts against heresy, 31. Receives the figitive family of Valentinian, and marites his sister Galla, 51. Defeats Maximus, and visits Rome, 53. His character, 55. His lently to the city of Antioch, 62. His caule treatment of Thessalonica, 65. Submits to the penance imposed by St. Ambrose, for his severity to Thessalonica, 70. Restores Valentinian, 73. Consults John of Lycopolis, the hernit, on the intended war against Eugenius, 79. Defeats Eugenius, 83. His death, 85. Procured a senatorial renunciation of the Pagan religion, 100. Abolishes Pagan rites, 103. Prohibits the Pagan religion, 110.

Theodossus the younger, his birth, v. 411. Is said to be left by his father Arcadius to the care of Jezdegerd king of Persia, 413. His education and character, 418. His marriage with Eudocia, 421. His war with Persia, 426. His pious joy on the death of John, the usurper of the West, vi. 5. His treaty with the Huns, 39. His armies defeated by Attila, 52. Is reduced to accept a peace dictated by Attila, 60. Is oppressed by the embassies of Attila, 65. Embassy of Maximin to Attila, 68. Is privy to a scheme for the assassination of Attila, 81. Attila's embassy to him on that occasion, 82. His death, 81.

his perplexity at the religious feuds between Cyril and Nestorius, vn. 203. Banishes Nestorius, 297.

GENER M INDEX.

Theodosius III., emperer or Constantinople, 1x. 24.

Theodosaus, the father of the emperor, his successful expedition to Britain, iv. 2/3. Suppresses the tevolt of Firmus the Moor, in Africa, 300. Is belieaded at Carthage, 508.

Theodosius, patriarch of Alexandria, his competition with Gaian, how decided, vm. 561. This negociations at the court of Byzantium, 361.

Theodosius, the deacon, grandson of the emperor Herachus, murdered by his brother Constans II., ix. 14.

Theodosous, the lover of Antonina, detected by Behsamus, vii 262. His death, 200 Turns monk to escape her, 201

Theodosius, president of the council of Hierapolis unoci Constantins, his ridiculous flattery to that emperor, iv. 32.

Theophano, wife of the Greek emperor Romanus II, poisons both him and his father, ix, 62. Her connexion with Nicephorus Phocas, 6%. His murder, and her exile, 05, 60.

Theophe'us, emperor of Constantinople, ix. 41. His Amorian war with the caliph Motassem, x. 07.

Theophilus, archbishop of Alexandria, destroys the temple of Serapis, and the Alexandrian library, v. 111 Assists the persontion of St. Chrysostom, 404. This invective against han (199), note.

Theophilus, his pious embassy from the emperor Constantors to the East Indies, in, 279.

Theophobus, the Persian, his unfortunate history, ix 13

Therapeuta, or Essemans, some account of, it 502.

Thermopyla, the Straits of fortified by the emperor Justiman, vir 27 Thessalonica, sedition and massacre there, v. 64 Cruel treatment of the cutzens, 65. Penance of Theodosius for this seventy, 70

Theudelinda, princess of Bavaria, married to Authoris king of the Lombards, vn. 154, 155.

Tubuut, count of Champagne, engages in the fourth crusade, xt.

Thomas the Cappadocian, his revolt against the Greek emperor Michael II. and cruel punishment, ix. to Thomas of Damascus, his exploits against the Saraceis when besieging that city, ix. 392.

Thomas, St., account of the Christians of, in Iudia, vin. 346. Persecution of, by the Portuguese, 347.

Thrace, is colonised by the Bastarna, in the reign of Probus, ii. 64. The ingrave Goths permitted to scule there by the emperor Valens, 1v. 381. Is ravaged by them, 301. The toths settled there by Theodosius, 178.

Thrasimund, king of the Vandals, his character, vi. 281.

Three Chapters, the famous dispute concerning, viii. 325.

Thundering Legion, the story concerning, of suspicious veracity, ii.

Tiberius is adopted by Augustus, 1 119. Reduces the Pannonians, 108. Reduces Cappadocia, 263. note. Suspicious story of his edict in favour of the Christians, ii. 444.

Tiberius is invested by Justin II, as his successor in the empire of the East, viii, 135. His character and deali, 138, 139.

Timavius, master-general of the army under the emperor Theodosius, is disgraced and exiled under Arcadus, v. 381.

Temothy the Cat, conspires the minder of Proteins, archbishop of Alexandria, and succeeds him, viii 310.

Tipasa, miraculous gift of speech bestowed on the Catholics, whose tongues had been cut out there, vi. 293, 293.

Teridates, king of Armenia, his character, and history, ii. 138. Is restored to his kingdom by Diocletian, 140. Is expelled by the Persians, 144. Is restored again by treaty between the Romans and Persians, 154. His conversion to Christianity, and death, iii. 137.

Titus admitted to share the Imperial dignity with his father Vespasian, i. 119.

Togrut Beg. sultan of the Turks, his reign and character, v. 345. He rescues the caliph of Bagdad from his enemics, 349.

Toledo taken by the Arabs under Tarik, ix. 475.

Toleration, universal, its happy effects in the Roman empire, i. 40. What seets the most intolerant, 328, note.

Tothus, objections to his account of the vision of Antigonus, iii. 202. note.

Two smood, son of Theodoric, king of the Visigoths, attends his father against Attila king of the Huns, vi. 111. Battle of Chalons, 119. Is acknowledged king on the death of his father in the field, 119. Is killed by his brother Theodoric, 158.

Torture, how admitted in the criminal law of the Romans under the emperors, in, 79.

Total is elected Ling of Italy by the Goths, vn. 355. His justice and moderation, 358. Besieges and takes the city of Rome 302. Is induced to spare home from destruction, at the instance of Belisarius, 369. Takes Rome again, 376. Plunders Stedy, 377.

Battle of Tagina, 385. His death, 387.

Toulunides, the Saracen dynasty of, x. 82.

Tournaments preferable exhibitions to the Olympic games, $1-39.

Tours, battle of, between Charles Martel and the Saracens, x, 2), Toundrin, in Germany, is over-run and occupied by the Franks, Traditors, in the primitive church, who, ii. 474.

Trajan, emperor, his conquest of Dacia, i. 8. His conquests in the Last, 9. Contrast between the character of him and Hadram, 12. His pillar described, 70. Why adopted by the emperor Nerva, 123. His instructions to Pliny the younger for his conduct towards the Christians, ii. 418. Description of his famous bridge over the Dauube, vii. 125. note.

T) ajan, count, his treacherous murder of Pera king of Armenia, iv.

Transubstantiation, the doctrine of, when established, xi. 152.

Trebizond, the city of, taken and plundered by the Goths, i. 425 The dukes of, become independent on the Greek empire, xi. 254 15 yielded to the Turk I xn 240.

Tribigild the Ostrogorfi, his rebellion in Phrygri against the emperor Arcadaus, v. 340.

Tribune, the office of, explaned, 1-105

Tribonian, his genius and character viii 31. Is employed by Justinian to reform the code of Roman laws, 57.

Trinity the mysterious doctrine of, in 520. Is violently agitated in the schools of Alexandria, 327 Three systems of, 529. Decisions of the council of Nice concerning, 334. Different forms of the doxology, 388. Trands used to support the doctrine of, vi. 290, Tripou, the confederacy of, cruelly oppressed under the government of count Romanus, iv. 301.

Trisagion, religious war concerning, vin. 313

Troops, Roman, then discipline, 1, 15. When they first received pay, 250. Cause of the difficulty in levying them, in, 64. Sec. Jocians, Palatines, and Protorian bands.

Troy, the situation of that city, and of the Greenan camp of besiegers, described, in 40.

Turm, battle of, between Constantine the Great and the heutenant of Maxentius, ii. 225.

Turisund, king of the Geinder, his honomable reception of Albein the Lombard, who had slain his son in battle, vin. 117, 118

Turks, then origin, vii. 284. Then primative institutions, 281. Their conquests, 288. Their alliance with the emperor Justinian, 294. Send auxiliaries to Herachus, vin. 246.

for excited by their menacing Europe, 208. Then military charactor, 208. They extend themselves over Asia 393. Reem of Mahimid the Gaznevide, 334. Their manners and emigration, 30 They subdue Persia, 344. Dynasty of the Schuldans, and. They mivade the provinces of the Greek empire, of Reformation of the Eastern calendar, 300. They conquer Asia Minor, 370.

---, their capital city, Nice, taken by the considers, st. of The seat of government removed to Iconium, 104 - Valour and conquests of Zenghi, 121. Character of suitan Nonroldin, 122. Conquest of Egypt, 12). Origin and history of the Ottomans, 151. Their first passage into Europe, 138. Then education and discipline, xii, 58. Embassy from, to the emperor Sigismond, 94.

Take the city of Constantinoph, 252. Turpen, the romance of, by whom, and when written, xi 7, note.

Tachee Tables, review of the laws of, vm. 6. Then severity, 90, How the crimmal code of, sunk into disuse, 3.

Tyrants of Rome, the popular concert of the thirty, investigated, 1. 414.

Tyre is besieged by Saladin, vi. 140.

Tyther assigned to the clergy as well by Zoroaster as by Moses, i. 320. note. Were first granted to the church by Chatlemagne, ix. 178

GENERATA INDEX.

V

Vadomair, prince of the Alemanni, is sent prisoner to Spain by the emperor Julian, iv. 18. His son murdered by the Romans, 281.
Valens, general of the Illyrian frontier, receives the title of Casar from Licinius, ii. 247. Loses his new title and his life, 249.

Valens, the brother of the emperor Valentinian, is associated with him in the empire, iv. 240. Obtains from his brother the Eastern portion of the empire, 242. His timidity on the revolt of Procopius, 248. His character, 255, 256. Is baptized by Eudoxus, and patronises the Arians, 205. Is vindicated from the charge of persecution, 207. His chief against the Egyptian monks, 271. His war with the Goths, 323. Receives the suppliant Goths into the Roman territories, 381. His war with them, 394. Is defeated and killed at the battle of Hadmanople, 408, 410. His eulogium by Libanius, 411.

Valens, the Arian bishop of Mursa, his crafty pretension to divine revolution, in. 351.

Valentia, a new province in Britain, settled by Theodosius, iv. 300.
Valentinian I., his election to the empire, and character, iv. 230.
Associates his brother Valeus with him, 240. Divides the empire into the East and Best, and retains the latter, 242. His civilty, 250. His civil institutions, 250. His chiefs to restain the avarice of the clergy, 270. Chastiscs the Alemanni, and fortifies the Rhine, 282, 283. His expedition to Illyingum, and death, 331.
Is vindicated from the charge of polygamy, 334.

Valentinian II, is invested with the Imperial ornaments in his mother's arms, on the death of his father, iv. 336. Is refused by St. Ambrose the privilege of a church for him and his mother Justina, on account of their Arian principles, v. 40. His flight from the invasion of Maximus, 48. Is restored by the emperor Theodosius, 73. His character, 74. His death, 76.

Valentinion III. is established emperor of the West, by his cousin Theodosius the Younger, vi. 6. Is committed to the guardianship of his mother Placidia, 8. Flies, on the invasion of Italy by Attila, 130. Sends an embassy to Attila to purchase his retreat, 131. Murders the patrician Ætius, 139. Ravishes the wife of Petronius Maximus, 140. His death, and character, 141.

Valentinians, their confused ideas of the divinity of Jesus Christ, vin. 270. note.

Valeria, empress, widow of Galerius, the unfortunate fates of her and her mother, in. 240.

Valerian is elected censor under the emperor Decius, i. 400. His elevation to the empire, and his character, 410. Is detented and taken prisoner by Sapor king of Persia, 436. His treatment, 441. His inconsistent behaviour toward the Christians, ii. 453.

Vundals. See Goths.

their successes in Spain, v1.12. Their expedition into Africa wader Genseric, 14. They raise a naval force and invade Italy, 147.

Sack of Rome, 151. Their reval depredations on the coast of the Mediterronean, 18. Their conversion to the Christian religion, 271. Persecution of the Catholics, 280.

Vandals, expedition of Belisarius against Gelimer, vii. 167. Conquest of, 180. Then name and distinction lost in Africa, 100. Remains of their nation still found in Germany, 198 Varanes. See Bahram

Varangeous of the North, oughn and history of, x, 221

Varronian, the infant son of the emperor Jovian, his history, iv 231. Vataces, John, his long and prosperous reign at Nice, xi. 271-282

His character, 309,

Vegetius, his remarks on the degeneracy of the Roman discipline at the time of Theodosius the Great, v. 89.

Ven, the siege of that city, the ara of the Roman army first recerving regular pay, 1 255.

Venice, foundation of that republic, vi. 126. Its infinit recome er the Exarchs of Ravenna, vin. 146. Its growth and prosperity it the time of the fourth crusade, xt. 191. Alliance with Timee, 194. Divides the Greek empire with the Prench, 21.

Verations, his mode of obeying the law of the twelve table acspects ing personal insults, viii 90

Verma, empress, the willow of Leo, deposes Zeno, vir a Heartinbulent life, 6.

Verona, stege of, by Constantine the Great, it, 220 Battle of, between Stilicho the Roman general, and Alaric the Goth, v. 203 Verres, why his punishment was madequate to his offences, vin 26 Verpasian, his prudence in sharing the Imperiol dignity with his son Titus, 1, 119.

Pestals, Roman, their number and peculiar office v, 93

Vetrance, the Roman general in Phyracian, assumes the purple, and enters into an alliance with the Goulish usinger Magnentius, in, 150. Is reduced to abdicate his new dignity, 15 c.

Victorial exercises the government over the legions and provide of Victory, her statue and altar, in the seasite-hon cost Rome, described, v. 95. The senate petitions the Christ in emperors to have it re-

Vigilantius, the presbyter, is almost by Jerom for opposing mankish superstition, v. 126, note

Vigilius, interpreter to the embassy from Theodosius the Younger to Attila, is privy to a scheme for the assassination of Attila, vi. 68. Is detected by Attila, 81.

Vigilius purchases the papal chair of Belisarius and his wife, vii. 230. Instigates the emperor Justiman to resume the compact of Italy, Vine, its progress, from the time of Homer, i. 8).

Virgil, his fourth ecloque interpreted into a prophecy of the coming of the Messiah, in. 270. Is the most ancient writer who men tions the manufacture of silk, vn. 91.

RAY INDEX.

the Gotting in it is treacherously murdered at Constanti-

Vitalianus, prætorian præfect under the emperor Maximun, put to death by order of the senate, i. 288.

Vitellius, emperor, his character, 1, 128.

Vangis, general of the Barbarians under Theodatus king of Italy, is by his troops declared king of Italy, vii. 222. He besieges Belisarius in Rome, 224. Is forced to raise the siege, 240. He is besieged by Belisarius in Ravenna, 253. Is taken prisoner in Ravenna, 257. Conforms to the Athanasian faith, and is honourably settled in Asia, 258. His embassy to Chosroes king of Persia, 300.

Vitruvius, the architect, his remarks on the buildings of Rome, v. 287.

Vizir, derivation of that appellation, ix. 284, note.

Ukraine, description of that country, 1. 396.

Uldin, king of the Huns, reduces and kills Gainas the Goth, v. 397.

Is driven back by the vigilance of the Imperial ministers, 117

Ulphilia, the apostle of the Goths, his pious labours, vi. 200. Propagated Arianism, 27s Uipian, the lawyer, placed at the head of the council of state, under the emperor Alexander Severus, 1, 234. Is murdered by the practorian guards, 219.

Focusion law abolished the right of female inheritance, vm. 76, How evided, 82.

Voltaire prefers the 1 docume of Constantine to the angel of Licinia , ni, 201, note. His reflections on the expences of a siege, vi. 416, note.

Vortigern, king of South Britain, his invitation of the Saxons for assistance against his enomies, vi. 381.

Vouce, emperor of China, his exploits against the Huns, iv. 564.

Upsal, anciently famous for its Gothic temple, i. 389.

Urban II, pope, patronises Peter the Hermit in his project for recovering the Holy Land, xi. 3. Exhorts the people to recusade, at the council of Clermont, 10.

Urban V., pope, removes the papal court from Avignon to Rome, xd. 305.

Urban VI., pope, his disputed election, xii. 308.

Ursacius, master of the offices under the emperor Valentiman, occasions a revolt of the Alemanin by his parsimony, iv. 277.

Ursicinus, a Roman general, his treacherous conduct to Sylvanus in Gaul, in. 191. Is superseded in his command over the Eastern provinces, 211. Is sent back again to conduct the war with Persia under Sabinan, ibid. Is again disgraced, 212.

Ursini, history of the Roman family of, xn. 520.

Ursulus, treasurer of the empire under Constantius, unjustly put to death by the tribunal of Chalcedon, 1v. 48.

Usury. See Interest of Money.